Emily Rooney New NQ Girls Soccer Coach

By BILL GRIFFIN

The interview began with a statement Emily Rooney has heard more often than she has heard her own name in recent weeks.

"You sure have big shoes to fill."

She knows this well. Rooney succeeds Paul Bregoli as the head girls soccer coach at North Quincy this fall. Bregoli won 210 games and made the tournament 16 times in 21 years. Last year, the Red Raiders went 12-5-4 and lost to powerful Newton South in the first round of the tournament. He was 40-0-1 in his career against Quincy. This is not an easy act to follow.

"I have heard about the shoes I'm supposed to fill," she smiled. "I'm not even going to try. What Paul did was amazing. We'll have the same expectations, but we'll try to meet them in a new way. I'll bring my own approach to the team."

She is well qualified for the challenge. She was a standout player at Thayer Academy and St. Anselm's College. Rooney graduated from St. Anselm's in 2013. She coached JV soccer and JV girls hockey at Thayer. Rooney was also an assistant varsity coach in soccer and girls hockey.

Rooney was a captain at Thayer. She won the Coaches Award and the Unsung Hero Award for her team. Rooney started 31 games in three years at St. Anselm's. She was fifth on the team in scoring as a sophomore.

She also did far more than just play soccer games. Rooney was active in the Team Impact program at St. Anselm's which serves the community. She became friends with a young blind girl named Josie. Rooney brought Josie to the games and practices. Josie became an official member of the team. She wore Rooney's jersey and number. The experience gave Rooney a perspective which will serve her well as a coach.

"Josie had an amazing voice, so she sang the National Anthem before our games. It meant so much to her," said Rooney. "Playing sports in college can be draining. It's more like a job sometimes. It's not the easiest thing to do, balancing sports and school. Then you meet someone like Josie, and you realize how lucky you are. You understand that there are people who would give anything to step onto a soccer field. It makes you appreciate everything you have."

She also volunteered her time at North before the season began last year. She is young, enthusiastic, and she has experience playing and coaching at a high level. This is a good fit for North.

"I think she'll be a good coach. I think she will be an old-school coach," said Bregoli. "She worked with us last year. She has a good knowledge of the game. She played at a high level. St. Anselm's is in an excellent conference. I think she will relate well to the girls."

North was a senior team last year led by Marissa McGue, Julia O'Donnell, Molly Donahue and Molly Kate Cannon. However, there is returning talent. Senior goalie Shannan Kennedy is a four-year starter who holds the school record for shutouts with 28, including 14 in her junior year. Mandy Hazelton (midfield), Jill Hallisey (midfield), Kerin Coleman (defense), and Ciara Viscione (defense) are all solid varsity players.

"I know the girls pretty well. I had a chance to work with them in the pre-season last year," said Rooney "I have all the confidence in the world in them. They have talent. They have faith in themselves and each other as a team. That's the most important thing I want to stress."

Her coaching philosophy is shaped by the work ethic which made her a fine player.

"I believe it starts with every practice. I want the players to come to every practice and give 110 per cent," she said. "I want them to bring that same attitude to the games. I want them to expect to win, but more important than the winning is the effort. That's what I want to see."

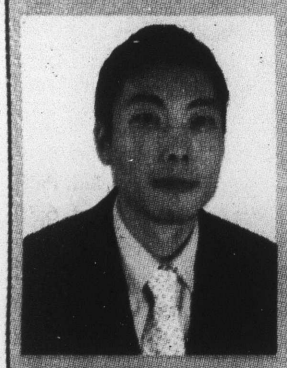

Rooney believes in setting goals. She believes it starts with individual responsibility.

"Team goals are important, but I want the players to set individual goals," she said. "I want them to commit to working on every aspect of their games. I want them to challenge themselves. If they do this and they improve, they will bring a skill-set to the table which will make us a better team."

North is in a brutal league. The Red Raiders play Scituate twice. They face Duxbury, Hingham, and Whitman-Hanson. These are four schools who routinely challenge for state titles. Rooney is confident her team can play with the best.

"The key is to get the commitment from each player to be the best she can be. If we get that, I'm confident about what we can accomplish as a team," said Rooney.

Quincy Militia Cruise Past Colts, Improve To 5-2

By TREVOR WENNERS

A win is a win, right?

The Quincy Militia should be thrilled that it boasts a 5-2 record with three games remaining in its regular-season schedule after a 32-16 victory over the visiting Boston Colts on Saturday in Eastern Football League action at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The only problem for the Militia is the sense of urgency and attention to detail was lacking from the start. The Militia was victimized by too many penalties, mental mistakes and missed opportunities.

The winless Colts (0-7) came in with a nothing-to-lose attitude. The squad sent many of its players out on both sides of the ball with only a 38-man roster, and gave Quincy everything it could handle.

There were definitely some positives for the Militia, as quarterback Drew Bolton went 6 of 13 for 114 yards and 3 TDs. Other strong performances came from tight end Crystopher Jackson (2 receptions, 40 yards, 2 TDs), running back Ernie Jones (43 yards receiving, 17 yards rushing, 1 TD reception), running back Darryl Cyprien (7 rushes, 40 yards), defensive back Sherod Heyword (1 INT) and Chris O'Connell (1 INT).

The Militia never trailed in the game, but the letdown in energy was something that caught the attention of Head Coach Vaughn Driscoll.

"We came out flat," said Driscoll. "I knew it from the start. When we were lined up in warm-ups I saw it in our eyes. (The Colts) physically handed it to us tonight, physically handed it to us. If they had 45 to 50 guys that score is probably going to be different. We settled down in the second half and we got a little more control. We came out flat and you cannot. This is what they call a trap game in the NFL and college. You cannot come out flat against anybody in this EFL."

The Militia took an early 3-0 lead on a 33-yard field goal by Chris Davison with 6:20 left in the first quarter. Bolton posted a crucial 17-yard run on the drive, bringing the hosts to the Colts' 23-yard line.

The Colts began their first drive of the game at their own 1. Tevin Regis was tackled in the end zone by the Militia defense on a third and 9 from the 2, resulting in a safety and a 5-0 advantage with 3:38 remaining in the first.

The Militia returned the ensuing punt to the Colts' 42. Two plays later, Bolton recorded a 43-yard TD pass to Jones, and then Davison added the PAT, giving the hosts a 12-0 advantage with 59.6 seconds left in the opening frame.

The Colts embarked on a four-play, 40-yard drive, culminating with a 21-yard TD pass by quarterback Ray Henderson to Regis with 12:34 left in the second. Henderson found tight end Bryan Douyon for the 2-point conversion, trimming the deficit to 12-8.

The Militia and Colts went three-and-out on their next two possessions, respectively.

With two minutes remaining in the half, the Militia started a drive from the Colts' 25. Three plays into the drive, Bolton connected with wide receiver Robinson Cyprien for a 15-yard TD pass, giving the Militia an 18-8 advantage with 1:05 left.

The Militia defense came out with a purpose in the third quarter, as it forced the Colts to go three-and-out on their first possession. Quincy responded emphatically, as Bolton fired a 26-yard TD pass to Jackson on a third and 18 with 9:49 left in the third. Davison added the PAT, giving the Militia a 25-8 advantage.

"For some reason, the defenses do not follow (Jackson)," said Driscoll. "He sneaks around, finds the back of the end zone and he waits. For some reason, they do not cover him. I like that. I hope they continue that because it is working for our advantage."

Militia quarterback William Rondo was intercepted by Henderson on a fourth and 6 from the Colts' 26. The Colts started their drive from the Quincy 22 with 13:12 left in the game, and proceeded to find the back of the end zone on a 22-yard pass from Henderson to Regis. Henderson connected with Douyon for the 2-point conversion, making the score 25-16 with 13 minutes remaining.

The Colts had another glimpse of hope, as Davison missed a 30-yard field goal with 4:41 left for the Militia, giving the visitors the ball at their own 20. Quincy erased any hope of a comeback, as defensive end Peter Cedrone sacked Henderson on a fourth and 6 with 2:34 left on the Colts' 18.

Rondo connected on a 14-yard TD pass to Jackson on fourth and 6 with 2:02 left. Davison added the PAT, giving the hosts a 32-16 edge.

Driscoll spoke about the decision to send Rondo out in the second half.

"I talked to Rondo before the game because I did not think he was dressing today," he said. "Coach (Eric) Kraft said, 'Rondo wanted to see how his thumb was (and) give it a look.' So, we went with Drew to start. In the second half, we went with Rondo just to see how his thumb was. He did all right. He threw the ball OK but I told him he was crazy. I said, 'I am sure your wife told you that you were crazy to step on this field tonight with that thumb being like that.' He is a competitor. He is hungry. He knows what we have here. He works hard and that is why he wants to be out here."

Now, the Militia will have to decide whether Bolton or Rondo will start at quarterback against the Marshfield Hurricanes (0-7) at Marshfield High School on Saturday at 7 p.m.

"That is something that is going to be determined during the week," said Driscoll. "(The) coaches are going to have a meeting during the week with the Players General Manager and that is one of the discussions besides a few other items too."

The Militia defeated the Hurricanes, 20-14, in their season opener on July 9 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The upcoming game will be pivotal for playoff positioning.

"It is a big game for us," said Driscoll. "We need to win that game. We want to win that game. We do not want to finish No. 5 or 6 in the standings, and have one of the last two spots and not host a home (playoff) game. We want to finish in the top-three so we host a playoff game. The only way to do that is definitely win two out of the last three games to host a playoff game. You lose two out of the three then you are probably not going to host, you are probably going to be on the road. You do not want to be on the road. I want to be here in Quincy. It is where I was born and raised."

Mark Monahan Selected For Oldtime Baseball Game

Mark Monahan is only 16 years old but you could call him an "old timer."

The North Quincy High School junior has been invited to play in the Oldtime Baseball Game today (Thursday) at St. Peter's Field on Sherman Street in North Cambridge.

Pre-game ceremonies begin at 7 p.m. Admission is free.

Monahan, a varsity pitcher for Red Raider head coach Matt Edgerly, was selected for a roster spot in the game by event organizer and Boston Herald sports columnist Steve Buckley.

Buckley had the chance to see Monahan pitch during a Yawkey League game this summer and invited him to participate at this year's Oldtime Baseball Game. Monahan will represent a Jewish barn team from South Philly called the SPHA's.

The game is billed as a celebration of our national pastime. The Oldtime Baseball Game began in 1994 and has grown considerably over the years, yet has remained loyal to its mission of offering a glimpse of what it was like in the old days, when hundreds of fans would turn out to root for their "town" team in various local semipro leagues.

"What makes the Oldtime Baseball Game so special is our dazzling collection of flannel uniforms that represent virtually every era in baseball history," Buckley said. "Used just once a year for the Oldtime Baseball Game, the uniforms include such long-ago teams as the Boston Braves, St. Louis Browns and Brooklyn Dodgers. Teams from the old Negro Leagues are represented by the Kansas City Monarchs, Homestead Grays and Baltimore Elite Giants. Cuba is represented by the legendary Cienfuegos Elephantes.

"We even have a uniform from a team that never actually existed: The New York Knights, for whom Robert Redford's Roy Hobbs character played in 'The Natural,'" Buckley added.

Players from the game are chosen from colleges and universities from the Boston area, with an occasional high school player or retired big-leaguer added to the mix. Over the years, former Red Sox pitchers Oil Can Boyd and Jim Corsi have played in the game, as has former New York Yankee Mike Pagliarulo.

More than 25 participants in the Oldtime Baseball Game have gone on to play professional baseball, including former Northeastern University star Carlos Pena of Haverhill, the first representative of our game to play Major League Baseball. Pena now plays for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

"But the Oldtime Baseball Game is, and always will be, a charity event," Buckley said. "Since we work so hard each year to gather more than 1,000 people to watch our game, it just makes sense to use the event to raise money for a worthy cause."

This year's game is being played as a fundraiser for "Boston vs. Bullies," a program sponsored by the Sports Museum. Boston vs. Bullies (bostonvsbullies.org) is an award-winning educational program that leverages the power and example of Boston sports to help stop bullying in our schools and in our community.

MATT MONAHAN, 16, a junior at North Quincy High School, will suit up and play in the Oldtime Baseball Game Thursday.

Architecture 'Olympics' Held In Quincy

Wessling Architects recently held the first World Architecture Olympics in their office at 1250 Hancock Ave. in Quincy. The games were part of a three-year program in leadership training to redesign the culture of the firm into a more innovative and effective work environment.

Stephen J. Wessling, founder and chief architect of the firm, invited Nitsan Gaibel, a leadership coach, to create a three-year program that would train Wessling and his team to participate as leaders who take risks and create systems.

All through 2016 Nitsan has been conducting monthly trainings with Wessling Architects staff. For this month's Olympic event Wessling divided his staff of 20 into three groups. The challenge: choose a single issue you want to solve in the firm and propose a solution. Each group chose a group leader and formulated a solution. Nitsan, the coach and referee, chose one group as gold winners--and was overruled by all present--who said that all three groups deserve gold.

"This Architecture Olympics was the most enjoyable and productive training we have had," Wessling said. "It revealed key issues in how we communicate and listen to each other that we will continue to develop."

"We will be sharing our template of games that build leadership with any organization interested--especially architectural firms," added Nitsan.

'In Safe Hands' Author At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Retiree Association, in conjunction with the Quincy Council on Aging, will present a program featuring author Michael H. Cunningham entitled "In Safe Hands" Wednesday, Sept. 14 at 1:30 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy.

Cunningham is the author of In Safe Hands, a compilation of stories about the day-to-day activities experienced by inspectors in the United States Customs Service.

Call 617-376-1506 to register for this presentation.

Light refreshments will be served.

No fee charged for this event.

Schools To Test Water For Lead, Copper

for the heavy metals.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the city is participating in the state program as a precaution, and has not received any complaints about the quality of water in its schools.

"We're really responding to the state initiative," he said.

Quincy is one of 51 communities to receive its water from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. Koch said the water Quincy receives from the MWRA's Quabbin Reservoir in Central Massachusetts is of high quality. Lead in the water, he stated, would most often come from a building's internal plumbing and not the MWRA or city water lines.

"In some old homes and some old buildings, there might be some lead pipes and soldering," Koch said.

The mayor said homes and buildings, including schools, have been spot tested for the lead and copper in the past.

Water with lead concentrations in excess of 15 parts per billion is considered unsafe, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Water with copper concentrations in excess of 1.3 parts per million is likewise considered unsafe by the EPA.

Health Department Issues Rabies Alert

Parents should also teach their children to avoid wildlife, stray animals and all other animals they do not know.

If a resident comes in contact with a dead, sick or injured wild animal, do not handle them – report them to the animal control officer instead. Avoid direct contact if you must handle the animal by using heavy gloves, sticks or other available tools.

Other steps Scheele recommended include:

• Make sure pets are vaccinated against rabies, and their shots are up to date. All cats, dogs and ferrets must be vaccinated against the disease by law. It is against the law to keep wild animals – such as skunks or raccoons – as pets. There are no rabies vaccines available for most wild species.

• Feed pets indoors and keep them inside at night. If pets are outside during the day, keep them on a leash or fenced in so they cannot wander.

• Fasten trashcan lids tightly and store trash and garbage in durable covered containers. Garbage can attract wild and domestic animals looking for an easy meal.

• Cap chimneys with screens and block openings in attics, cellars and porches to keep wild animals like bats, raccoons and skunks out of homes. If a resident has a bat in their home, they should talk with a professional about bat-proofing their house.

DPW Flushing Hydrant On 20 Streets Thursday machines), you can prevent discolored water from entering your household plumbing system altogether.

If you encounter discolored water following hydrant flushing, run the cold water taps only, for 5 to 15 minutes or until water clears, which will allow discolored water to work its way out of your household plumbing system. Do not use your hot water faucets to prevent discolored water from entering your hot water system. If you do experience discolored water when using your hot water, flush in the same manner as the cold system.

Do not do laundry while or shortly after flushing occurs. The discolored water can sometimes stain fabrics. Wait until water runs clear at your taps before using your washing machine, and wash a load of dark clothes first. If laundry appears to be stained, keep articles wet. Do Not Dry. Rewash the load using a stain/rust remover (such as a product called "Rust Out"). Do Not Use Bleach on stained laundry as bleach will "set" the stain.

If, after flushing your water, pressure or volume seems low, clean faucet screens to remove silt and mineral sediment that could be obstructing water flow.

The DPW apologizes to those affected for any inconvenience that the flushing may cause and thanks you for your understanding during this temporary nuisance. If you have any questions or problems during the flushing program, call the DPW office at (617) 376-1910.

behind her looking back and forth as a look out.

The victim stated she then observed that Ms. Young was holding a small knife. Ms. Young stated to the victim, "I'm not going to hurt you." The victim tried to calm down the suspect down, opened her satchel, and showed Ms. Young the contents of her satchel (rosary beads, a key, and a small momento). Ms. Young told the victim, "I guess I'll take the rosary beads." The victim then fled the area and ran back to the convent.

The victim provided Officer Wood with a description of the two suspects, which was broadcast to area units. Officer Wood then began to search for the suspects. As he was driving, he observed two females exiting the back seat a vehicle which was stopped on Phipps Street. Both females matched the description provided by the victim. Officer Wood encountered both females and advised them that they were suspects in an earlier robbery to which both denied any involvement.

Officer Parisi, who had arrived on scene to assist Officer Wood, searched the suspects and located a small locking knife, 6 cellphones of various makes and models, and a checkbook belonging to a resident of Weymouth, but did not find the rosary beads.

The victim responded to Officer Wood's location and positively identified both suspects, as well as the knife that was used in the robbery.

DISC DEGENERATION

As it goes with the rest of the body, the intervertebral discs naturally break down as we age. This deterioration, known as "disc degeneration," is due to the cumulative effects of normal, everyday activity and can cause pain in the neck and/or back areas. These are symptoms that are experienced by nearly half of the population age 40 years or older. For those over 80, the incidence of these symptoms is 80 percent. With this in mind, it is important to understand the risk factors that are most apt to be associated with disc degeneration, which include being female, having knee osteoarthritis, and suffering from low back pain. Anyone with the above-mentioned symptoms in particular should consult with the chiropractor.

Maybe it's time to give chiropractic health care a try. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will only accept you as a patient if we sincerely feel we can help you. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we start by listening. We listen to what you want to accomplish with your health and body. for permitting, and that will take a few months. Once permitting is complete, construction will begin. The timeline for that is to have the new ramp ready for the 2017 boating season."

The $225,000 grant awarded Aug. 18 will go towards the redesign of the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, located at 137 Bay View Ave. Laforest said she hopes to gather input from various stakeholders to help determine the design of the new facility.

"We want stakeholder groups to come together to say what is it that we need to design, and what do we want to incorporate into a new maritime center," she said. "We'll have some meetings. We'll have stakeholder groups come together.

"Right now the Houghs Neck Community Council, for example, has some of their storage there, so we'll be working with the Quincy police marine unit, the Houghs Neck Community Council, neighborhood stakeholder groups as well as primarily focusing on the recreational boating community."

Laforest described the current building as a "cement bunker with no water view," and said water infiltration has been problematic.

"There is a lot of water infiltration where the Quincy police marine unit stores all of their equipment on the lower level – there are a lot of moisture issues. When you're storing millions of dollars of technology and underwater sonar, you don't want the gear stored that way," Laforest said.

"This building was not designed for what we're using it for. It was an outboard repair shop. It's at the point it needs replacement."

Mayor Thomas Koch, as part of the capital plan he unveiled in May, included the acquisition of three homes and the Louis parking lot on nearby Sea Street as part of his proposal for the public landing. Laforest said those plans are only conceptual at this point, because no funding request has gone before the City Council since the capital plan was unveiled. The acquisition of the three homes in the public landing parking lot, she said, would improve the parking situation there.

"I think the one thing to talk about, particularly when you're talking about the home acquisition, is when boats are using this ramp they are literally kissing the property lines of these abutting homes," Laforest said. "The home acquisition would allow us to widen the road, bury the utilities and give better flexibility for access to the trailer parking lot.

"It's difficult…We all joke about the entertainment value of watching people launch and pull out their boats. Our ramp in particular has difficult conditions. This is going to help alleviate that for the recreational boater and make it a better experience."

Laforest said she has heard some concerns about potential traffic impacts the plans for the maritime center and public landing. She said Quincy residents would not suddenly decide to purchase a boat once the project is completed.

"There is a limited amount of boats in the city. I don't think we're going to be seeing people running out buying boats because the ramp has more hours. You've got a capacity of boats in the city and even in the surrounding communities," Laforest said. "Now, it gives more flexibility. The people who use our boat ramp are going to continue to use our boat ramp. Now they have a longer window to use the ramp."

"A lot of our boats are on moorings," she continued. "We do have people who come to Quincy and launch, but I don't think we're going to be seeing people come down from Salem to launch their boat in Quincy. I don't think it's that type of draw."

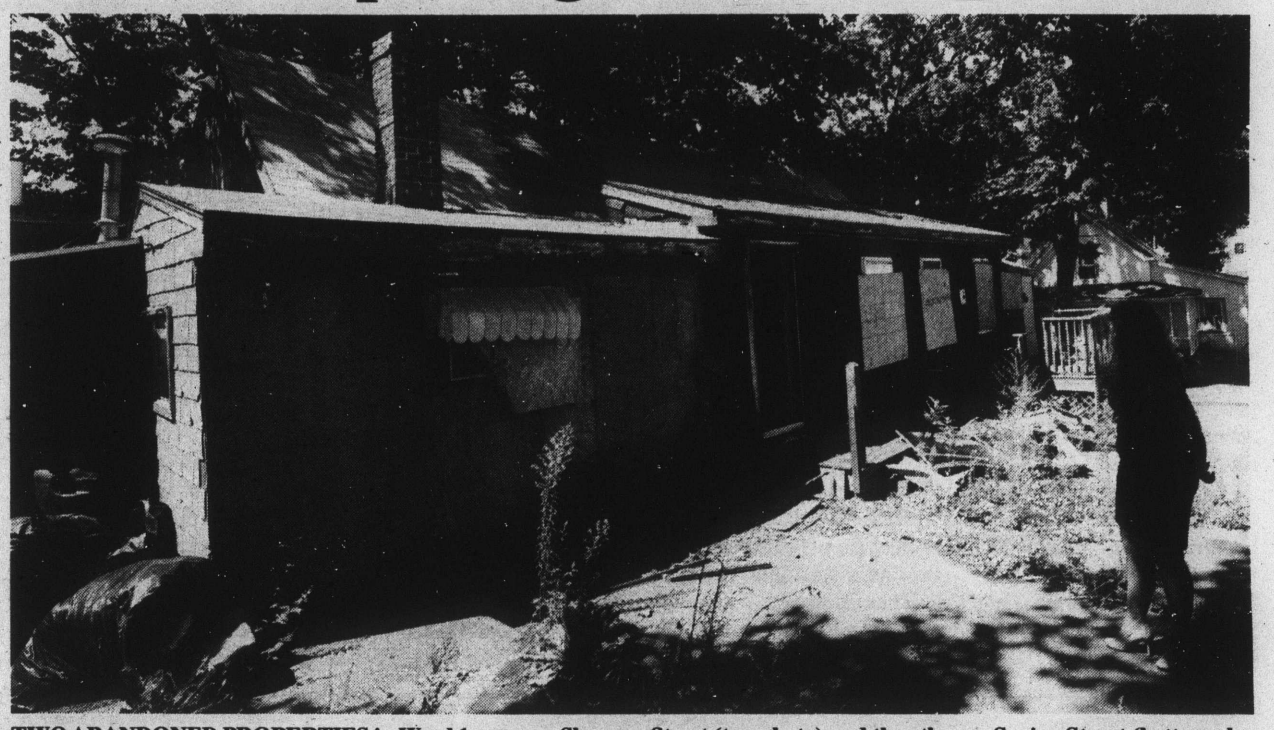

Laforest added that she would work with the city's new traffic, parking, alarm and lighting department to get a better understanding of the traffic impact.

"I do think it's important to get a better understanding of what potential impacts to traffic will be, and I will be working with the new TPAL department to get some data for the neighborhood," she said.

Another issue Laforest has dealt with in her ward is blighted properties. She identified a pair of houses as chronically blighted – one on Spring Street and another on Shennen Street. The owner of the latter has filed for a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals – Laforest said they had one but it expired.

Laforest said Jay Duca, the director of the Inspectional Services Department, has looked at taking the properties into receivership as one way to end the blight.

"Jay Duca in inspectional services has brought the attorney general down to Houghs Neck and to other properties in the city to consider taking these properties into receivership because of the lack of progress and lack of response from the homeowners. I believe that was kind of the impetus for Shennen Street refilling for their zoning application," Laforest said.

"I know that inspectional services has spent a lot of time. I've had a lot of conversations with [Duca] and the code enforcement officer about this, and to me it's what other proactive, aggressive strategies can we deploy? I don't necessarily want their moneys and fines, I want their compliance.

"But I wonder if the money is what gets the compliance at this point. Let's pilot something – show up in Ward 1 every Monday, every day for 30 days or whatever it's going to be, and just start ticketing these people."

"I'd like to have a more proactive approach," Laforest added. "Is there an opportunity for the city to demolish these structures? What tools or policies can we change that gives us more authority...They're abandoned, they're vacant, they've been neglected to the point that I'm concerned about public safety. We've had some instances where there's been windows broken, there's been vandalism, there's been teens breaking into the house."

Many residents of Ward 1 – which includes Adams Shore, Germantown, Houghs Neck, Merrymount and parts of Quincy Center and Quincy Point – by FEMA flood maps that were enacted in June 2014 and added 1,400 properties citywide into flood plains. The city appealed those maps, and in January 2015 the federal agency accepted the appeal, and between 550 and 650 properties were to be removed from the flood plains once new maps were issued, and another 1,300 were to be moved into lower risk zones.

Nineteen months later, FEMA has yet to release the revised maps, leaving homeowners in limbo.

"I think one of the biggest frustrations in government sometimes is the time things take," Laforest said. "I have been – and many homeowners who have been positively affected by the changes – waiting, waiting, waiting. When is the city going to get the maps officially back from FEMA, when can we get these voted and accepted, and when can we put this to rest?

"The biggest, most important thing of this was getting the maps correct, and that's tough when you're having something enacted at the federal level that has such a local impact. As a ward councillor, I'm the elected official closest to the residents.

"It's been an issue that is very important to my ward and I've gone out and educated myself on. I've gone to seminars on it. I have done everything I can to increase my education so I can guide these homeowners."

Laforest has also helped lead the effort to construct a new dog park in Quincy, which could also coincide with a new animal shelter.

The city is applying for a grant from a private foundation that would pay for the park, and as a prerequisite, the organization asks that communities allow off leash areas as part of their municipal ordinances. Laforest introduced a new ordinance, approved by the council in June, which allows the Park and Recreation Board to designate areas where dogs can be off leash.

Laforest said she did so because she has to take her family's dog to Hingham or Milton when she wants to let her play off leash.

"I'm leaving the city to bring my dog to places so I can have an enjoyable walk with her," Laforest said. "We need a space for residents who want that experience without leaving Quincy. It's ridiculous that here I am driving over the Fore River Bridge to walk my dog in Hingham."

"We're at the point we're applying for funding for the park, and working with the mayor's office," Laforest added. "We've talked about where this should go. I don't think he's ready to announce that yet, but we've looked at areas that are open space areas – not necessarily converting a park space, but looking at open space areas – and possibly incorporating walking trails as well, building out some walking trails that would be allowed off leash.

"The other piece of this is potentially with the Quincy Animal Shelter. I've been on the committee working with the architect about designing the new animal shelter and how we can incorporate these pieces.

"I think it's important for our city to be more pet friendly."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, Aug. 18, at approximately 10:05 p.m., Officers Jay Borden and Christopher Bulger were dispatched to an apartment complex on Willard Street for an unknown type of disorder.

Upon arrival, the officers could hear arguing coming from the apartment as they walked down the hall. After knocking on the door, a male opened the door. He appeared unsteady on his feet and spoke slurredly. In the background was a female sitting on a couch feeding an infant.

Officer Borden asked the male to join him in the hallway while Officer Bulger spoke with the female inside in order to get their accounts of what occurred. The male provided his name and date of birth at the officer's request but he did not have positive identification. He told Officer Borden his account: that his wife was upset that he had too much to drink which resulted in a verbal argument. He stated that it never became physical, adding, "I love my wife very much." He stated that he did not need any further Police services at this time.

Officer Bulger concluded his interview with the wife and then the officers exchanged information to determine what occurred. Officer Bulger said that the wife was upset because her husband was intoxicated on the one month anniversary of having their child. She stated that in her family the one month milestone is "a big deal and he decided to get drunk." She stated the following: it was just a verbal argument, she was not in fear of him, she did not want any further police services at this time and it was ok for him to stay there tonight.

LT. DAN MINTON

After gathering basic information for the report, the officers left the residence. While at the Police station typing his report, Officer Borden was unable to identify the male based on the information he provided. While attempting to enter the infant's information for the report, the QPD in-house computer provided the male's date of birth from a past incident. This date of birth differed from what the male initially provided.

The accurate information revealed that the male had a default warrant out of Hingham District Court. To be sure, Officer Borden checked the driver's license picture and confirmed that it was the person he interviewed in the apartment.

Officer Dan Francis joined Officer Borden at the apartment in an attempt to place the male into custody. This time, the female answered the door and the officers advised her why they were there. She first stated that he left but allowed the officers entry to ensure he wasn't there.

The officers were concerned that she was under duress and in fear. Officer Borden opened a closet door and found the male naked hiding in the closet. The male was cooperative as he got dressed; however, once the officers placed the male in the cruiser, he began banging his head on the partition between the front and back seats.

After numerous self initiated blows, Officer Borden was able to get him to stop. He was examined by EMTs at the station and medically cleared. The male then made the choice of not providing personal information at booking so he was placed in a cell. (This happens on occasion and the arrestee seems to think that we will just let him out. Until we have the required information, the arrestee remains in custody.)

Soon after, the male, a 25-year-old Quincy resident was booked. Nice Work!

LOCK YOUR CAR DOORS! The week before school starts there seems to be an uptick in car breaks. A good habit is to check your home doors before you go to bed and hit your remote to the car(s). The clear majority of car breaks are not physically breaking into the car. It is car doors unlocked. The rare actual car break/window smash is when there is something inside the vehicle that has value and is left in plain sight.

Board Hears Updates On Villa Rosa, Beachcomber Sites

By SCOTT JACKSON

The future of the Villa Rosa, a longtime Adams Street eatery, remains unknown, and the new owners of the former Beachcomber on Quincy Shore Drive say they plan to build a 50-seat restaurant on site.

The Board of License Commissioners sought updates on the status of those two restaurants – as well as two others – at its Aug. 16 meeting. All four restaurants hold liquor licenses.

The Villa Rosa, an Italian restaurant at 705 Adams St., closed for renovations earlier this summer. The eatery had been open on site for 65 years, and was operated by the same family that originally owned it.

Henry Levin, an attorney for Villa Rosa manager Maria Massey, said business at the restaurant had declined, and the building itself was in poor conditions.

"Unfortunately the business isn't doing what it was doing before," Levin said. "Also, it came to their knowledge that the building itself was in deplorable condition. They've gone to the building department and they're doing renovations throughout the whole building."

Levin said the future of the restaurant is uncertain.

"The question has come up as to whether they're going to reopen. Right now, we don't know, very honestly. It's a possibility," he said. "Or, there is a possibility of another restaurant."

Levin added that the kitchen equipment was not removed during the renovations and remains in place. The site, he said, would be a "good location, rental wise," if something else came up. Levin asked that the board allow Villa Rosa to hold onto the liquor license until its future is determined.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, chairman of the licensing board, said the restaurant's owner would need a more detailed plan by the end of the year, when all liquor licenses are up for renewal. The state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission, he said, would not allow the city to permit the Villa Rosa to hold onto the license without knowing more about its future.

Levin said his client was aware of the deadline looming at the end of the year.

The Beachcomber, located at 797 Quincy Shore Dr., closed in the fall of 2015. The music venue first opened its doors in 1959.

In December of last year, the Board of License Commissioners approved a transfer of the Beachcomber's liquor license to Beachcomber Bounty Inc., a group of investors led by Quincy resident Christopher Carrigg.

Dylan Sanders, an attorney for Carrigg, told the board Aug. 16 a restaurant is planned on site, and the investment group is set to purchase on the property Aug. 29.

Sanders said the new restaurant would seat approximately 50 customers. He said the project on site was delayed because the new building had to be scaled down in size.

"We're very excited about developing this property and reopening as a restaurant," Sanders said. "It will be a new building, a new facility, roughly on the same footprint slightly oriented a little differently to take advantage of the nice sightlines that property offers."

"Originally, we had a larger plan," he continued. "Economics plus in particular the parking simply didn't work, so we had to redesign the project, but we remain very excited about it."

The licensing board had also sought an update on the status of Basta Pasta. The restaurant, formerly located at 150 Hancock St., closed earlier this year and its owner received permission in April from the Planning Board to raze the eatery and construct a 13-unit residential building on site.

A representative from Basta Pasta was not at the Aug. 16 licensing board meeting. William Keener, an attorney for restaurant owner Bledar "Reno" Huxhallari, told the Planning Board in January his client planned to reopen the establishment elsewhere in the city if the project were approved.

Additionally, the board had sought an update on the liquor license previously held by Hong Kong Eatery, formerly located at 1515 Hancock St.

The board in October 2015 denied the request from Judy Chen of Tiger Rose LLC to transfer the license to the proposed Shabu J. Japanese Restaurant at 663 Hancock St., the site of a former bridal shop on the corner of Beale Street. Chen appealed the city's decision to the ABCC, which upheld the denial of the license. Scheele on Aug. 16 said Chen's attorney informed him the ABCC's decision would be appealed to Superior Court.

In other business Aug. 16, the Board of License Commissioners:

Approved the transfer of the all alcohol license previously held by Crystal Jade, 706 Hancock St., to Winsor Dim Sum House, which will open in the same site. The location was previously home to the Alumni Café, which closed in 2014 after 54 years in business.

Approved the transfer of the licenses held by the Hannaford supermarket at 475 Hancock St., including a retail wine and malt license, to Big Y. The North Quincy store is one of eight local Hannafords being sold to Big Y following the merger of the parent companies of Hannaford and Stop & Shop. Big Y, based in Springfield, will purchase the store Sept. 13 and reopen it Sept. 16.

Approved a transfer of the 48 hackney licenses held by Yellow Cab to Abdellatif Naanaa. Naanaa said he has purchased Yellow Cab's assets and will relocate the business within 30 days; Yellow Cab's headquarters at 91 McGrath Highway has been sold to a separate owner.

Granted permission to the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, 27 Glendale Rd., to construct a patio space. The outdoor patio, which is for members only and not functions, will have seating for 16 people at four tables.

Approved in a 3-2 vote a request to open a new restaurant, known as the Hermit Crab, at 22 Brook St. Scheele and Police Chief Paul Keenan opposed the proposal because of concerns over parking and traffic.

Granted a one-day extension of premise to Louis, 1269 Sea St., for Sept. 10. The restaurant sought the extension of premise to coincide with the Houghs Neck ChowdaFest set for the same day.

Approved a one-day alcohol permit for Stran Promotional Solutions, 2 Heritage Dr., for a private client open house on Sept. 15.

Approved a request for a garage repair license from KC Auto Center at 59 School St.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Vine, Splendor of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

Grateful thanks. - A.O.S. 8/25

Up to 12 percent of Quincy's registered voters are expected to head to the polls next week as residents as across Massachusetts cast ballots in the state primary.

The state primary will be held this year on Thursday, Sept. 8. Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Crispo based her estimate on the turnout for the previous two state primaries held leading into presidential races. Quincy's turnout in 2008 was 13.68 percent; in 2012, turnout in the city was 9.15 percent.

Crispo said 626 absentee ballots had been cast as of Aug. 25, two weeks before the primary. In 2008, a total of 554 absentee ballots were cast; 610 total were cast before the 2012 primary. The deadline to apply for an

Planning Board Approves Quincy Ave. Townhouses

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board has signed off on a plan to tear down a pair of Quincy Avenue homes and construct 17 townhouses on site.

The board on Aug. 24 approved the proposal by Anthony and Lawrence Agnitti to tear down the three-family home at 150 Quincy Ave. and the two-family home next door at 154 Quincy Ave.

The project also requires approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

In place of the two homes, the Agnittis aim to construct the 17 townhouses on a 36,000 square foot lot, running roughly perpendicular to Quincy Avenue. The townhouses would be contained within five buildings – one building with five units and the remaining four buildings with three units each.

The ground level of each townhouse would feature a two-car garage, with two levels of living space above – each unit would have two bedrooms and 1.5 bathrooms. An additional five parking spaces would be available on site outside the townhouses.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall voiced his support for the townhouse project during the Planning Board meeting.

"Those of you that have driven by Quincy Avenue, you know that those two properties particularly leave a lot to be desired," Croall said. "You're going to be presented here with some high-end residential construction that will certainly be an improvement to the area, at least aesthetically.

Sheriff Bellotti Warns Residents Of Telephone Scams

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti is warning citizens about a number of telephone scams targeting residents of Norfolk County.

In recent weeks the Norfolk Sheriff's Office has received dozens of calls from county residents who have received calls from fraudulent scam artists purporting to be deputy sheriffs. The individuals identify themselves as 'deputy sheriffs' working for the Norfolk Sheriff's Office and they attempt to extort money from residents by requesting payments from credit cards, gift cards or money pack cards under the threat of arrest.

These scams have been occurring in counties throughout the U.S. with many following a similar pattern. In most instances callers will identify themselves as deputy sheriffs and/or IRS agents and threaten arrest if they are not paid within a specified time period. Bellotti emphasized that "law enforcement agencies do not call people and demand payments from them under the threat of immediate arrest for failure to comply."

Many of these scammers tell the phone recipient that if payment is not made immediately, a deputy will be dispatched to their home and they will be arrested.

Bellotti also stated that "scams have been around for decades but with the immergence of new technology, scam artists have become adept at utilizing new technology to assist in giving the con artist legitimacy." In many cases these scam artists use software which causes the recipients caller ID to indicate the call is originating from the Norfolk Sheriff's Office in Dedham. The Norfolk Sheriff's Office will never call an individual and demand money in exchange for cancelling an arrest warrant or avoiding jail time.

"In other cases, the caller may claim to be from or working with the Internal Revenue Service and demand payment often in the form of prepaid debit cards,

CRYSTAL CLEAR

The harder a watch's crystal is, the more resistant it will be to scratches that will obscure the watch face eventually. The hardest crystal material is "sapphire," which is generally reserved for the finest watches due to the expense of manufacturing. Sapphire crystal is composed of lab-grown sapphire that is nearly impossible to scratch. Another "hybrid crystal" is Sapphlex, composed of a thin sheet of sapphire crystal that is bonded on top of mineral crystal. These types of crystal also rarely scratch. Finally, there is "hardened mineral crystal," which is the most common type used on mid-range watches. With "K1" being the hardest, this crystal is hard, although not as hard as sapphire crystal.

Antique Fire Badge Up For Auction, 'Yakoo', Red Raiders Debate Rekindled

Two subjects to touch upon this week.

The first is a piece of Quincy Fire Department history that is up for auction today (Thursday).

The other topic stems from an op-ed that appears on Page 5 this week. The writer of the op-ed, Sherrie Noble of Weymouth, is asking the city to retire North Quincy High School's mascot, "The Yakoo," and the name "Red Raiders" because she believes the caricature and the nickname stereotype Native Americans.

'YAKOO'

On this topic, we want our readers to be aware that this newspaper does not share Ms. Noble's view. She visited our office last week and was kind and courteous in her introduction to us. She wanted to express her thoughts on the Yakoo and Red Raiders name and was invited to submit her own op-ed on the subject and her reasons. She has done so and her views are printed on Page 5.

We also informed her that the Yakoo is a beloved symbol held in high regard by the North Quincy High School community – most notably students, staff and alumni.

And as such her remarks will probably elicit responses – whether in favor of her argument to retire the mascot and team name – or in support to retain the Yakoo and Red Raiders.

The Quincy Sun will publish any responses – just as we did Ms. Noble's op-ed.

And we may also publish our own editorial on the subject at the appropriate time.

Ms. Noble's op-ed appears in its entirety on Page 5.

Those who would like to comment on the op-ed may submit a letter to the editor via email: thequincysun@verizon.net. Or by regular mail: The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169. Please include a day-time phone number so that we can verify the author.

IF YOU like Quincy history, have a connection to the Quincy Fire Department or perhaps both, you may be interested in an item up for auction today (Thursday).

A Quincy Fire Department badge dating back to perhaps the late 1880s will be auctioned off Thursday by Swinging Bridge Auctions, a family owned auction gallery located at 10 East Main St. in Huntington, Mass.

For more information on the badge, visit www.swingingbridgeauctions.com. To bid on the item call 413-667-4163.

The badge has the name "John W. Hall" and the letters "H & L" referring to "Hook and Ladder." There is also a sketch of a antique fire carriage with the Number 1 and Quincy inscribed on the badge itself.

The John W. Hall Hook & Ladder Company was the name of the new ladder company when it was formed in 1882. The ladder company is now referred to as Ladder 1.

John W. Hall served as fire chief three times when Quincy was still a town: 1871-1872, 1878-1883 and 1886-1888. The H & L company was named for him.

The badge that is being auctioned off is believed to have once belonged to a member of the Ladder Company.

According to Auctioneer David Baillargeon, this Quincy Fire Department badge was discovered by the Swinging Bridge Auction Company while visiting a home in Florence, Mass. The badge was actually found while the auction company was looking at antique bird books.

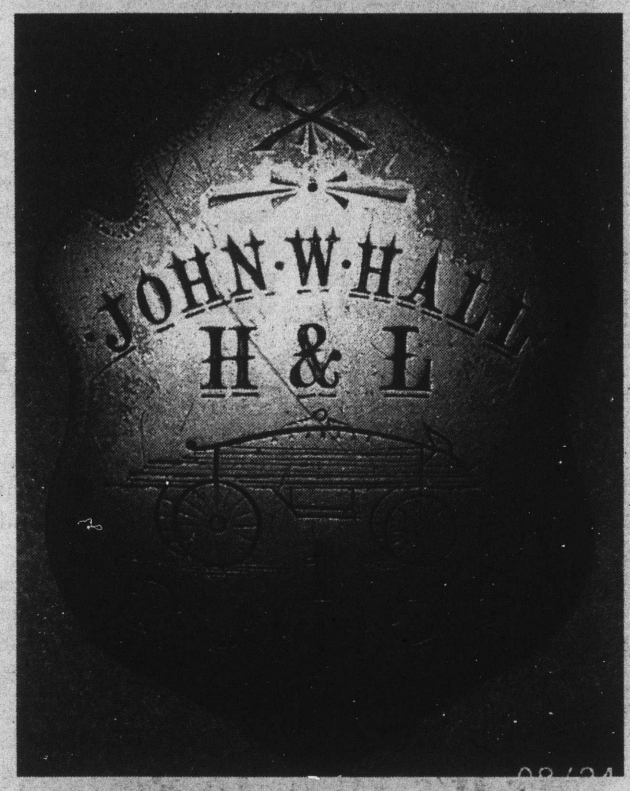

"The badge was on a shelf with the books," Baillargeon said in an email.

Hall was the Quincy "fire engineer" or "chief of the department" (and latter shortened to just fire chief) at the time of the Great Boston Fire of 1872. The fire caused $73.5 million in damage – one of most costly fire-related property losses in American history – and destroyed 776 buildings, most in the city's financial district.

However, one landmark building – the C.F. Hovey Company – was spared. The Summer Street structure was still standing after the devastating fire.

And credit Chief Hall for that.

According to a write up by the late Quincy historian H. Hobart Holly in the 1981 winter edition of the Quincy Historical Society newsletter, Hall's quick and enterprising thinking saved the building from ruin.

THIS ANTIQUE QUINCY FIRE DEPARTMENT badge is being auctioned off today (Thursday).

Here's Holly's account:

"The buyer for the blanket department store was the chief of the Quincy Fire Department and when the second alarm came, he brought his company into the city (Boston) and, without reporting at City Hall, made his way to the Hovey store. Forming his brigade, he took blankets from the store and covered the roofs and all the windows. Keeping these wet, and forming a bucket line to the roof, he was able to save the building."

Holly was not only a revered Quincy historian, he also had a quick wit. He ended his narrative on the Great Fire of Boston and Chief Hall with this sentence:

"We trust that C.F. Hovey Company was thankful that the Quincy Fire Chief was not the buyer in the necktie or handkerchief department."

By the way, Hall lived in a home on Hancock Street two doors south of Dimmock Street.

Baillargeon hopes the historic badge will generate interest from local bidders.

"It is the hope of the Auction Company that someone from the City of Quincy will be interested in coming to the Auction to bid on this historical fire item," he said.

Huntington is a small town located in Hampshire County near Springfield – a distance of about 118 miles from Quincy.

The auction begins at 6 p.m. Thursday evening.

For more information or to bid by phone call Lori or David at 413-667-4163.

WILLIAM APPLETON EPILOGUE: You may recall a recent column that chronicled the city's efforts to replace a memorial marker at the grave of William Appleton in Sailors Home Cemetery in Wollaston. Mr. Appleton was shot to death in Wollaston in broad daylight on Sept. 20, 1877 by a man named Michael Murphy.

The story, however, did not disclose what happened to Murphy.

David Allen, a history teacher at a boarding school and resident of Interlochen, Michigan, emailed us the other day with the answer to this mini mystery.

Allen came across a story in the Boston Post newspaper from that time that reported Mr. Murphy confessed to the crime and was sentence to life in prison.

So there you have it, readers. Case closed.

We appreciate David's research and reaching out to us with this information. By the way, David grew up in Quincy, still has family here, and once delivered The Quincy Sun as a youngster.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Sept. 18, 1793, George Washington lays the cornerstone to the United States Capitol. The building would take nearly a century to complete, as architects came and went, the British set fire to it, and it was called into use during the Civil War.

• On Sept. 16, 1908, Buick Motor Company head William Durant spends $2,000 to incorporate General Motors. Durant made his fortune building horse-drawn carriages, and in fact he hated cars -- he thought they were noisy, smelly and dangerous.

• On Sept. 14, 1927, dancer Isadora Duncan is strangled in France when the enormous silk scarf she is wearing gets tangled in the rear hubcaps of her open car. The scarf wound around the axle, tightening around Duncan's neck and dragging her from the car. She died instantly.

• On Sept. 17, 1965, four adventurous Englishmen arrive at the Frankfurt Motor Show in Germany after crossing the English Channel by Amphicar, an amphibious passenger car powered by a 43-horsepower Triumph Herald engine. Despite choppy waters and a flooded engine, the two vehicles made the crossing in about seven hours.

• On Sept. 15, 1978, boxer Muhammad Ali (born Cassius Marcellus Clay) defeats Leon Spinks to regain the world heavyweight boxing title. Ali had first won the title in 1964 at age 22, defeating Sonny Liston.

• On Sept. 12, 1993, the rebuilt Lacey V. Murrow Bridge over Lake Washington opens in Seattle. The old bridge was almost 2 miles long and floated on more than 20 hollow concrete pontoons. During repairs in 1990, the bridge broke apart and sank.

• On Sept. 13, 2004, TV talk-show host Oprah Winfrey gives a brand-new Pontiac G-6 sedan, worth $28,500, to all 276 members of her studio audience. However, the winners were left with a large bill: up to $6,000 in federal and state income taxes.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard reproduction showing the Boston Gear Works factory in Norfolk Downs. Having moved here from Boston into a small building in 1905, the company expanded and added several more buildings before the 1970s when it began shrinking its presence in Quincy. At its prime the company owned 24 acres of land in Norfolk Downs and had 3/4 million square feet of factory, warehouse and office space here. It sold the two-story buildings in the center to Shuster Research Laboratories in 1978. After 20 years those buildings were sold again and converted into condominiums known as Granite Lofts. Since then the company, like all its neighboring industrial companies, sold all of its property here. Some of the buildings in the top left of this view have been demolished but the top center will become the site of the new C-Mart grocery store. Founded in 1877, Boston Gear is still in business in Charlotte, North Carolina. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Says It's Time To Retire 'Yakoo' And 'Red Raiders'

By SHERRIE NOBLE

In a summer and year of violence nationwide arising from race based prejudice where far too many Americans, from praying parents to teachers to children to police officers, violently dying in our churches and on our streets it is time to ask a single question in Quincy:

Does Quincy, MA, the city and community formally approve and teach racism today, in 2016?

Sadly, the answer is yes. There is even official approval through the use of stereotyping. Happily, this can be changed. For the sake of all our children, for the sake of the community it must be changed.

Stereotyping as defined in the American Heritage® Dictionary is giving to a group a "fixed, unvarying form" and a stereotype is any "conventional…and oversimplified conception, opinion or image." Stereotypes always cause problems and when applied to any group of people create real harm and the potential for violence. This is especially true when the stereotype is race based, as recent history has shown. Stereotypes create problems because they limit a group of people to a single, usually untrue and frequently negative characteristic. Stereotypes hamper understanding and destroy mutual respect for the most simple reason imaginable: they are born from learned prejudices. Often the prejudice is not recognized, often it is taught in families and often it is excused in public as "just the truth" or "everyone knows this" or "it's always been this way" or "everyone loves it." My response to all these assertions is "Really? Please show me."

Today North Quincy High School, the School Board, staff, administration and even Quincy City Hall have put themselves front and center in this discussion with their continued use of the North Quincy High School sports teams name "Red Raiders" and mascot "Yakoo." I do know the history of "Yakoo" – Dr. Yacubian, now retired as a dentist, was a well-known football player on the "Red Raiders" team who is undoubtedly still proud to see his face on the team mascot even if he graduated in 1958 with the mascot reflecting the realities of that time frame, a time before our Civil Rights laws and voters rights bills were passed or even considered by most Americans, when segregation was widely accepted and schools were "separate but equal" in fact if not according to decisions by the US Supreme Court. In the past Yakoo survived various challenges. To both situations I say: "That was then, this is now."

It is my hope that the community of Quincy, the professional school personnel and administration, the elected officials, the students and even Dr. Yacubian himself can acknowledge and accept that change is always a fundamental part of life. Creating a new team identity can be exciting and engaging for NQHS students and the entire community.

Op Ed

No one can freeze time. Change can be a very good thing as well.

The truth is that today trademarked team identities are under serious legal challenge nationwide. Yakoo is trademarked, also indicating someone has a financial interest in perpetuating the image and team identity. The image and team identity teach NQHS students, the community and all the teams they play that racist stereotypes are acceptable and appropriate.

The racial nature of Yakoo is undeniable: buckskin fringed pants, moccasins, raised tomahawk, headband with a feather inserted in the traditional tribal manner, bare chest and arms prominently showcasing bright red skin. These combine to clearly indicate a violent, caricatured Native American fighter.

The "Raiders" in the name traces to an important event in Quincy history. Henry Adams' eldest son Lieutenant Henry Adams, son of the first Henry Adams from England, was shot to death by "Indian" raiders during Metacomet's War in 1675 or '76. These are the ancestors of both Presidents Adams who are now buried with their wives in the crypt under United First Parish Church in Quincy. It is worth considering if Quincy is still remembering almost 350 years later the Lieutenant's death with a team identity tied to violence and a race based, primitive and demeaning mascot? This is not teaching history, it is revising and exploiting it.

The harm these stereotypes do to the Native American communities is real. According to Robert Roche, Native American activist "These awful and racist stereotypes create hostile environments from classrooms to playing fields to workplaces to boardrooms."

Yakoo will always be a part of Quincy's history. It is time he and the team name are retired with appropriate dignity as pieces from the past no longer having a place in the diverse, honorable city of Quincy today. As the future arrives with every new dawn Quincy, MA, a thriving, energetic modern city of the 21st century, can choose to do the right thing, bring the community together in creating a new, thrilling, strong and positive team identity at North Quincy High School.

Shea Keeps Them Guessing On Mayor Bid

By FRANK McCAULEY

The question of whether City Council President Charles L. Shea will run for mayor will apparently remain hot political conjecture until shortly before the time for filing nomination papers Sept. 10.

Shea said he would issue a statement Monday or Tuesday as to his political plans. At this point there are only two declared candidates for mayor, incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa and Louis Caruso, a laborer in the Park Department.

(Ed. Note: Council President Shea did announce for mayor, filed his papers, was nominated in the primary and lost to Della Chiesa in November.)

NORTH QUINCY BRANCH LIBRARY WINS APPROVAL AT PREVIEW OPENING

The new North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library stocked with 15,000 books won solid approval from guests at a preview opening.

The always popular pops concert and silent auction will be held in March and will reflect the many different sides of Quincy Choral Society.

The May concert will celebrate the 500th anniversary of Martin Luther and the Reformation, which sparked not only a religious movement but a desire for music that is accessible to both singer and audience. Tomato-Spinach-Basil Soup

By MARIE

Today's recipe is compliments of my niece, Jean, who made this delicious tomato-spinach-basil soup.

If you enjoy tomato soup I think you are going to like this with the added ingredients of spinach and basil. If you do not want to use the spinach then that will be fine also.

Tomato- Spinach-Basil Soup

Ingredients:

2 tablespoons butter
1 large yellow onion, chopped
1 teaspoon minced garlic (optional)
1 and 1/2 cups milk (you can use any kind including Lactaid, Soy, Almond, Coconut, etc.)
1 (28 ounce) can tomato puree
1 tablespoon white sugar (optional)
2 cups fresh spinach, chopped
1/4 cup chopped fresh basil
1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Directions

Melt butter in a large saucepan over medium heat. Sauté onion and garlic for 3 minutes.

Stir in milk and cook for 2 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Stir in tomato puree and sugar.

Mix well, cover and bring to a boil over high heat.

Reduce heat to low and simmer, covered, for 5 minutes.

Add spinach, basil, salt and pepper and simmer, uncovered, for 2 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, if desired.

Healthy School Snacks

By SUSIE

Studies show that the better quality breakfast, snacks, and lunches children have while in school increases school performance on all levels, including sports, grades, focus and overall attitude.

Here are some healthy snacks with healthy fats, proteins, and carbohydrates that you can feel good giving your kids. (More healthy snacks will appear next week.)

Make your own "Lunchables: Kids love stacking and making things their own. Buy some healthy crackers (Nature's Path makes organic high-quality crackers) and in a Bento type box, provide sliced raw cheese, organic sliced meats like ham or turkey or roast beef, sliced crispy veggies like peppers or carrots sliced thinly, an organic juice box (I like Honest Kids and so do the kids!) some grapes on the side and as a treat you can put in a mini Z bar which comes in many delicious flavors (the chocolate tastes like a brownie) and these are always a hit.

You can also buy the individual almond butter or peanut butter packets (if allowed, of course) and they can spread that on the crackers with some sliced strawberries instead of the meat and cheese.

Sunbutter is allowed in schools with peanut allergies since it is made of sunflower seeds, but they do not make individual packets that I have seen. You can always spoon some in a small container with a lid, make sure you pack a plastic knife.

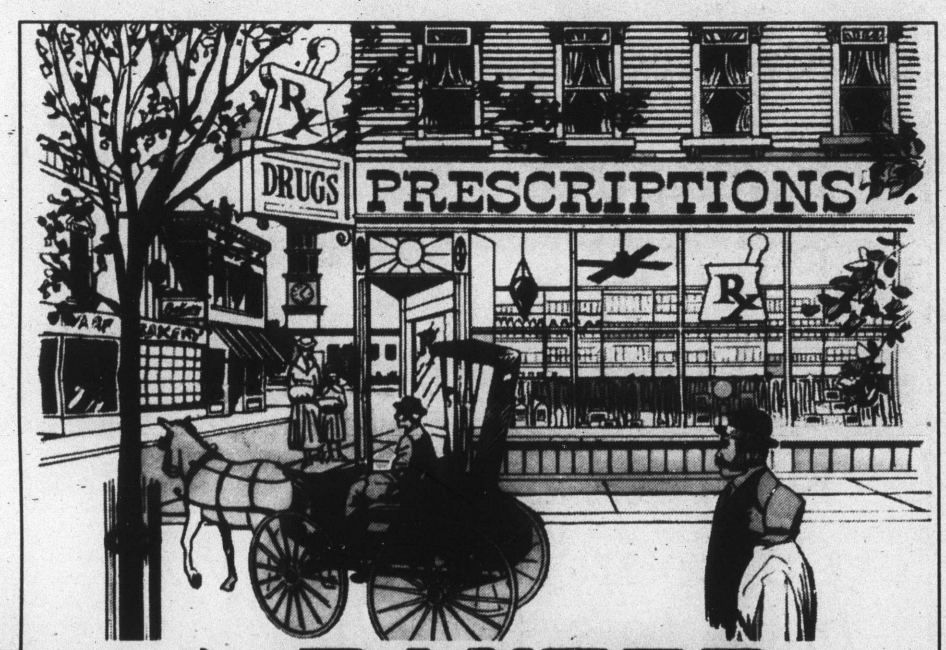

English muffin pizzas: Simply purchase some high quality English muffins (Barowski makes an organic whole grain one) and spoon on some marinara sauce, top with raw cheese and if your child agrees, put some baby spinach under the cheese for an added nutritional boost.

Bake in toaster oven and let cool.

I wrap mine in parchment paper and throw in a baggie or a container made for sandwiches (which can be found just about anywhere) These make a great snack (or lunch) and kids love pizza hot or cold.

Organic already sliced apples can be found just about everywhere now. These make a great snack served with a protein/fat combination like raw cheese cubes, or nut/seed butters.

(More healthy snacks will appear in next week's Quincy Sun.)

Manet Health Participating In National Initiative To Prevent Heart Attacks And Strokes

Manet Community Health Center has been selected by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) as one of 516 awardees in 47 states, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia to help reduce the risk of heart attacks and strokes among millions of Medicare fee-for-service beneficiaries.

Health care practitioners, such as Manet, participating in the Million Hearts® Cardiovascular Disease Risk Reduction Model will work to decrease cardiovascular disease risk by assessing an individual patient's risk for heart attack or stroke and applying prevention interventions.

"This is an exceptional opportunity for us to help our patients reduce their risk for cardiovascular disease," said Tomide Oyelakin, MBBS, MPH, CPHQ, Manet's Senior Director, Performance Improvement. "Manet's participation in the Million Hearts® intervention group will improve our ability to determine an individual's risk for a heart attack or stroke and support our efforts to work with patients to identify the optimal lifestyle, wellness and pharmacological approaches to reduce their risk of having a heart attack or stroke."

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), heart disease is the leading cause of death and a major contributor to disability in the United States. One in three deaths is caused by heart attacks and strokes, resulting in over $300 billion of health care costs each year. Currently, health care practitioners are paid to screen for blood pressure, cholesterol, or other risk factors individually.

In testing a new approach, practitioners participating in the Million Hearts® Cardiovascular Disease Risk Reduction Model's intervention group will use a data-driven, widely accepted predictive modeling approach to generate personalized risk scores and develop specific plans in partnership with patients to reduce the risk of having a heart attack or stroke.

Accepted applicants were randomly assigned to either the intervention or control group in accordance with the model's randomized control design.

Overall, nearly 20,000 health care practitioners and over 3.3 million Medicare fee-for-service beneficiaries will participate in the five-year model.

Manet is participating in the intervention group and will work with Medicare fee-for-service beneficiaries to determine their ten-year individual risk for a heart attack or stroke. Manet will then work with beneficiaries individually to identify the best approach or approaches to reducing their risk of having a heart attack or stroke – for example, smoking cessation interventions, blood pressure management, or cholesterol-lowering drugs or aspirin – and will explain the benefits of each approach.

Each beneficiary will receive a personalized risk modification plan that will target their specific risk factors. Manet will be paid for reducing the absolute risk for heart disease or stroke among their high-risk beneficiaries.

Retirement Planning: It's Your Future

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

When most people begin their career, retirement is the farthest thing from their mind. Instead, they focus on trying to purchase a home, start a family, or perhaps save money for travel. Retirement seems so far away for many younger people that they delay putting aside money. However, it's very important to save for the future — if you want to enjoy it.

Securing today and tomorrow

An employer-sponsored retirement plan or 401(k) can be a useful way to set aside funds for retirement, especially if your employer offers matching funds on what you invest. If you don't work for an employer that offers this type of plan, there are many other plans designed to help you save for retirement.

From solo 401(k)s to traditional and Roth IRAs, there are programs designed to fit a multitude of budgets. The earlier you start to save, the more funds you'll have ready for retirement.

In addition to traditional programs, the U.S. Department of the Treasury now offers a retirement savings option called myRA. There's no minimum to open the account, you can contribute what you can afford, and you can withdraw funds with ease. To learn more about myRA, visit www.myra.gov.

And, as always, there is Social Security, which is funded by taxes you pay while you work. To get estimates of future benefits and check your earnings record for accuracy, you can create a my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Prepare for your future and start saving — and planning — today!

Bullying Is Never OK

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Bullying amongst children is a critical dilemma that is too frequently written off as a rite of passage, or as "kids being kids." It is, however, a serious form of aggression that can result in injuries, fear, embarrassment, low self-esteem, and depression in the victim. Bullying can happen anywhere; cities, suburbs, or rural towns. No solitary feature puts a child at risk of being bullied or bullying others. Some groups such as lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgendered (LGBT) youth, youth with disabilities, and socially isolated youth may be at an increased risk of being bullied. The bulk of bullying still takes place at school; 1 in 3 U.S. students say they have been bullied at school, according to the Department of Health and Human Services. Studies have revealed that bullying occurs on the playground as often as every seven minutes, and in the classroom, a child is bullied every twenty-five minutes. Furthermore, the Internet has turned into a mechanism of attack in the form of cyberbullying, which can take place at any time, day or night. No matter what the venue, bullying can become so severe that some children may avoid going to school because they are frightened or humiliated. In the most extreme cases, children have even committed suicide as a means to escape the consequences.

When a person constantly and intentionally sets out to injure, traumatize, or demoralize another person, he or she is considered a bully. Hitting, kicking, spitting, pushing, and other form of physical aggression are actions that are most recognizable as the actions of a bully.

RUTH JONES

In addition, bullying may encompass the use of words to embarrass or threaten the target. Moreover, written words in the form of text messages or posts on social networking sites may also be used to as a method of intimidation. On occasion, the Internet is also often used to spread embarrassing images or videos to classmates, or at times passive-aggressive tactics such as silence may also be engaged.

Because children often hide the fact that they are victims of bullying, it is vital that parents pay attention to any potential signs. Bruises are the most noticeable and visible indications that a child is the prey of a bully. Therefore, parents should both observe for and question the presence of bruises. In addition, bullied children may have torn clothing and also allege to lose lunch money or other belongings. If a child becomes moody, less talkative, isolates themselves, or begins to have numerous emotional outbursts, this may signal signs of bullying. Oversleeping, an inability to sleep, or recurring nightmares all indicate some potential form of emotional stress. Kids may suddenly claim illnesses that are difficult to verify in order to avoid going to school.

If a child is the victim of bullying, parents need to put a stop to it as quickly as possible. Unfortunately, kids often do not disclose that they are being bullied and when they do it is with much difficulty. Parents who suspect bullying should sit down with their children and ask if there are any problems that the child wants to reveal. When a child willingly tells his or her parents about being bullied, it is critical that it is not marginalized or treated as insignificant. The more accepting and eager parents are to listen to their children the more at ease kids will feel discussing these issues. It is crucial that parents get as much information about the bullying as possible, especially who the bully is, how their child is being bullied how frequently, and what the school has done to intervene. Next discuss strategies to avoid the bully, such as never being alone, being more assertive, or ignoring the bully. Parents should also speak with their child's teachers or school administrator about the incident and what can be done to stop the behavior. Keep in mind however parents should never approach the bully directly. Speaking to the bully's parents or even law enforcement officials, may be necessary if the school is unable to bring the situation to a halt. Parents need to be aware of the state's anti-bullying regulations, particularly when violence, or embarrassing pictures or videos are involved, as it may necessitate legal action.

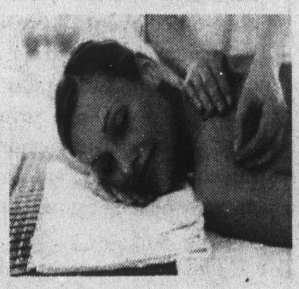

The preliminary step in putting an end to bullying is to prevent it from occurring initially. One way that parents can avert the situation is by teaching their children not to be bullies. Parents should lead by example and treat others with dignity and respect. Establishing a constructive atmosphere in the home is a strategy that can assist children in being happier and more confident. Mean-spirited behavior should be addressed immediately, and parents should discuss the consequences of negative actions and words. Additionally, kids should be made aware of the potential legal penalties of particular behaviors.

We can help prevent children from falling victim to bullies by helping them feel more assertive and boosting their self- worth. Encouragement and praise are valuable and will facilitate accomplishing this goal. Establishing consistent, open communication with children helps to lessen the anxiety about approaching their parents when the bullying originates. Early intervention is significant in averting the intimidation before lasting damage occurs. Encouraging the school to institute an anti-bullying program is another valuable step. Programs should teach kids not to bully, and should also instill the importance of what to do if they witness someone being bullied. Intervention from all of us including parents, schools and other children is instrumental at putting an end to this dangerous and degrading problem.

Low Turnout Seen For Sept. 8 State Primary

absentee ballot is noon on Wednesday, Sept. 7.

The Sept. 8 primary election features just one contested race on the Democratic ballot with incumbent Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella of Boston facing a challenge from Stephen F. Flynn of Hull.

The five members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill – Sen. John Keenan and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, Dan Hunt and Ron Mariano – are unopposed in the Democratic primary.

Also running for re-election without opposition in the Democratic primary are U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and county commissioners Francis O'Brien and Joseph Shea. Voters in Norfolk County are electing two commissioners this year.

The winners in the primary will advance to the Nov. 8 election.

November's election is headlined by the presidential race between Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton and Republican nominee Donald Trump. Others on the presidential ballot could include Libertarian Gary Johnson and the Green Party's Jill Stein.

Voters in Quincy will also cast ballots in two contested races.

Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is facing a challenge from Republican William Burke of Quincy in the contest to represent Massachusetts' eighth congressional district on Capitol Hill.

Keenan is opposed by Alexander Mendez, who is running as an independent candidate, in the race to represent Quincy and the rest of the Norfolk and Plymouth district on Beacon Hill. Both candidates are Quincy residents.

The state primary is being held on a Thursday because Tuesday, Sept. 6, falls on the day after Labor Day and the following Tuesday, Sept. 13, would not leave enough time before the November election.

Early Voting Before November Election

By SCOTT JACKSON

Voters in Quincy and throughout the Bay State will have the chance to cast their ballots up to 10 days in advance of the Nov. 8 presidential election, the first time Massachusetts has allowed early voting to take place.

Under a state law signed into effect in 2014 by then-Gov. Deval Patrick, municipalities are required to let voters cast ballots during a 10-day period leading up to Election Day each biennial statewide election.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo said she was still finalizing plans for the early voting period.

The state law requires communities to keep at least one polling place open during business hours throughout the early voting period. The law also gives communities the option to use multiple voting sites, hold polling hours on weekends, and offer extended hours on weekdays.

The 2014 law also mandated the establishment of online voter registration in the state.

The online voter registration can be done by going to registertovotema.com, which redirects to the state's secure website. Residents then enter identifying information that is verified with the Registry of Motor Vehicle's database; the RMV database is also used to provide the resident's signature.

A resident who does not have an ID issued by the RMV will be directed to the mail-in version of the application, which will print with all of the applicant's personal information and will be pre-addressed to the correct local election official. A resident would also have to submit a mail-in application if the RMV cannot verify the information.

NQ Catholic Women's Club Meets Sept. 7

There will also be a cash bar serving wine and beer from Burke Distributors mobile keg trailer. A selection of cold drinks and food will be sold by the Boy Scouts.

The Houghs Neck Congregational Church will have their bake sale with all proceeds going to McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Program. For more details or to donate baked goods email Gayle gaylemackay@comcast.net

No Decision Yet On Point Self-Storage Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board did not vote on a proposed Washington Street self-storage facility after the board's chairman said more time was needed to review changes to the design's exterior and landscaping.

The board held a second hearing Aug. 24 on Jumbo Self Storage's proposal to open the four-story, 122,900 square foot self-storage facility with 1,062 storage containers at 661-671 Washington St. The site, just north of the Fore River Bridge rotary, is home to a boat storage yard and former gas station.

Andy Graves, a principal for the BL Companies, the firm that designed the Washington Street building, highlighted a number of changes to the facility's exterior and landscaping since the proposal was unveiled at the Planning Board's July 13 meeting.

Among other changes, the design team swapped out the anodized aluminum panels initially proposed for the building façade for panels Graves described as champagne-colored, darkened and enhanced the cornice, and added trim to the windows. The windows and other design elements have also been wrapped around the building to the side facing South Street.

Additionally, Graves said the proposed glass tower on one corner of the building facing Washington Street has been raised four or five feet in height to make it more prominent and also comply with the golden mean.

The landscaping plan includes new spruce, maple and weeping cherry trees, Graves said, plants such as daylilies, and fountain grass and switchgrass.

"It should look attractive all year round," he stated.

Coleman Barry, the vice chairman of the Planning Board, said he was happy with the changes made to the exterior and landscaping plans. During the July meeting, Barry had asked for changes to the plan to improve the aesthetics of the building.

"I want to commend the applicant for really listening to what we had to say and coming back to us with some significant, substantive changes from the change in materials, to the façade, to landscaping changes," Barry said.

"This is the first building people see when they enter Quincy from Weymouth, and it's really important that the look is exactly what we hope to convey when people come into the city. I'm very happy with the new look."

Richard Meade, the board's chairman, requested the matter be continued to Sept. 14, because he wanted additional time to review the changes to the design.

"I appreciate the effort that's been put into improving the plan. I think I as a board member need some additional time just to review what you've submitted," Meade said. "I'd like an opportunity to spend a little bit more time reviewing it."

Bill Chaggaris, an abutter living on South Street who raised concerns about the size of the proposed facility during the July meeting, was again critical of the building design.

"To be honest with you, that's ugly. It does look like a Walgreens. It looks like the Dedham House of Corrections in the middle of the highway," Chaggaris said. "We don't need that right there. We don't need anymore self storage."

Proposed Bridge Street Apartments Raise Concerns

By SCOTT JACKSON

The superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park is concerned about the visibility of a proposed five-story, 60-unit apartment building on Bridge Street from nearby Peace field, and Planning Board members asked the applicant for further information on what the visual impact would be.

Boston Property Development, based on nearby Greenleaf Street, has proposed tearing down a pair of houses at 23 and 31 Bridge Street to make way for the new building. The project would include 98 parking spaces – eight more than required by the city's zoning code – 76 of which would be in a two-level garage underneath the building.

Boston Property Development is also the firm building the 53-unit residential building at neighboring 999 Hancock St., formerly home to Temple Beth El.

The Planning Board held a public hearing on the Bridge Street proposal Aug. 24 and will hold a second hearing on the matter during its Oct. 19 meeting; neither the peer review of the project nor reviews by various city departments had been completed.

The project also requires approval from the Conservation Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals, which are set to begin holding hearings on the proposal on Sept. 7 and Sept. 13, respectively.

Marianne Peak, the superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, was concerned about the impact the five-story building would have on the view from Peace field, which is located across the MBTA train tracks and Newport Avenue from the project site and is home to the Old House, also know as the Adams Mansion.

Peak in particular noted project architect Dartagnan Brown raised the possibility of installing rain gardens and solar panels on the roof during a July community meeting and again at the Planning Board hearing.

"I read in the paper that this building is going to have a roof garden overlooking the Adams house, and then I read it was going to have solar panels on the rooftop, and I'm trying to think of saving energy versus the hundreds of thousands of visitors to the Adams House looking at solar panels," Peak said.

"Looking at a roof garden might not be so bad, but looking at mechanical – air conditioning and those kinds of things – on a rooftop does have an impact.

"The benefit to the occupants looking at the Adams house is fabulous. The benefit of the visitor at the National Park Service looking at the brick building isn't so fabulous. It's something we have to be aware of in making important decisions as they relate to what's the vision."

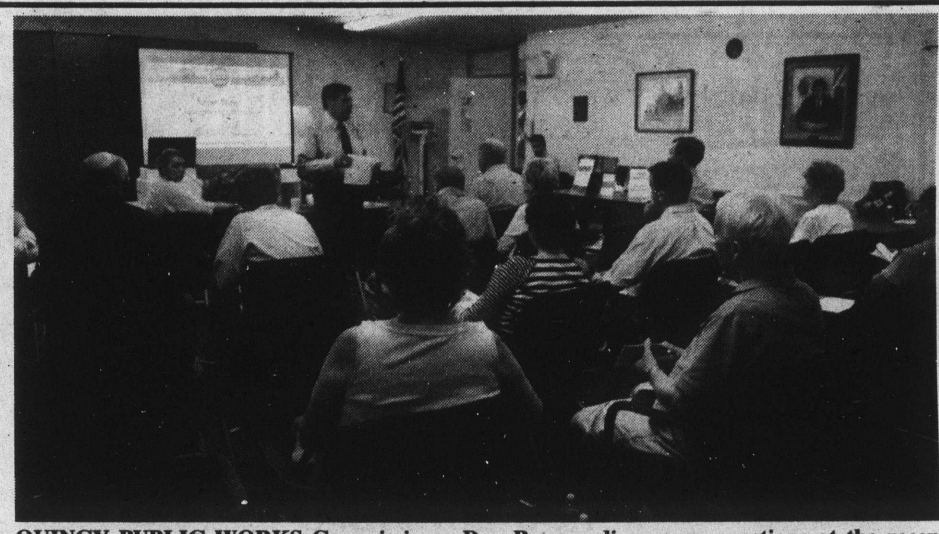

Members of the Planning Board asked the applicant to provide further details of the impact the proposed building would have on the view from Peace field. Glen Comiso asked for additional renderings showing the building from the National Park Service site.

"The John Adams park area is one of the things that makes Quincy special – it's one of the things that makes us unique and obviously historical," Comiso said. "My request is that we really understand what that view looks like…just to give us a comfort level in terms of what that angle looks like because that is such an important site."

Board member Maureen Glynn said proposed signage on the new building, including one that would be visible from the historic park, was also something to keep tabs on.

"I'd just like to reiterate a concern about the signs," she said. "I think it's something we should pay particular attention to on this project."

City Receives $67,500 Grant For Germantown Project

The Baker-Polito Administration announced over $1.8 million in funding to support local efforts to prepare for and reduce the impacts from coastal storms and climate change, including storm surge, flooding, erosion and sea level rise. The grants, provided by the Office of Coastal Zone Management (CZM), were awarded to 19 towns including Quincy.

Quincy received a $67,500 grant to fund a project entitled "Adaptation Alternatives for the Germantown Neighborhood," written by DPW Compliance Manager Deirdre Hall. The project will develop and prioritize climate adaptation strategies for protecting Palmer Street and surrounding resources and infrastructure serving the Germantown neighborhood.

"The grant is the first climate change adaptation project to emerge from Quincy's recent Hydrodynamic Modeling and Community Education Project," Hall said. "Identified as an area of coastal flooding vulnerability by the MassDOT Boston Harbor Flood Risk Model (BH-FRM), Germantown is an Environmental Justice Community without the resources to adapt to climate change impacts on its own.

"This project will assess the risks posed to critical infrastructure serving Ger-

College Students Be Aware Of Scams

Tips From The Better Business Bureau

The first year of college brings new challenges and opportunities. College opens doors that may be life changing, but it may also open the door to scammers that want to take advantage of unsuspecting young adults.

Better Business Bureau Serving Eastern MA, ME, RI & VT (BBB) is warning college students to be aware of scams targeting them during such an exciting time.

Students might not recognize when they come across a scam. Here are several types of scams targeted at students and how to avoid them:

Roommate Scams - If you post an ad for a roommate through online classifieds, beware of "fake roommates" who are out of the country, but can provide the rent upfront in the form of a money order. When you receive it, the amount is higher than the amount requested. You are asked to cash it and wire back the rest, but when you cash it, the check bounces and you're out the difference.

Rental Scams - Another form of a roommate/rental scam involves students searching for housing off-campus. Beware of fake rental properties posted online and always visit a potential rental before making any deposits.

Employment Scams - Beware of ads that pop up near campus offering jobs with "no experience necessary." Often, these "opportunities" are bogus. If you're interviewed in a hotel lobby or required to sign a contract, or have to pay for everything, including training, travel, lodging, food, etc. associated with the job, forget it! Check out a business first at bbb.org.Scam Alert

Scholarship & Grant Scams - Scholarship-finding services "guarantee" grants or scholarships. They sell lists to students of potential scholarship or grant opportunities. However, nearly all available financial aid comes from the federal government or individual colleges. Go to grants.gov for more information.

Online Shopping Scams - You see a much-wanted item for a steep discount online. One you could not usually afford. The catch? The site asks you to wire payment to them instead of using a credit card – a huge red flag. Once the money is sent, the item is never received.

Phone Scams - Scammers will usually call students and say they have overdue parking tickets, owe tuition money, or need to pay off a student loan. They threaten the student may be arrested or be ineligible to graduate if these go unpaid.

Illegal Downloads - It may be tempting to save money by downloading free music, movies, or textbooks, but many contain spyware that can end up causing financial havoc.

Here are a few other ploys to watch out for:

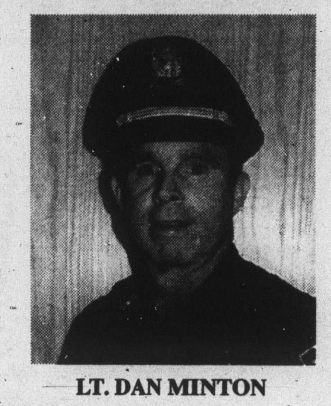

Credit Cards - While it's important to build credit, it's more important to maintain good credit. Many credit cards have annual fees or charge high-interest rates on purchases. Shop around for the best rate and pay off your credit card bills every month.

Trial Offers - From fitness club memberships to magazine subscriptions to acne medicine, diet pills, or free DVDs and CDs, know how much these products and services are going to cost you once the "Free Trial Offer" expires.

Safeguard Your ID - Keep your personal information, including your driver's license, student ID, debit cards, credit cards, and bank information in a SAFE place. Be wary of any online solicitations, emails, social media sites, or phone calls asking for your personal information. NEVER give out personal information to someone you do not know.

Back-To-School Safety

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer

LT. DAN MINTON

It's that time of year again. Time to send your children back to school. It can be a frightening time for parents, but if you prepare your child for the big world you may help save them from getting into trouble.

• Make sure your children are taking the safest route to school and friends' houses, one that avoids danger spots like alleys, new construction, and wooded areas.

• Encourage your children to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lit, open areas where others can see them.

• Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be at home when they return from school. Put it inside a pocket or sock.

• Teach children to walk confidently and stay alert to what's going on around them.

• Encourage your children to look out for other kids' safety and report anything they see that doesn't seem right.

• Tell your children to stay away from strangers who hang around playgrounds, public rest rooms and empty buildings.

• Rehearse with children their full name, address, and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.

• Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from someone they don't know well.

• Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.

• Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone. Accompany your children to public rest rooms.

• Teach children no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them that they have the right to say "No" to any adult in this situation.

If you teach the above tips to your children, they will be better prepared to survive in this great big, sometimes crazy, world.

Checkups Important For Kids' Health

By KAREN SZVOREN
Manager of Clinical Initiatives at Well Sense

Preparing for a new school year is a lot to juggle; parents have to keep track of everything from sports to social behaviors to school supplies. It's easy to postpone certain items on the to-do list until everyone is settled into the new school routine. However, an annual health checkup is not something that should be skipped. Even when children seem healthy, a visit with the doctor is an important step to long-term wellness.

An annual checkup can help parents make sure children are growing and developing properly, and creates an opportunity for parents to ask about common concerns like their child's eating and sleeping patterns. Most importantly, doctors are able to measure kids' hearing, vision, height, and weight, screen for lead exposure, and check that their vaccinations are up to date.

A doctor who sees a child every year at a health checkup will get to know them better and be more likely to catch health problems early. BMC HealthNet Plan or Well Sense Health Plan can help families find a doctor and can even provide free rides to and from the scheduled visit if needed. For more information, visit bmchp.org or wellsense.org.

Karen Szvoren, RN, is the Manager of Clinical Initiatives at BMC HealthNet Plan and Well Sense Health Plan. Szvoren has been with the organization since 2005. She has been a nurse since 1973 and has worked on medical surgical floors, in the operating room and in a private boarding school in New York State.

Common Core State Standards. Students from all grade levels participated in Extended Educational programs, encompassing academic and enrichment opportunities and employment through the Summer YouthWorks Program.

Last spring, Mayor Koch and the School Committee collaborated with the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to fund academic classroom and academic program teacher positions to maintain class sizes within the range of School Committee guidelines. New academic classroom and program teachers, academic support staff, and non-academic support staff have been hired across the school system to replace retired staff.

In addition, new administrators have been hired to enhance curriculum delivery for all students in the areas of general and special education. New professional staff members participated in a two-day orientation meeting with the Mayor, School Committee, and members of the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to learn about their professional responsibilities, the many programs and services offered by Quincy Public Schools, and the mentoring program for new staff.

To assist with growing needs for educational technology, many upgrades have been completed this summer. Installations of new desktops and laptops, document cameras, projectors, educational software, operating system upgrades, and technology professional development are ongoing throughout the school system.

Our partners in the Quincy School~Community Partnership continue to enhance our students' educational opportunities through supporting technology initiatives and the robotics program for Grades 5-12, providing backpacks and school supplies for elementary school students, real-work experiences for high school Career and Technical Education students, and funding the mentoring program for new educators.

Along with staffing, curriculum, and technology enhancements, we are working on many initiatives across the school system. This fall, families of students in Kindergarten will learn about the new elementary school report card introduced last year for Grades 1-5.

Opportunities for differentiated instruction continue to expand with advanced coursework in Science being offered to Grade 8 students at all five middle schools beginning this fall, complementing the advanced coursework being offered for English Language Arts and Mathematics for Grades 6-8.

Students in Grades 9-11 will make a difference in their schools and communities through volunteering in the fifth year of School Committee's Community Service initiative.

Students in Grades 11 and 12 will again have the opportunity to take college courses for credit through the new Dual Enrollment program with Quincy College. At all levels, extended day opportunities will be available "beyond the bell" for academic enrichment, the arts, and athletics.

Our school buildings will be ready for the new school year, with the Public Buildings Maintenance staff completing improvements such as newly retiled floors and new carpeting, repainted classrooms, and repairs to building mechanicals including addressing electrical, plumbing, and heating issues. Custodians across the school system have worked diligently all summer to prepare classrooms and offices for the new school year. As always, we are grateful for the support of the Park Department in maintaining and improving the landscaping at our school buildings.

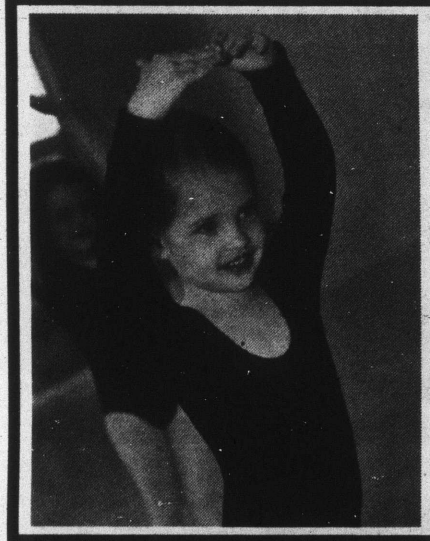

At the Merrymount Elementary School, a completely new roofing system is being installed. We are continuing to work with the Massachusetts School Building Authority and the Public Buildings department on the new Sterling Middle School project with final design underway.

Planning is underway for window, door, and roof replacement at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and for boiler replacement projects at the Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, and Wollaston Elementary Schools. Updates on the Sterling Middle School and other MSBA projects will be presented at upcoming School Committee meetings, the first of which will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the Coddington Building and broadcast live on QATV Channel 22.

As the new school year begins, please remember that the most meaningful factor in assisting students to have a successful school experience is the concern and participation of their parents. In order to help your children attain their goals, we need your involvement, whether it be through attending parent-teacher conferences and Parent Academy events, volunteering in your child's school, and most importantly, reinforcing the importance of on-time school attendance, appropriate behavior and class participation, and completion of schoolwork.

'We Want To Translate Hard Work Into Victories'

NQ Coach Mark Nutley, Red Raiders Football Open Season At Silver Lake Sept. 9

By BILL GRIFFIN

This is the season North Quincy wants to translate hard work and promise into wins on the field.

The Red Raiders will be largely a sophomore-junior team which should be improve this year and could be very good next season. There is talent here. A crackerjack freshman club went 7-4 last fall. The JVs had a winning record. Both teams won their games against Quincy.

The senior class is small in numbers, but features experienced performers who can lead and play. There is talent at the skilled positions. They have worked in the off-season. There are 15 wrestlers on the team. They played in a passing league over the summer. They have put in their hours in the weight room.

Now it is time for the games.

"We want to translate all that hard work into victories," said coach Mark Nutley whose club went 1-10 last year and welcomes back four starters on offense and five on defense. "We're young, but we are athletic. We have excellent sophomores, and they work hard. There will be growing pains, but I think we'll improve quickly."

Two of the most exciting players are sophomore tailback Win Tran and sophomore quarterback Tim Layden. Be careful. They are sophomores. But they are good. Tran is a legitimate breakaway threat who has also built himself into a strong inside runner who can both run over and fly past tacklers.

"He had a great summer, and he worked in the weight room," said Nutley. "He's one of our strongest players. When you look at him, you think he's a senior, not a sophomore."

Layden played quarterback for the freshman and JVs last year. He saw varsity time on special teams. He has a good sense of what it is like to play at varsity speed. He is strong, knows how to work in the pocket, and throws a good ball.

"He was our long snapper on varsity as well last year," said Nutley. "He's smart, and he has a cannon for an arm."

Senior Liam O'Connor is a quick, strong back who will get plenty of touches. Senior captain Tom Koch is the blocking back and is likely North's best football player. He opens holes with with solid blocks and has good hands. On defense, he plays linebacker. He stuffs the run, causes fumbles with hard hits, and drops back into coverage to defend the pass.

"I can't say enough about Tommy. He is an amazing captain, and he fills so many roles for us," said Nutley.

North's biggest challenge will be replacing Aidan Brown and Derek Huynh. Brown gained well over 1,000 yards and was a running-receiving threat on offense. He ended his career with an acrobatic catch for a TD against Quincy and is currently seeing time at UNH as a freshman cornerback.

Chris Donaghy, Connor Donaghy, Brendan Ganno, and Brendan Chen have impressed at wide receiver. Nelson Walinjom and Jake Roos will work at tight end.

"The wide receivers have shown good quickness.

'We'll See Improvements As The Season Goes On'

Quincy Coach Bill Reardon, Presidents Football Host Braintree In Opener Sept. 9

QUINCY FOOTBALL COACH Bill Reardon and his two captains, Joshua Rodriguez (left) and Frankie Nunziato (right) will lead the Presidents into their season opener Friday, Sept. 9 against Braintree at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Kick off is at 7 p.m. Quincy plays its first road game Sept. 16 at Milton

They almost surely will be a better football team in late October than they are in early September.

Quincy is young. The Presidents only bring back four starters from last year's 4-7 team. There are 42 sophomores on the squad. The numbers are good, but there will be new faces in new places, and, perhaps, a new twist to an offense that has served the Presidents well over the past decade.

"We're very young. We have a good sophomore turnout, but we have to sort them into the right slots and coach them up for the season," said coach Bill Reardon. "We'll learn as we go, and I think we'll see improvement as the season goes on."

Quincy has established a rich tradition of running backs under Reardon. Tim Lewis, Reggie Cesar, Jalen Green and Jahvae Handsom-Fields were all brilliant backs. Handsom-Fields went over 3,000 yards for his career and broke the all-time rushing record for Thanksgiving against North last season. This is the first time in eight years that Reardon enters the season without an all-league talent at tailback.

Quincy has good backs, but no proven stars.

"It's the first year we haven't had a star in a while, but we have a couple of good backs in Dominic Laptiste and Josh Rodriguez who have talent, work hard, will develop into good runners," said Reardon.

Reardon loves to run his offense through his tailback. However, the absence of an experienced, proven tailback and good talent at quarterback and wide receiver will likely see the Presidents throw the ball more than they have in recent years.

Junior Nick Maberry succeeds Cody Desmond, who had an excellent season last year, at quarterback. Maberry has a good arm and quality receivers.

"Nick throws the ball well. He's not big physically, but when you watch him

Quincy Center Historical Tours Underway

Church of the Presidents, are offered by the city Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Historical reenactors lead the 40-minute tours as part of a $49,767 pilot program that will run through the end of October. The funding is from the city's motel/hotel tax.

On a recent afternoon, historical interpreter Graeme Marsden, dressed in Revolutionary-era attire, guided the local press on a tour. First up was the 172-year-old, Old City Hall.

"It's a simple building, classical Greek architecture made of Quincy granite," Marsden said.

Built in 1844, the building served as city hall housing most municipal offices including the mayor's office until a new city hall glass annex opened adjacent to it in the 1970s. Government offices moved into the new glass annex while some like the city clerk's office remained for years until those last remaining offices relocated to the glass annex last year.

Last summer, a two-year renovation of Old City Hall was completed and it was brought up to modern standards. New carpeting, wood and furnishings were installed.

"It was completely gutted," said Marsden, who noted Old City Hall has no municipal offices, only several community meeting rooms including the city council chambers.

The newly refurbished building now features a historical room where artifacts from centuries past provided by the Quincy Historical Society are on display.

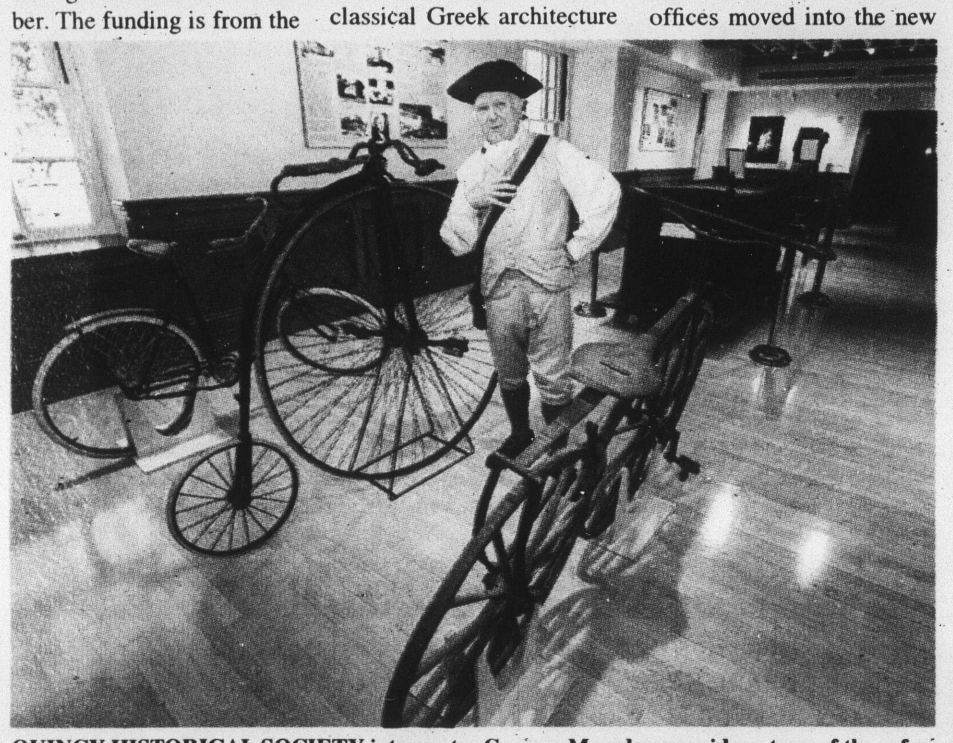

"It's museum quality space," said Marsden.

Among the items in the historical room are vintage bicycles, Col. John Quincy's tankard, a "town hearse" from the mid-1800s, part of a cedar tree that is depicted in the City of Quincy seal and documents from John Hancock and John Adams.

Marsden said the hearse may have carried the body of President John Quincy Adams when he died in 1848. He noted the cedar tree stood in Merrymount when Thomas Morton settled there in 1625 and pays tribute to him. The tree was blown down during an 1898 storm.

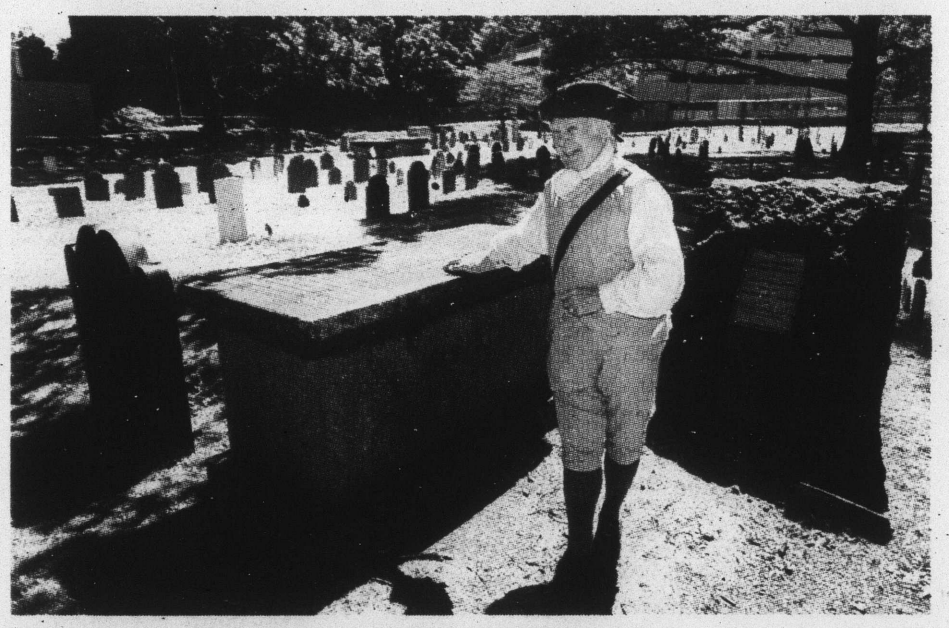

While leading the tour group through a hallway to another room, Marsden paused at a large window looking out front onto Hancock Street directly across from the Church of the Presidents where construction crews are transforming a section of the now-closed roadway into a park that will be known as the Hancock Adams Green when it opens next fall.

IN HANCOCK CEMETERY Interpreter Graeme Marsden stands by the tombs of Leonard Hoar (left) who served as president of Harvard College in the 1670s, and Col. John Quincy (right), who chaired the committee that first recommended Quincy separate from Braintree's North Precinct and become a separate town in 1728. The city of Quincy is named after him.

PART OF THE Merrymount cedar tree that was blown down during a storm in 1898 is on display in the museum located inside Old Town Hall - also known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center. Interpreter Graeme Marsden explains that the tree once stood on the site where Thomas Morton landed in Merrymount in 1625 - the area of Quincy's initial settlement. The tree depicted on the City of Quincy seal.

throw the ball, you see that he has a big arm. The ball comes out of hand well," said Reardon.

Junior Shorn Hawthorne had a fine year at cornerback last fall and should be a dangerous receiver. He was an excellent sprinter on the track team. He has serious speed, and he can track down a football. He will stretch the field for the Presidents. Captain Frankie Nunziato has also looked good at wide receiver. Junior Adam Vu will play at tight end.

"I think we will throw the ball more than we have in the past," said Reardon. "Shorn has excellent speed, and I like our receivers. There are also a number of sophomores and juniors who can catch the ball."

The hardest player to replace up front is Mike Munroe who was likely the best two-way tackle in the league last year. Senior tackle Bernie Van Tassell is the lone returning starting lineman and should be an experienced anchor on both sides of the ball.

"We're looking for Bernie to be a reliable player who can handle a lot while our younger players develop," said Reardon.

Senior Ryan Ahola, who saw spot duty last year, will start at one tackle. Pat Nazzaro, Jamal Williams, Troy Isaac and Gustavo DeSouza will all see action up front. They are new varsity players, but remember Reardon and his staff took an inexperienced line last year and developed it into a formidable unit by the end of the season.

The linemen are likely to see two-way duty, especially early in the season, while Quincy works its younger players up to varsity speed. The running backs and wide receivers will also see time on defense.

"We will have players going both ways. We hope we can work with our sophomores and add depth as the season goes along," said Reardon.

Brian Nguyen, who had a standout season as sophomore, will start at one linebacker spot. Junior James Crump and Rodriguez will also play linebacker for the Presidents.

"Brian did a good job last year. He had a great interception and touchdown return in the Thanksgiving game called because of a penalty. He's always around the ball," said Reardon.

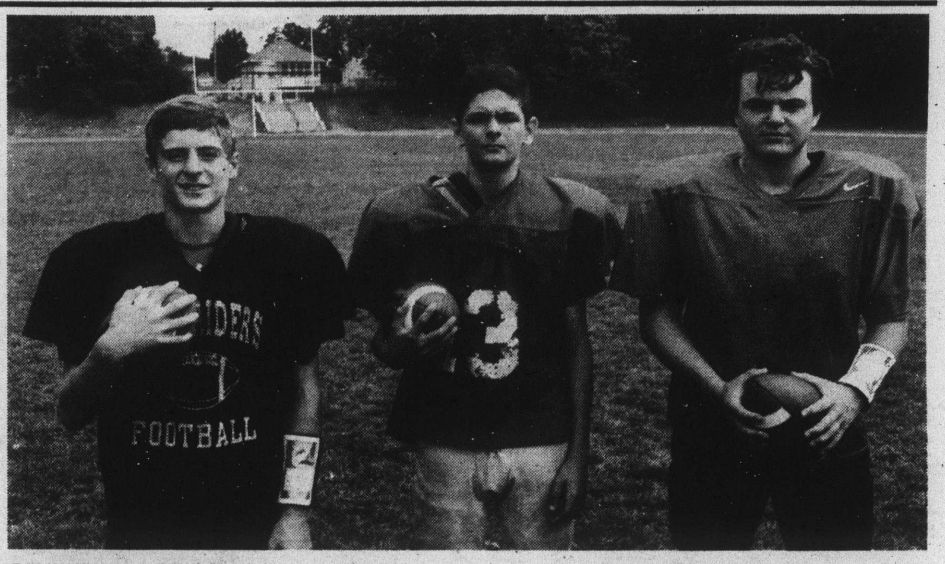

Duxbury is the clear favorite in the Keenan Division of the Patriot League. The Dragons return quarterback Bobby Maimaron and wide receiver Ryan Regan in a wide-open, explosive offense.

"Regan is one of the best wide receivers in the state," said Reardon. "Duxbury is excellent, The rest of the division should be a fight for second place," said Reardon."

At Quincy, it is a year of change and development. Maberry and Hawthorn give the Presidents a presence through the air. Laptiste and Rodriguez should develop into solid backs as the line gains experience.

"We have to work with the sophomores and our first-year starters. It will be a learning experience, but sometimes these type of years can surprise you," said Reardon.

With Tim at QB and those wide receivers, we'll throw the ball," said Nutley.

Huynh was one of the best run-stoppers in the league last year. Senior captain Ryan Manning (6'4", 280 pounds) will shift from center to tackle and provide a two-way, veteran presence for North. Junior Mark Monahan is a transfer student who will start at tackle. Junior Alex Pham (a standout wrestler) starts at one guard. Devin Ganno, Josh Moore, Jeff Sullivan and Mike Oldham will all be important players for North on the line.

"I think it's a good group. Alex Pham has worked hard and should be very good. Ryan gives us experience, and we were fortunate to get Mark who has good size and experience," said Nutley.

Depth could be an issue. Most of the line will go both ways and the wide receivers will double as defensive backs. There is good frontline talent here. The question is injuries.

"We have a lot of kids going both ways. We hope to build depth as the season goes on," said Nutley.

North is preparing for the season with demanding scrimmages against Milton, Norwell, Abington and North Reading.

"I think scrimmaging against tough teams will be good for us," said Nutley. "I want our younger players to be ready. I want them to be able to bounce back against a good team if bad things happen."

"I think I saw a turning point in the passing league over the summer. We were playing Marshfield who is excellent. They were being physical with us. At first, we didn't respond. Then we had a timeout and talked about it. Since then, the kids have played tough football. We're young. We'll need that toughness when the regular season starts."

North Quincy opens on the road Friday, Sept. 9 against Silver Lake.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

SHOOTING PAIN IN THE FACE

Sudden, shooting pain in the face that feels like an electrical shock is a symptom of "trigeminal neuralgia" (also called "tic douloureux"), which develops as a result of pressure applied to the "trigeminal nerve." More common among women than men, the pain can be spontaneous or caused by stimulation of the face, such as when washing the face, applying makeup, or brushing teeth. In some cases, there is more of an aching, burning feeling than sharp pain. All these symptoms are due to pressure on the trigeminal nerve, which is one of the largest nerves in the head. When trigeminal neuralgia is caused by misalignment in the upper cervical spine, chiropractic treatment may provide pain relief.

Don't spend another tough day at the office or another sleepless night because of aggravating pain anywhere in your body. Millions of people lead healthier and happier lives, free from chronic pain, simply because they have discovered chiropractic care. Study after study confirms that professional chiropractic care works. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe a proper chiropractic spinal analysis and spinal adjustment are essential to your good health. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The trigeminal nerve sends impulses of touch, pain, pressure, and temperature to the brain from the face, jaw, gums, forehead, and around the eyes.

Quincy 11A's Suburban Travel League Champs

The Quincy 11A travel baseball team recently won the Suburban League Championship over the defending league champion Wellesley. Quincy won the title in a hard-fought 10-6 victory at Morrison Field in Westwood.

The Suburban Travel League features 36 teams of the best 11-year old baseball players in Eastern Massachusetts. Sixteen teams qualified for the playoffs which started in late-July.

Quincy defeated Hanson 8-4 in the first round. Quincy fell behind 3-0 early but rallied for the win. Clutch hits by Dylan Green, Kevin Pritchard, Nick Ferrara, and Tommy Gates led Quincy to victory.

In the quarterfinals, Quincy rallied from a 4-0 deficit to defeat a tough Westwood squad 14-8. James Hooley pitched well and hit a big homerun to carry Quincy to victory. Grant Murphy closed out the victory for Quincy.

In the semifinals, Quincy trailed Medfield 2-0 before Tommy Gates had a clutch two-out, two-run single in the fifth to tie the game. Nick Ferrara immediately followed with a two-run blast to open it up for Quincy, who went on to win 7-4. Stellar defensive plays by Ryan Beardsley and Grant Murphy kept Quincy in the game early. Quincy's closer Kevin Pritchard closed out the win.

Quincy wasted no time in the final game jumping out to a two-run lead in the first behind clutch hits from Kevin Pritchard and Johnny Lynch. Lynch drove in runs in the third and again in the fourth with timely hits. Colm Geary had a big triple and Dylan Green had clutch hits in the fourth and fifth innings. Ferrara started a big fourth inning rally with a double and was knocked in by Lynch. Tommy Gates started the game and held the Wellesley bats in check. Hooley and Pritchard pitched great in relief. Beardsley and Murphy reached base three times each in the final game.

The Quincy squad was coached by Matt Beardsley, Chris Pritchard, and Dave Murphy.

"These resilient Quincy kids showed growth and maturity all season long," said Beardsley. "They have that tough Quincy attitude that backs down to nobody. It didn't matter the score, the opponent, or the situation, these kids came out firing. They were confident in themselves and they were confident in each other. I am extremely proud that they join very select company as Suburban League Champions."

Mayor's Bicycle Commission Hosts Bike To Work Day

The Mayor's Bicycle Commission is thanking all those who participated in the City's first Bike to Work Day July 29th in the parking lot in front of Coddington Hall.

The MBTA brought a bus to the event and an instructor and bus operator were present to demonstrate how to load and unload bikes onto the bus's bike racks.

All of the buses that drive Quincy routes are now equipped with bicycle racks, which make it easier for people to get to public transit stops and other destinations that might be too far away to reach walking.

Participants at Bike to Work Day received snacks and coffee courtesy of Mayor Koch and Coffee Break Café and free giveaways from MassRIDES and South Shore Bank.

The Mayor's Bicycle Commission was formed in 2013 to advise the mayor on promoting bicycling as a viable transportation option for all trip purposes and to improve the safety of bicycle users throughout the city.

The Commission holds public meetings on the third Thursday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the lower level of Old City Hall (James R. McIntyre Government Center), 1305 Hancock St.

Elementary and middle school offices opened Monday – the high school offices stay open throughout the summer – and all professional staff will report to their respective buildings on Tuesday, Sept. 6.

Students and teachers will have new technology at their disposal this school year. Throughout the school system, installation of new desktops and laptops, document cameras, projectors, educational software, operating system upgrades and technology professional development is ongoing, according to School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

The superintendent also said the organizations and businesses in the Quincy School-Community Partnership have helped enhance educational opportunities for students by supporting technology initiatives and the robotics program for grades 5 through 12, provided backpacks and supplies for elementary students, real work experience for high school career and technical education students, and funding a mentoring program for new educators.

Advanced coursework in science for eighth graders is being offered in all five middle schools beginning this fall; DeCristofaro said those classes would complement the existing offerings available in mathematics and English language arts for students in grades 6 through 8.

A new dual enrollment program with Quincy College will allow high school juniors and seniors to take college courses for credit; students in grades 9 through 11 will take place in the community service initiative, now in its fifth year.

Extended day opportunities for academic enrichment, the arts and athletics will be available for students at all levels.

Changes were made to school buildings themselves, as floors were newly retiled and carpeted, classrooms were repainted, and mechanical systems were repaired to address electrical, plumbing and heating issues.

The final day for students in grade 12 is slated for June 1. North Quincy High's graduation will be held June 12, and Quincy High's is set for June 13. In the event of inclement weather, those ceremonies would be moved indoors and not bumped to a later date, a change in policy from previous years.

The last day for other students is June 19; in the event five days of school are canceled, the final day for those students would be June 26.

The final day for professional staff is scheduled for June 20, but could be changed because of cancelations.

Planning Board Approves Quincy Ave. Townhouses

fort as a city to improve the public safety along the roadway, I think a positive change will be coming."

Donna Caldarola, a trustee for the condominium complex next door at 140 Quincy Ave., said the residents there were concerned about possible impacts during construction, such as blasting, water shut offs, traffic, and damage to their property. She said the Agnittis had promised to work with her to address those concerns.

"The owners have agreed to work with us. We're happy with that, but we do want to protect our property," Caldarola said.

Rob Stevens of the Planning Department said the city monitors all projects for construction impacts, and requires developers to have plans in place for rodent control and dust control, among other conditions attached to the special permit.

In other business Aug. 24, the Planning Board:

Continued to Sept. 14 the review of a proposal by Steven Baylis to construct eight townhouse units at 264R West St. The Planning Board first held a public hearing on the plan at its May 11 meeting.

Allowed the applicant behind a proposed residential building at 30-34 Chapman St. to withdraw the plan without prejudice. The developer, Timothy Long, had proposed building a six-story, 30-unit condominium building on site. The Planning Board held the first public hearing on the project in January.

Allowed Boston Scientific to withdraw without prejudice a proposal to construct an 88.5-foot wide, 30-foot tall LED sign on top of its south warehouse at 500 Commander Shea Blvd. The proposed sign, which would have been the largest in the city, first went before the board in May, at which time city officials expressed their desire to have Quincy represented in the signage.

Allowed Huang MJ Construction to withdraw without prejudice its proposal to modify a previously granted special permit/site plan review for a residential building at 77-83 Newbury Ave. The applicant had sought approval of the modifications made to the site and to the façade materials that were used in construction without previous approval, and had also proposed to increase the number of residential units from six to seven.

City Acquires Two Adams Street Parcels

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city has acquired two parcels on Adams Street for $1.3 million total and plans to maintain them as open space.

The city spent $1.085 million to acquire 205 Adams St., and $115,000 for the 191 Adams St., closing on both properties in August, according to records from the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

The two parcels are located between the William B. Rice Eventide Home at 215 Adams St. and Peace field, part of the Adams National Historical Park at 135 Adams St.

The property at 205 Adams St. includes 62,762 square feet (1.4 acres) of land as well as a house with a gross area of 6,780 square feet, according to the city assessor's online database. The parcel at 191 Adams St. includes 16,338 square feet of land.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the city plans to keep both parcels as open space. The mayor had included the purchase of the two properties in his five-year capital improvement plan unveiled in May.

The City Council in June approved a $1.4 million bond to purchase the two properties and related site work. Walker said the acquisitions would ultimately be paid for using funds from Quincy's Community Preservation Committee.

The Future Of Butler's Pond

Op Ed

Just six blocks from busy Quincy Center lies a hidden natural gem known as Butler's Pond. It is located behind the former Central Middle School and between Butler and Merrymount Roads.

Formed by the movement of glaciers during the last ice age, this lovely pond is home to turtles and frogs and is visited by migrating birds. Herons, egrets, ducks, raccoons, and possums frequent the pond. It is a favorite place for city residents to ice-skate in winter and to enjoy the Pond's natural beauty and wild-life in all seasons. The pond also serves as an outdoor classroom for nearby schools.

Butler's Pond, named for Peter Butler who owned it in the late 1800s, was once the part of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead. Today about 1.3 acres in size, the pond was once nearly twice the size and extended nearly to Greenleaf Street. In 1993, the late John W. Walsh, Jr., its most recent owner, donated the pond and surrounding land to the City of Quincy for conservation.

Today the pond is in danger. Due to years of accumulating sediment and pollutants from stormwater runoff from neighborhood streets and paved areas, the now shallow pond is in an advanced state of eutrophication and is threatened by invasive weeds and plagued by floating green plant material. Without efforts to reverse the process, the pond would soon fill in to become a marshy bog, an attraction for trash, and an eyesore to the public.

"The Future of Butler's Pond" was the topic of a recent community meeting held by Friends of Butler's Pond at Coddington Hall on Aug. 17. Also attending were members of the newly formed Friends of Sailor's Home Pond, another natural gem and facing similar challenges. Attendees learned about work already done towards restoring and preserving Butler's Pond. Engineering consultants working with the City of Quincy Department of Public Works proposed new plans for removing sediment and mitigating the impact of stormwater drainage prior to submitting these plans to regulatory agencies for permits.

Carl Nielsen from ESS Group, Providence, R.I., an ecological and permitting consultant, reviewed the condition of the pond. As the best way to improve water quality and the health of the pond, he discussed plans to restore the pond to its natural depth (by removing several feet of sediment) and the state and federal permitting that would be required. This engineering and permitting work, along with previous projects to remove and control invasive phragmites reeds, are supported by grant funding from the Quincy Community Preservation Committee.

Zach Henderson from Woodard & Curran, storm water management engineers also working with the City, presented a plan for installing engineered wetland areas with natural plantings to capture sediment and filter pollutants from the stormwater outfalls at each end of the pond. Such a plan would be required for permitting sediment removal. It would help preserve the pond, but would necessarily change the landscape at the ends of the pond. Trees would need to be removed, but would be replaced with lower height natural plantings to absorb pollutants.

Friends of Butler's Pond was founded by local residents as a community organization to promote the restoration and preservation of this natural treasure and cultural asset. Since its founding in 2009, the Friends have conducted historical research, held public meetings, bi-annual clean-ups, and ice-skating parties. Working with the City and with Community Preservation grant support, the Friends have conducted water quality and sediment studies, removal of invasive phragmites reeds threatening to choke the pond and on-going control, tree thinning to open up the vista and reduce leaf-fall into the pond, and out-reach to municipal and property developers to encourage Low Impact Development (LID) and incorporate stormwater Best Management Practices (BMPs) in new projects. We thank the developers of the former Central Middle School and 10 Merrymount Road for incorporating LID and BMPs in these re-development projects. Immediate projects include installing interpretative signage and park benches for public enjoyment.

To move forward with the permitting process, Friends of Butler's Pond asks community support for the proposed plans for sediment removal and stormwater impact mitigation. While these measures will somewhat alter the pond's appearance, they will improve the water quality and health of the pond, and enhance its long-term attractiveness as a community asset. We invite readers to support our work by visiting our website at www.butlerspond.org and commenting on our Facebook page, "Friends of Butler's Pond (Quincy,MA)", or email to "butlerspond@gmail.com."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHITE DONE RIGHT!

An American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry survey indicates that 99.7% of adults believe that a smile is an important social asset, which helps explain why tooth whitening is one of the most popular cosmetic dental procedures. Professional tooth whitening is particularly effective because dentists are permitted to use hydrogen peroxide at the 6% legal limit. Because the chemical agents used to whiten teeth are so tightly regulated, the whitening power of over-the-counter products is restricted. Professional tooth whitening is also conducted under carefully controlled conditions. While the dentist uses custom trays to deliver whitening agents, over-the-counter trays are often so ill-fitting that gums become irritated and damaged. For this and other reasons, professional tooth whitening is the way to go.

There's nothing like a bright smile, filled with sparkling teeth and healthy gums. Call us at 617 479-6220 today and discover how a few simple measures can bring quick relief as well as enhance your dental health. We will do everything we can to ensure that your visits to us will be as comfortable and pleasant as possible. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, Our entire staff is proud to offer many professional services to all our patients.

P.S. With today's dentist-supervised systems, even patients with sensitive teeth can undergo tooth whitening treatment.

Coleman Barry, the board's vice chairman, asked if the developer had contacted the National Park Service before the Aug. 24 meeting.

"It's a sharp looking building, but I don't think I need to spend any time talking about how one of the most important resources that our city has is the national historic site that's within view of this new building," Barry said. "I think the board would be interested in knowing what discussions, if any, have been had with the National Park Service to begin thinking about the impact of this building on that national park."

Ed Fleming, the attorney representing Boston Properties responded, "We haven't had those discussions yet, but we certainly will do so."

Also speaking at the meeting was Rick Doane, the executive director of Interfaith Social Services, which is located at 105 Adams St., on the corner of Bridge Street. He said the developer had reached out to his organization, but ISS was concerned about the loss of parking spaces in the area.

"That's our biggest concern, and it's not just the long term, it's the short term too – the parking situation as construction is going on. There are going to be a number of street level parking places that we'll lose," Doane said.

"At Interfaith Social Services we operate one of the largest emergency food pantries in Massachusetts, the largest in the South Shore. We serve about 25,000 people per year through our food pantry, so we have a lot of traffic going through there. We also operate a mental health counseling center on site at that location and a retail thrift shop out of that same location."

"We are anxious to hear more plans, hear about the parking, what they anticipate. We're glad they have started to talk to us before the project about how we can work together."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said parking is the top concern she and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes have heard from residents living in the neighborhood. While the proposal in question is compliant with Quincy's parking requirements, Laforest said the city should reach out to other area buildings about those concerns.

"This neighborhood has been infiltrated by other properties and there is a significant parking problem," she said. "Any of these side streets – Bridge Street, Thayer Street, you can't get a parking spot at 10 a.m. on a Tuesday. You just cannot park in this neighborhood.

"It's not a problem of this particular application, it's something Councillor Hughes and I have been consistently hearing from this neighborhood."

'Stars Of Gold Walk' For Childhood Cancer Sept. 11

Fundraising Event At Pageant Field

This Star Won't Go Out will host the "Stars of Gold Walk," a 5K walk and family event fundraiser, Saturday, Sept. 11 at Pageant Field in Quincy.

Participants can register online at www.starsofgold.org.

The "Stars of Gold Walk" brings together several childhood cancer charities during Childhood Cancer Awareness Month, including This Star Won't Go Out, Ellie's Hats, and Sophia's Fund. Registration for the event is $20 per person, with a family discount available. All participants will receive an event T-shirt.

The family and pet-friendly off-street walk starts at 10 a.m., with participant registration beginning at 8:30 a.m. Sign up is at the registration table in front of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater, 1 Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Walkers can choose to do three laps to complete a 5K walk, or choose the shorter 1-mile option. Water tables will be set up at the halfway point around the route.

"This is really an historic event in Quincy – a first time collaborative effort by several nonprofit organizations to highlight the needs of childhood cancer during September's Childhood Cancer Awareness," said Lori Earl, founder and director of This Star Won't Go Out, a local Quincy-based charity. "Our hope is to see this event grow into an annual event that raises needed funds to impact pediatric cancer.

"We are excited that during the Stars of Gold event, Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch will join us to award a check to a local family touched by this disease," Earl said.

From 10:30 a.m. until 2 p.m., participants in the community are invited to enjoy a variety of free performances at the amphitheater. Local performers include the North Quincy High School cheerleaders, Brady Academy of Irish Dance, Center Stage, Velocity Dance, and 3D.

Raffle-style tickets will be available for purchase for a variety of activities, including nail painting, lawn games, and human-sized hamster balls. Tickets can also be used to purchase samples from local sponsoring restaurants, and pizza.

Participants are also invited to take a photo for free at the onsite photo booth, and decorate a star in honor of a loved one.

Prizes will be awarded for the most pledges raised, by an individual child, adult, and team; the largest team to register, the most enthusiastic walker; the best-sport pet, and owner/pet look-alike.

For more information, to register or donate online, visit www.starsofgold.org.

The Stars of Gold Walk is organized by This Star Won't Go Out, a Quincy-based 501c3 charity supporting families through their journey with a child diagnosed with cancer. Since 2011, TSWGO has given out $400,000 in financial grants for expenses not covered by insurance, including mortgage, utilities and travel.

Police Lieutenant Facing Federal Fraud Charges

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy police lieutenant is facing 13 federal charges and is accused of defrauding the city's police department out of more than $10,000.

In an indictment unsealed Monday, Thomas Corliss, 51, was charged with 12 counts of mail fraud and one count of fraud involving federal funds by a federal grand jury. Corliss, a 23-year member of the department, pleaded not guilty during his arraignment in federal court and was released on conditions imposed by U.S. District Court Magistrate Judge Jennifer C. Boal.

The indictment alleges that an internal police investigation found Corliss had fraudulently collected double pay by working multiple details and/or regular police on multiple occasions in 2015. It further alleges that Corliss collected his regular pay while on vacation in the Bahamas and on Cape Cod last year. In total, the indictment contends Corliss defrauded the department out of more than $10,000.

The indictment alleges 20 separate instances where Corliss either submitted fraudulent detail slips, submitted false overtime pay requests, or made fraudulent Quincy Police Department roster entries between March and September of 2015.

Twelve invoices containing false information supplied by Corliss were sent via the U.S. Postal Service to unidentified companies that paid for details during that time period, the indictment alleges, which is the basis for the dozen counts of mail fraud.

The charge of mail fraud provides for a sentence of up to 20 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000. The charge of fraud involving federal funds provides for a sentence of up to 10 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000. Prosecutors, in a statement, noted that actual sentences for federal crimes are typically less than the maximum and are imposed by a district judge based on sentencing guidelines and other factors.

In a statement Tuesday, Mayor Thomas Koch credited Police Chief Paul Keenan and the department for the internal investigation into Corliss last year, and said the matter was taken seriously by those involved.

"This matter was addressed swiftly, thoroughly and professionally by Chief Keenan and the Quincy Police Department immediately after these issues were raised," Koch said.

"The department's handling of this matter in such a methodical and transparent way speaks to how seriously it was treated and how seriously the internal investigation that was the basis for the outside review was conducted."

A message left for Keenan Tuesday was not returned before The Sun went to press.

Corliss was initially placed on paid administrative leave in September 2015 as the internal investigation began. Koch in December suspended Corliss six months without pay following the department's investigation and reassigned the lieutenant away from his post as commander of the Special Operations Unit. Corliss was also barred from working details for 12 months and forfeited 20 vacation days.

In a December 2015 statement, Keenan said an internal investigation found 21 instances of Corliss working city time overlapping with private details and/or other city time and that the investigation revealed the lieutenant took nine vacation days that were not recorded in department attendance records. The value of those incidents, according to Keenan, was $11,000.

Corliss was placed on paid administrative leave earlier this year once the suspension concluded pending the result of the federal investigation. Chris Walker, a spokesman for Koch, said Corliss' status would be re-

Back-To-School A Perfect Time To Paint

Now that school bells are once again ringing, it's a great time to ring in the fall home painting season, according to Debbie Zimmer, paint and color expert at the Paint Quality Institute.

"With kids out of the house, interior painting is several grades easier, and with proper planning, you can ace the job in record time," says Zimmer, who offers some tips for mom and dad painters with school-age children:

Start by finishing your "homework" early, she advises. Pick up color cards at your local paint store, plan out your color scheme, and purchase paint and sundries ahead of time, not on the day you want to paint. Also, favor top quality 100% acrylic latex paint in a glossier finish to get a painted surface that is more "kid-proof", i.e. easier to clean.

The night before painting, slide furniture away from the walls and cover it. Wipe down the surfaces you'll be painting, and patch any nicks or holes in the walls. Remove switchplates and outlet covers. Then apply painter's tape as necessary to protect the ceiling, woodwork, and anything else you want to keep free of paint.

"With shopping and prep work completed beforehand, you'll be able to plunge right into your painting as soon as the morning school bus leaves," says Zimmer.

Begin your painting by doing the largest wall first. When you finish that, you'll have an immediate sense of accomplishment and confidence that you can complete the job before the kids return.

Use an angled trim brush to "cut in" the edges of the wall – applying a 3-inch strip of paint where the wall meets the ceiling, and adjacent to doors, windows and molding. Then use a roller to cover the wall in 3-foot by 3-foot sections, working from one side of the wall to the other. Roll out the paint in a "W" pattern, then fill in the pattern and move on to the next section.

Repeat the process on the second-largest wall, and proceed from one wall to the next until you finish the room. If you must stop painting to pick up the kids, or for any other reason, don't stop mid-wall or you may be left with a visible line in your paint color.

If you are also painting the trim, the best practice is to wait until the next day. However, if you started your project early enough and the walls are completely dry, you can move right on to that phase of the job.

Starting with the first wall you painted (where the paint is driest), apply painter's tape to the wall right next to the trim. Taping off the woodwork in this way will not only speed your painting, it will also give the room a neater finished appearance.

Using a 2-inch angled brush, work from top to bottom, painting crown moldings and chair rails (if any) first. Same thing with doors and windows – paint from the top down, so you can smooth out drips as you go. Paint the baseboards last. Then allow all the trim to dry overnight before removing the tape.

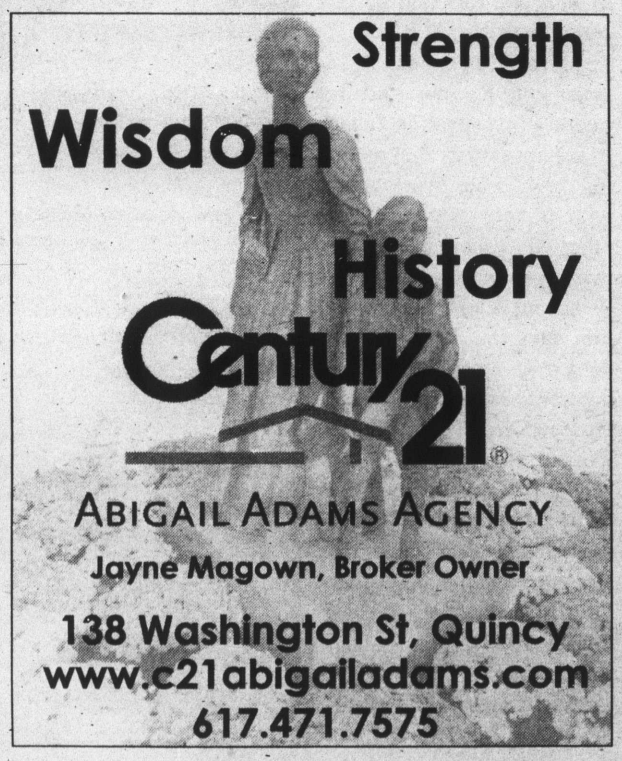

Once the tape is gone, stand back and admire your handiwork. And thank your lucky stars that school is back in session: It makes things a lot easier when it comes to home painting!

Back-To-School Energy-Efficiency 'Smart' Tips From National Grid

It's that time of the year again. Summer is nearly over and students are heading back to class. National Grid reminds students and their families to keep energy efficiency and safety in mind while checking off that back to school supply list.

"By taking some simple steps to use appliances more efficiently, and purchasing energy efficient products, students can save both energy and money without sacrificing the comfort of their local school environments," said Terry Sobolewski, chief customer officer, National Grid.

If you are shopping for a new computer, choose one with an ENERGY STAR® rating to save both energy and money in the long term. ENERGY STAR ® computers are up to 70 percent more efficient than their unrated counterparts. For a list of participating manufacturers and models, visit https://www.energystar.gov/. Also, choosing a laptop rather than a desktop model can save you as much as $40 per year and can increase efficiency by up to 85 percent.

Below are more energy-efficiency tips to help you select great back-to-school products and reduce energy consumption throughout the year:

• Consider investing in an 'Advanced Power Strip' that allows you to leave power flowing through selected items such as computers or DVRs, but powers down everything else while not in use, preventing energy loss.

• Switch to light emitting diode (LED) bulbs. For each standard incandescent bulb you replace with an LED, you can save $10 or more on your electric costs over the life of the bulb. You get more hours of illumination and three to four times more lighting efficiency. LEDs have a life expectancy of 21 years, compared to one year for standard incandescent bulbs.

• For a list of retailers in the National Grid territory offering rebates on Advanced Power Strips and LED desk lamps, click here: http://bit.ly/2bFLo3i.

• Many consumer electronics continue to use power, even when turned off. Unplug cell phone chargers, laptops, video game consoles or anything with "instant on" features to save up to 29 kWh and as much as $4 a month.

• Turn off lights, appliances, TVs, stereos and computers when not in use or while you are away from home to save up to 58 kWh and as much as $9 per month.

• Cook with lids on your pots and pans. For example, cooking spaghetti without a lid on the pot can use three times more energy than if the lid were left on.

• If you sometimes return home after dark or in bad weather, consider adding timers to your light fixtures. This way, you can turn your lights off when you leave and have them already on when you come home.

• Consider LED or solar-powered desk lamps. They provide softer task lighting and use far less energy.

Electricity safety tips for students:

• Avoid the danger of overloading electrical outlets with too many appliances such as computers, TVs, DVD players and video game consoles on the same circuit.

• Use surge protectors to safeguard against voltage changes during a storm.

• Use a power strip to safely organize and connect appliances to wall sockets and circuits with the appropriate voltage to accommodate the electric load.

West Of Chestnut 50% Pre-Leased; Newest Building Opens Thursday

West of Chestnut announced Monday that over 50 percent of its new luxury apartments are pre-leased and residents will begin moving into the newly completed second building in Quincy Center today (Thursday).

West of Chestnut features 169 residential units in downtown Quincy. The studio, one- and two-bedroom units in two six-story urban midrise buildings will also offer two restaurants, a fitness studio, and a café/bakery.

"Living at West of Chestnut gives residents the best of the Boston area's dynamic amenities, nightlife and dining without the high prices," said Kyle B. Warwick, a principal of Gate Residential – the project's developer. "This is an exciting time for us and the City of Quincy as we welcome new residents and celebrate another important milestone in the transformation of downtown Quincy."

Japanese fusion restaurant Fuji, KKatie's Burger Bar, and OrangeTheory Fitness studio will all be opening this fall. West of Chestnut also expects to add a café-bakery to join its list of outward-facing amenities. Other features at West of Chestnut include a cross-training studio, a club suite with a lounge and media room, a dog-wash room, and an outdoor kitchen, fireplace and courtyard.

Gate Residential will celebrate the project's opening at West of Chestnut Wednesday, Oct. 12 at 5:30 p.m.

Gate Residential began construction on West of Chestnut last year following the 2014 announcement of a new joint venture with landowner Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Quincy Mutual, which has been in continuous operation in Quincy since it was founded in 1851, is a major investor in the downtown redevelopment.

West of Chestnut is one of many new developments set for Quincy Center, which will include the renovated Quincy Center MBTA station, the newly-remodeled City Hall, and the expected Adams Green urban park. A second phase of West of Chestnut, called East of Chestnut – featuring 220 units with additional amenity and retail space, is also planned.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, Aug. 21 at approximately 2:06 p.m., Officer Ken Wood was dispatched to Phipps Street for an incident involving a knife.

Upon arrival, the officer met with the caller who is the Mother of a local convent. She stated that one of her Sisters had an altercation with two young females earlier in the day and that one of the girls had a knife. When asked why she didn't call immediately, the Mother said that they needed time to pray and reflect.

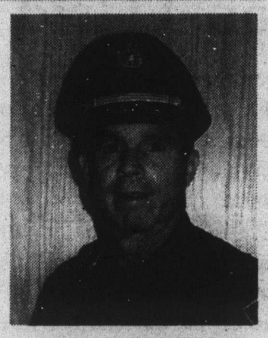

Officer Wood interviewed the Sister/victim who appeared nervous and shaken up. She said the following: at approximately 11:15 a.m., she departed the convent on Phipps Street to go for a walk for her exercise time. She was dressed in work out clothes that consisted of athletic pants and shirt. As she approached Water and Phipps Street, she observed two females hanging around the area. She continued on her walk and as she returned on her loop she saw the females again.

As she waited to cross the street, one of the females came up on her left side and attempted to take a small satchel out of her left hand. The Sister told the female that she didn't have any money at which point the female asked her, "Are you sure about that?" The Sister physically resisted the female from taking the small satchel which contained rosary beads, a key, and a small memento. During the struggle, the other female moved in and acted as a look out.

The Sister then saw that the female struggling with her was now holding a small knife against her (the Sister's) stomach. The female said, "I'm not going to hurt you." The Sister attempted to calm the female down and opened her satchel to show the contents at which point the female stated, "I guess I'll take the rosary beads." When the females moved away, the Sister crossed the street and ran back to the convent. She did not know which direction the females fled in. The Sister provided descriptions of the two females.

Officer Wood advised the Mother and the Sister that officers would scour the area but due to the time lapse, it would be difficult to find the suspects. After giving out the descriptions of the suspects, Officer Wood checked the area and came upon a car in the middle of the road blocking traffic on to Kendrick Avenue. He observed two occupants exiting the back seats. The first one out the rear passenger side was a female matching the description provided by the Sister. Another female came out of the back seat and she matched the description too.

The officer advised Quincy Police Communications that he was encountering the suspects. The vehicle then began backing up forcing Officer Wood to back up. When the vehicle pulled into a driveway on Kendrick Avenue, the officer exited his cruiser and approached the two suspects.

LT. DAN MINTON

The operator of the vehicle got out and walked into the back yard as he glared at the officer. Due to the violent nature of the crime, Officer Wood had both females sit on a nearby wall and advised them to keep their hands out of their pockets. Officers James Parisi and Steve Cleary arrived on scene and handcuffed the two females. Officers checked the surrounding yards for the driver and spoke with a tenant who said that he had never seen the car before.

Officer Wood then interviewed the females after they waived their Miranda rights. Female #1 admitted that she had been arrested before for possession of heroin. She was asked about the driver that walked away and she said she only knew him as "G." She denied buying heroin from him because "I didn't' have the $20 to buy from him." With this information Officer Wood took out his canine partner Major to perform a track of the driver to ascertain his identity and involvement.

Major began by tracking from the vehicle into the yard of Kendrick Ave and then took a right down a small wall into the adjoining yard on Phipps Street. Major continued to track through two more yards on Phipps Street before losing the scent. During this time, Officer Parisi located a small locking knife, 6 cellphones of various make and models, a checkbook for a male out of Weymouth but no rosary beads.

Having two suspects in custody, Officer Acevedo was dispatched to the convent to pick up the Sister to have her identify the two females as the assailants. Upon arrival, the Sister confirmed that one of the females was the one who took her rosary beads and held a knife to her. She then confirmed the identity of the second female due to her unusual hair color. The knife was shown to the Sister and she confirmed that it was the knife. Officer Wood then showed the Sister two sets of rosary beads that were hanging in the vehicle that the females exited and she stated that they were not hers.

The vehicle in question was towed as a trespass after residents stated that they didn't know who owned it. While the vehicle was being towed, Officer Mahoney drove to the owner's address on Smith Street and asked her who was using her car. The owner said it was a person named "G" but did not know his real name and only had a cellphone number for him.

The vehicle was then searched for the rosary beads. The vehicle was filled with bags of clothes, hats, sneakers, pillows, and food. On the floor of the passenger compartment in plain view was a pill bottle with the name of a male on it. Officer Wood queried the name and came back with two results for driver's licenses. He positively identified one of them as the driver of the vehicle.

A check of the male's drivers license showed he had a suspended license, along with 24 court appearances, including such offenses as on his BOP including open cases for uttering, larceny by check, A&B on a police officer, possession w/ intent to distribute class B, disturbing the peace, disorderly conduct, possession w/ intent to distribute class C, unarmed robbery, and resisting arrest.

While writing this report, Officer Bossart investigated a report of a past breaking and entering on Water Street where 3 cellphones, a pair of shorts, and $400 were taken. Three of the cellphones that were in one of the female suspect's property were positively identified as the phones taken from the Water Street break.

Female suspect #1, a 27 year-old Somerville resident, was charged with armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon (knife) and breaking and entering in the daytime to commit a felony.

The second female, also 27 and from Somerville, was charged with armed robbery and accessory after the fact. "G" would be summonsed to court for his suspended license. Nice Work!

SCHOOLS OPEN SOON: Too often we see very young children either walking too far ahead or behind a parent. It doesn't take much for a child to be distracted and run into the street or not notice a vehicle backing out of a driveway. The parent is just too far away to react in time to protect the child. By initially holding the young child's hand and regularly talking about walking safety, the chances of the child being hurt in an accident can be reduced.

Social Security Covers Children Battling Cancer

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

The effects of cancer on our society are devastating for those directly and indirectly dealing with the disease. Sadly, thousands of people under the age of 20 are diagnosed with cancer every year, and it remains the leading cause of disease-related death for children. We honor the courage of children who are battling the many forms of cancer, as well as the young people who lost their lives to these terrible diseases.

Securing today and tomorrow

Social Security provides benefits for children who suffer from many disabling diseases, including some forms of cancer. These benefits could help with the additional costs of caring for an ill child. Although children haven't paid Social Security taxes and, thus, cannot be covered for Social Security disability benefits, they may receive disability benefits through the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. SSI pays benefits to disabled children who have limited income and resources.

If you wish to apply for benefits for your child, you'll need to complete an application for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and a Child Disability Report. The report collects information about your child's disabling condition, and about how it affects his or her ability to function.

Here are the steps to apply.

• Review the Child Disability Starter Kit. This kit answers common questions about applying for SSI benefits for children, and includes a worksheet that will help you gather the information you will need. You can view the starter kit at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits_child_eng.htm.

• The SSI program has strict limits on the amount of income and assets you can have. It is a "needs-based" program for people who have low family income and resources. Contact Social Security right away to find out if the income and resources of the parents and the child are within the allowed limits, and to start the SSI application process.

• Fill out the online Child Disability Report. At the end of the report, we'll ask you to sign a form that gives the child's doctor(s) permission to give us information about the child's disability. We need this information to make a decision on your child's application. The Child Disability Report is available in the Child Disability Starter Kit.

Social Security also has an obligation to provide benefits quickly to applicants whose medical conditions are so serious that they obviously meet our strict disability standards. Social Security's Compassionate Allowances program enables us to quickly identify diseases and other medical conditions that invariably qualify under the listing of impairments based on minimal objective medical information. The Compassionate Allowances list allows Social Security to identify the most seriously disabled people for allowances based on objective medical information that we can obtain quickly. Compassionate Allowances is not a separate program from the SSI program. Learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

Social Security is here to provide benefits for the most vulnerable members of our society — including children with severe disabilities. If you or anyone in your family needs assistance, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

Pack 6 Cub Scout Registration Sept. 7, Sept. 14

Pack 6 Quincy is registering boys for the 2016 – 2017 scouting season on Wednesday, September 7th and 14th.

Enrollment is open for all boys from Kindergarten to 5th grade. Registration will be held at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. between 6 and 9 p.m.

Registration fee is $100. The fee includes one year of scouting program, weekly den meetings, monthly themed pack meetings, Boy Life Magazine, unlimited access to the New England Base Camp activities in the Blue Hills, Pack T-shirt, Pinewood derby car, Rain Gutter Regatta sailboat and awards. Meeting days for most groups are Wednesday nights at 6:30 p.m., Lion Cubs are Mondays at 6:30 p.m.

Programs offered are:

• Lion Cubs (Kindergarten) – This is a once-a-month meeting that is designed to introduce Kindergarten grade boys and their adult partners to Cub Scouting. Boys will work on a theme each month that focuses on core scouting values such as Citizenship, Staying Fit and Helping Others.

• Tiger Cubs (Grade 1) – In the Tiger Cub program each boy/adult pair selects a theme from one of 17 "Big Ideas." Each month there are two den meetings and one field trip. The Tiger Cub and his family are encouraged to attend the monthly Cub Scout pack meeting.

• Cub Scouts (Grade 2 – 3) - Cub Scouts can be fun and fulfilling for the boys by recognizing personal achievement and strengthens family understanding as adult family members work with boys on advancement projects. During their work at home and in the den, they earn beads as evidence that they are "progressing toward rank."

• Webelos (Grade 4 - 5) - These older Cub Scouts prepare for the transition into Boy Scouts. They earn activity badge pins in up to 20 activity areas that introduce them to a myriad of topics. More independence is evidenced as the boys completing many of their activities outside the den setting. Besides the Webelos badge and activity pins, these boys strive to earn the Arrow of Light badge, Cub Scouting's highest honor.

In addition to the programs offered for each grade level, the Cub Scout pack also runs activities throughout the year which include: Museum of Science Overnight trip, Pawtucket Red Sox Overnight Trip, camping trip to Blue hills, Battleship Cove / USS Massachusetts overnight trip, hiking trips to many various local destinations to mention just a few of the other optional activities.

"Pack 6 Quincy is the oldest continuously run cubs scout pack in the Greater Boston area," said Cubmaster Brian Laroche. "Our success and longevity are due to are many dedicated volunteers who have been active with the program for many years. Social Security Covers Children Battling Cancer

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

The effects of cancer on our society are devastating for those directly and indirectly dealing with the disease. Sadly, thousands of people under the age of 20 are diagnosed with cancer every year, and it remains the leading cause of disease-related death for children. We honor the courage of children who are battling the many forms of cancer, as well as the young people who lost their lives to these terrible diseases.

Securing today and tomorrow

Social Security provides benefits for children who suffer from many disabling diseases, including some forms of cancer. These benefits could help with the additional costs of caring for an ill child. Although children haven't paid Social Security taxes and, thus, cannot be covered for Social Security disability benefits, they may receive disability benefits through the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. SSI pays benefits to disabled children who have limited income and resources.

If you wish to apply for benefits for your child, you'll need to complete an application for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and a Child Disability Report. The report collects information about your child's disabling condition, and about how it affects his or her ability to function.

Here are the steps to apply.

• Review the Child Disability Starter Kit. This kit answers common questions about applying for SSI benefits for children, and includes a worksheet that will help you gather the information you will need. You can view the starter kit at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits_child_eng.htm.

• The SSI program has strict limits on the amount of income and assets you can have. It is a "needs-based" program for people who have low family income and resources. Contact Social Security right away to find out if the income and resources of the parents and the child are within the allowed limits, and to start the SSI application process.

• Fill out the online Child Disability Report. At the end of the report, we'll ask you to sign a form that gives the child's doctor(s) permission to give us information about the child's disability. We need this information to make a decision on your child's application. The Child Disability Report is available in the Child Disability Starter Kit.

Social Security also has an obligation to provide benefits quickly to applicants whose medical conditions are so serious that they obviously meet our strict disability standards. Social Security's Compassionate Allowances program enables us to quickly identify diseases and other medical conditions that invariably qualify under the listing of impairments based on minimal objective medical information. The Compassionate Allowances list allows Social Security to identify the most seriously disabled people for allowances based on objective medical information that we can obtain quickly. Compassionate Allowances is not a separate program from the SSI program. Learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

Social Security is here to provide benefits for the most vulnerable members of our society — including children with severe disabilities. If you or anyone in your family needs assistance, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/disability. •

Pack 6 Quincy is registering boys for the 2016 – 2017 scouting season on Wednesday, September 7th and 14th.

Enrollment is open for all boys from Kindergarten to 5th grade. Registration will be held at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. between 6 and 9 p.m.

Registration fee is $100. The fee includes one year of scouting program, weekly den meetings, monthly themed pack meetings, Boy Life Magazine, unlimited access to the New England Base Camp activities in the Blue Hills, Pack T-shirt, Pinewood derby car, Rain Gutter Regatta sailboat and awards. Meeting days for most groups are Wednesday nights at 6:30 p.m., Lion Cubs are Mondays at 6:30 p.m.

Programs offered are:

• Lion Cubs (Kindergarten) – This is a once-a-month meeting that is designed to introduce Kindergarten grade boys and their adult partners to Cub Scouting. Boys will work on a theme each month that focuses on core scouting values such as Citizenship, Staying Fit and Helping Others.

• Tiger Cubs (Grade 1) – In the Tiger Cub program each boy/adult pair selects a theme from one of 17 "Big Ideas." Each month there are two den meetings and one field trip. The Tiger Cub and his family are encouraged to attend the monthly Cub Scout pack meeting.

• Cub Scouts (Grade 2 – 3) - Cub Scouts can be fun and fulfilling for the boys by recognizing personal achievement and strengthens family understanding as adult family members work with boys on advancement projects. During their work at home and in the den, they earn beads as evidence that they are "progressing toward rank."

• Webelos (Grade 4 - 5) - These older Cub Scouts prepare for the transition into Boy Scouts. They earn activity badge pins in up to 20 activity areas that introduce them to a myriad of topics. More independence is evidenced as the boys completing many of their activities outside the den setting. Besides the Webelos badge and activity pins, these boys strive to earn the Arrow of Light badge, Cub Scouting's highest honor.

In addition to the programs offered for each grade level, the Cub Scout pack also runs activities throughout the year which include: Museum of Science Overnight trip, Pawtucket Red Sox Overnight Trip, camping trip to Blue hills, Battleship Cove / USS Massachusetts overnight trip, hiking trips to many various local destinations to mention just a few of the other optional activities.

"Pack 6 Quincy is the oldest continuously run cubs scout pack in the Greater Boston area," said Cubmaster Brian Laroche. "Our success and longevity are due to are many dedicated volunteers who have been active with the program for many years. We strive very hard to offer a well-run, varied program that is constantly changing to expose our families to all that scouting has to offer."

viewed in light of the indictment.

Corliss joined the Quincy Police Department in 1993, according to the indictment, and promoted to the rank of lieutenant in approximately 2004. He was the commanding officer of the Special Operations Unit from 2005 until 2015.

The indictment states Corliss received $265,568 in compensation in 2015, including $83,383 in salary, $27,580 in additional salary because of his educational degree, $104,498 in overtime and detail pay, a uniform/clothing stipend of $1,912, a stipend for meals and weekend differential pay of $1,572, a yearly stipend for reading for $4,169, and cashed-in, unused vacation days totaling $4,035.

The City Council in February appropriated $38,922 to the Police Department to purchase a new payroll software system meant to flag any potential abuse in the hours officers put in for – including regular pay, overtime and details. Keenan had requested those funds, seeking to replace the previous system, which was primarily handwritten.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin
(Never Known To Fail)

O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Vine, Splendor of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. The prayer must be said for three consecutive days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. J.O. 9/1

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mars, your ruling planet, helps you deal with career challenges in a way that reflects some of your own hidden strengths. This impresses some important decision-makers.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your strong Bovine will, combined with your romantic nature (you are ruled by Venus), helps turn a romance with a potential for problems into one with more-positive possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Mercury's influence creates some unsettling moments, but nothing that you can't live with. You'll soon learn more about that major change that is about to be revealed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Opportunities for you are like the phases of the Moon: constantly appearing and reappearing. So, cheer up. The opportunity you think you let slip by will be replaced by another.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An opportunity that you hoped would open up for you remains closed. Stop wasting time scratching at it. Something else you'll like will soon make itself apparent and accessible.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. You'll soon hear some positive feedback for all the hard work you recently put into a project. A Pisces could soon swim into your personal life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone whose friendship you felt you had to write off will try to revive it. What you do is up to you. But don't do it without giving it considerable thought.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A job-related plan might need to be reworked to allow for changes. Lucky for you that Saturn remains a strong influence that can help you focus on getting it done right.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to move into areas of self-discovery. You might be surprised about who you really are and how you really relate to those around you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Expect to confront someone who will make an unwelcome request. Stand by your resolve to do the right thing no matter what "persuasion" might be offered.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friendly competition could become more contentious than you expected. Take time out to discuss the reasons behind this unexpected change, and act accordingly.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You have a wonderful mind for solving mysteries, so you should feel confident about solving the one developing very close to you. An unlikely source offers help.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a great host or hostess. You love being with people, and you're very good about planning all sorts of social events that bring folks together.

"This is going to be a world class space," he said. "This will add to the quality of life. What a great place to have a bagged lunch."

Old City Hall features several meeting rooms where Marsden said the community is encouraged to use. One room once served as the police station and the original lockup – a narrow, dark room lined with bricks on the ceiling and wall - has been left for tourists to check out.

Another room's wall prominently featured Quincy's granite. Its rough surface indicates it was an outside wall.

The next stop was "The Great Hall" where the Quincy City Council meets. The space features a new horseshoe shaped desk for the councillors. Marsden said he hopes schoolchildren and adults would come in and sit in the seats.

Marsden then led the group outside to the adjacent Hancock Cemetery where some of Quincy's notable figures are buried. The graves of Col. John Quincy, for whom the city is named, and Leonard Hoar, who served as Harvard University president in the 1670s, were among the stops in the cemetery.

Following the tour of Old City Hall and the Hancock Cemetery, visitors can continue on to the United First Parish Church across the street where presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their respective wives Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams are entombed in the church crypt. The city has teamed up with the church to have it included as part of the tour.

City officials hope to make the tours a permanent fixture beyond the pilot program as part of the revitalization of downtown Quincy.

City Receives $67,500 Grant

mantown residents, plan for adaptation alternatives, develop a cost benefit analysis for each alternative and with the input of the community, prioritize these alternatives for implementation. Deirdre added, "A major goal of this project is to engage and empower community residents to ensure that Germantown's diverse populations have significant input in the prioritization of alternatives."

"Proactive planning and education are the tools of preparedness," said DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi. "This grant is a testament to the commitment that our Department has made to meet the challenges of today and of the future. I am also proud of the way the men and women of the DPW continue to rise to the challenges in their day-to-day service to our community."

CZM's Coastal Resilience Grant Program provides support for innovative local efforts to increase awareness and understanding of climate impacts, plan for changing conditions, redesign vulnerable infrastructure and implement measures that use natural or non-structural approaches as an alternative to hard structures like seawalls and groins. Grants can be used for planning, public outreach and feasibility assessment and analysis of shoreline, as well as for design, permitting, construction and monitoring of projects that provide storm damage protection and enhance natural resources.

"Through the Coastal Resilience Grant Program, CZM works directly with communities to develop solutions to the difficult and expanding problems of coastal erosion and storm damage," said CZM Director Bruce Carlisle. He thanked communities like Quincy for their commitment to addressing climate change impacts and looks forward to sharing the techniques developed through these projects with other coastal communities to help them address similar issues.

Bellotti and county commissioners Francis O'Brien and Joseph Shea. Voters in Norfolk Country are electing two commissioners this year.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo said she expects a turnout of between 11 and 12 percent of the city's registered voters – 57,198 residents are registered to vote, including 22,361 Democrats, 4,996 Republicans and 29,056 unenrolled voters.

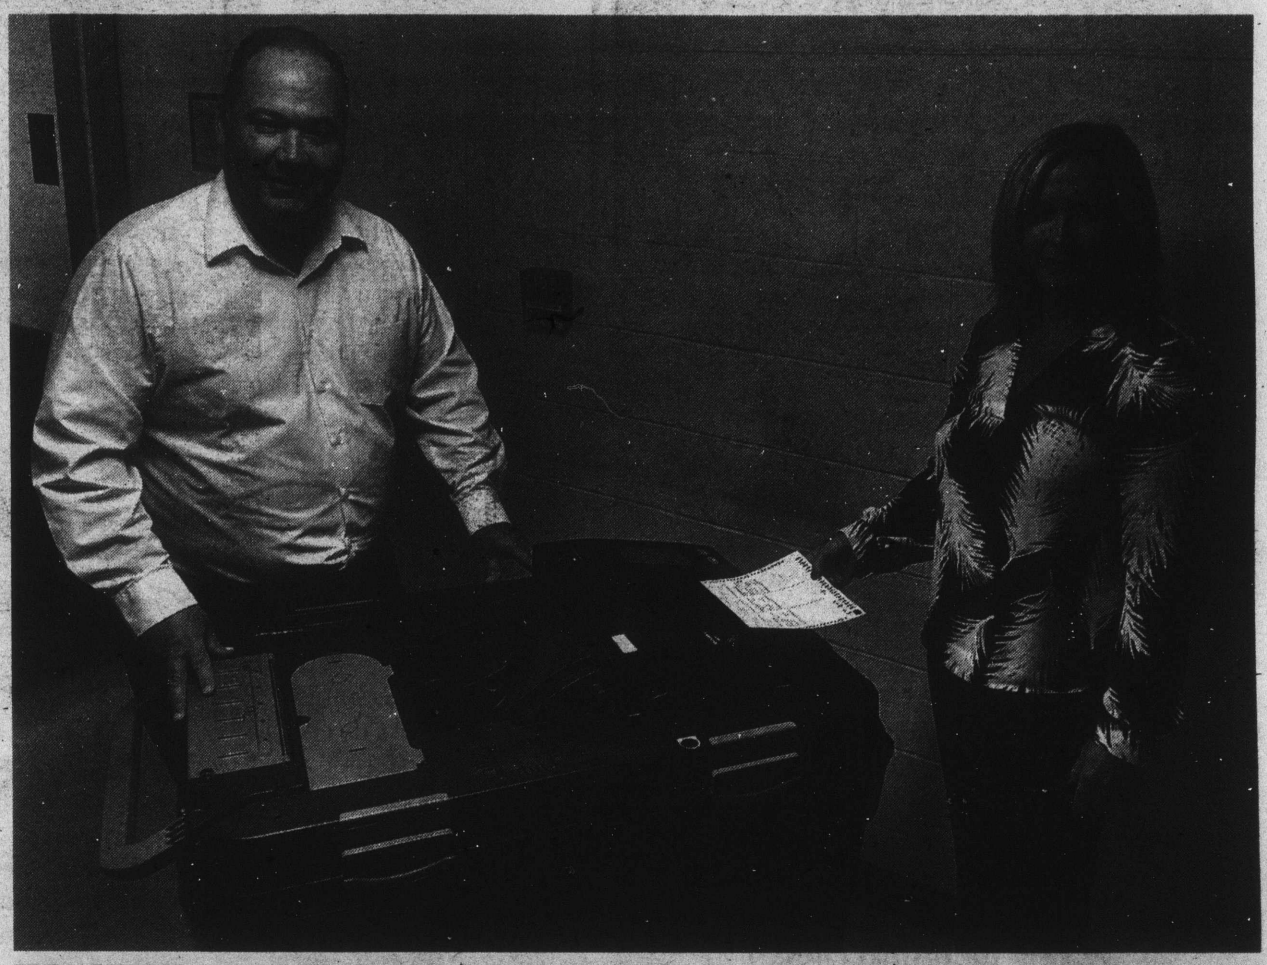

Crispo based her estimate on the turnout for the previous two state primaries held leading into presidential races. Quincy's turnout in 2008 was 13.68 percent; in 2012, turnout in the city was 9.15 percent.

The winners in the primary will advance to the Nov. 8 election, which is headlined by the presidential race between Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton and Republican nominee Donald Trump. Others on the presidential ballot could include Libertarian Gary Johnson and the Green Party's Jill Stein.

Voters in Quincy will also cast ballots in two contested races Nov. 8.

Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is facing a challenge from Republican William Burke of Quincy in the contest to represent Massachusetts' eighth congressional district on Capitol Hill.

Keenan is opposed by Alexander Mendez, who is running as an independent candidate, in the race to represent Quincy and the rest of the Norfolk and Plymouth district on Beacon Hill. Both candidates are Quincy residents.

PRIMARY PREP – Assistant City Clerk Joseph Newton (left) and City Clerk Nicole Crispo test a ballot tabulator that will count ballots in Thursday's state primary election. Polls will be open in Quincy's 31 voting precincts today (Thursday) from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. There is only one contested race Thursday. Incumbent Chris Iannella faces a challenge by Stephen F. THE HEIGHT OF FASHION

While we have grown accustomed to seeing diamond jewelry adorning the ears, necks, wrists, and fingers of fashionable women, diamond anklets make a statement like no other. Of course, ankle bracelets are emblematic of the "bohemian" style, which longs for freedom and yearns to break all the rules with behavior that shuns stereotypes. In this respect, anklets that shimmer and drape sexily around the ankle draw attention to the part of women's bodies that were first liberated from the oppression of skin-covering long dresses. Now with miniskirts and short shorts, ankle bracelets serve as punctuation at the end of a long declaration of independence. For a more subtle statement, wear a diamond anklet with a classic pair of black pumps.

When wearing an anklet, almost anything goes. Wearing one depends on your personal style and taste and on what you feel comfortable with wearing. Some may prefer to wear an anklet all year while others opt to wear one only during the summer. For more information, please call Rogers Jewelry at 617-773-3636. We invite you to stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

A Day Of Tragedy – And Perseverence

Editor's note: Sunday marks the 15th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks - a national tragedy that killed nearly 3,000 people and injured more than 6,000. The horrific events of that day still reverberate today. Thousands more have been killed or wounded in the fight against terrorism and defending our freedom. To mark Sunday's anniversary, we are re-running a column that appeared five years ago on the 10th anniversary of 9-11.

We all know where we were when we heard the news that profoundly tragic day.

Fifteen years later, Sept. 11 should also be remembered for what didn't happen.

The terrorist attacks in New York, Washington, D.C. and in Pennsylvania did not stop our cherished right to vote.

Under sparkling sunshine and deep blue skies, the polls opened at 7 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 11, 2001. It was preliminary election day in Quincy with four contests on the ballot: councillor at-large and councillor in Wards 3, 5 and 6.

It seemed like any other election day. Outside the polling precincts, candidates and supporters held signs and greeted voters. Inside, election workers streamlined the voting process.

Then, the day's normalcy was shattered.

A few short hours after the polls had opened, there were reports of a plane hitting one of the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City. Moments later, another plane into the other tower. Then two more hijacked planes. One struck the Pentagon; the other targeted the Capitol or the White House but crashed in Pennsylvania after passengers tried to take control of it.

A day from hell had dawned.

In Quincy, news of the attacks spread in jaw-dropping speed.

Staff here at the Sun stared glassy-eyed as we watched in horror when the Towers fell.

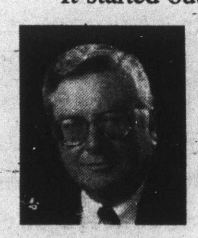

We also realized we had a newspaper to put out – and an election to cover.

The right call was made: city officials decided to keep the polls open.

Voting continued and democracy prevailed. Moreover, the American way of life had persevered in light of unspeakable horror and cowardly acts of terrorism.

Here are some reflections from some who lived through that terrible September day, in their own words.

Former City Clerk Joseph Shea:

SHEA

"It started out as a normal election day. The police came between 5:30 and 6:30 a.m. and took the election machines out to the precincts. I started my appointed rounds (visiting the polling precincts). Detective Joe Manning, who was assigned to the License Board was working an extra shift that day so he was working with me. We came back to City Hall about 9 a.m.

"Within a few minutes (after the first plane struck one of the World Trade Center towers), Joe Manning heard some sort of message over his police radio. He said to me, 'something serious is happening in New York.'

"We came in and looked at the TV and we couldn't believe it. From then on, I was fielding questions from my (election) workers and some from the public about whether we should stop the election.

"I called Secretary of State William Galvin's office. He was aware of the events. About 31 cities in Massachusetts were having elections that day.

"I talked to Secretary Galvin about two or three times. I spoke with (then) Mayor (James) Sheets and City Solicitor Steve McGrath. It was my opinion that we shouldn't cancel (the election) because some people had already voted. It was two hours into the day.

"I think – and this may be an afterthought – that whomever did this – we found out later it was al-Qaeda – that's probably what they would have wanted: to disrupt everything.

"We decided not to cancel the election and Galvin concurred."

Keeping the polls open underscored the premise that no one – even terrorists – would interrupt our way of life.

"I remember having that conversation with Solicitor McGrath and Secretary of State Galvin," Shea continued. "Bill Galvin is always a good resource and when it comes to election things you defer to him. We're in charge of city elections – which is what we had on Sept. 11 – but he is in charge of state elections and we always use his people (for guidance). I got right through to him several times that day.

"We went on with the election but it was a very eerie day. Everywhere I went, people wanted to know what was going on. I deal with 180 election workers and 30 precincts. They didn't have access to TVs and they didn't know what was going on. So at every stop you had to re-explain it.

"Some workers wanted to go home, but most just wanted to know what was going on.

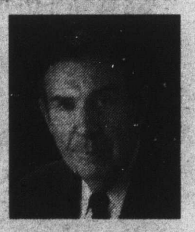

"After the polls closed and the ballots started coming in, it was clear most people's attention was not focused on the election. For me personally it was a very difficult day – election time is always difficult. My wife (Josephine) was in Santa Fe, New Mexico and couldn't get out of there. It took her a week to get home."

To compound matters even more, their daughter Katherine broke her leg the night before playing soccer.

Shea said he believes the terrorist attacks did not affect voter turnout nor did it influence the outcome.

"I think turnout was reasonably good for a city preliminary – about 29 percent. That's about average. I don't think it changed the outcome. Did it press (turnout) down a few percent? Possibly but in 2009 the turnout was 29 percent. There was no primary in 2007 and in 2005 it was 12 percent."

Former Mayor Frank McCauley:

McCAULEY

"I was a candidate for re-nomination as a councillor at-large that day and as was my habit over the years I made my first stop at the Squantum School where residents in Ward 6 Precinct 5 voted. Squantum consistently produced the highest turnout of voters over the years in any precinct in the City and I arrived at 6:45 a.m. that morning intending to catch the early bird voters and stay until about 8:30 a.m.

"Leaving Squantum, my next stop was at the Beechwood Knoll School which had two voting precincts. It was here that a parish priest from St. Ann's Church in Wollaston told of a plane striking one of the World Trade Center towers in New York City. I immediately thought of an incident that happened in the fall of 1945 when an Army Air Force plane crashed into the Empire State Building.

"While those of us at the entrance of the polling place were digesting the news, a fellow drove up to report that a second plane had struck the other World Trade Center tower! At this point we knew these crashes were not accidents!

"Our secure life in the United States had come to an end!"

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN old postcard from the Harvard Aeronautical Society's 1910 aero meet at Squantum 106 years ago this week. Over $60,000 in prizes, $1.5 million in today's dollars, were offered for the newly developed propeller driven aircraft to set records at the meet, only the second to be held in the United States. Other contests attracted a human powered helicopter, two mankites and this propeller driven dirigible piloted by Cromwell Dixon who was only a teenager. He was to fly this balloon from Squantum to Beacon Hill, but he mistook the Christian Science Mother Church as the dome of the State House and lost the contest. Now the site of The Moorings at Squantum Gardens and The Kennedy Senior Center, the 500-acre field setup for this meet later became the Dennison Airport and then the Squantum Naval Air Station. Celebrating Diwali And A New Forever Stamp

A Diwali Forever Stamp, finally!

It is with great excitement and joy that the Indian American community will be celebrating Diwali "Festival of Lights" this year due to the announcement of the US Postal Service, finally, of release of a Diwali Forever Stamp on Oct. 5th, 2016.

Diwali, which falls on Oct. 30 this year, celebrates triumph of light over darkness and good over evil and is celebrated worldwide by more than a billion followers of Hinduism, Sikhism and Jainism. Diwali is a shortened version of the Sanskrit word Deepavali, which roughly translates as "a necklace of lights."

During Diwali, the flickering oil-wick diyas (or lamps) sprinkle the homes of observers around the world.

The Indian American community across the U.S. along with members of Congress and other elected officials have been trying for many years to have a stamp for Diwali joining other holidays like Hanukkah, Kwanzaa, Christmas and Eid. I would like to thank U.S. Cong. Stephen Lynch, who was on the U.S. Postal Sub Committee for writing a strong letter of support for issuance of a Diwali stamp to the USPS Postmaster General on my request, recognizing the community and my efforts over the years.

Yakoo 'Non-Issue Drummed Up By Liberal Left'

It sure looks like the people who are most offended by the Indian mascots of professional, college and high school teams are not Native Americans but rather social justice "warriors."

In May 2016, the Washington Post polled 504 Native Americans from all age groups, income brackets and sexes and asked them "the professional football team in Washington calls itself the Washington Redskins.

"As a Native American do you find that name offensive, or doesn't it bother you?"

Ninety (90) percent of respondents said it did not bother them!

A national poll done by Annenberg Public Policy Center in 2004 had similar results!

Sure seems like this is just a non issue drummed up by the Liberal left !

Lamb Chops, Peppers & Ziti

By MARIE

While at the market last week I found great looking lamp chops (and as luck would have it, they were on sale)! So instead of just cooking lamb chops I decided to make a unique lamb concoction with the inclusion of onions, peppers and tomato sauce.

The combination of ingredients made this a delicious dish especially when served over ziti.

RECIPE:

4 lamb chops
1 green pepper sliced
1 red pepper sliced
1 small onion chopped
2 cloves of garlic chopped
3 tablespoons of olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon basil
2 cups tomato sauce
½ cup of half and half

In hot oil sauté garlic and onion and then add lamb chops cooking slowly until browned on each side. Add tomato sauce, basil, half and half and the peppers. (Peppers don't take too long to cook.) Simmer until peppers are very tender.

Cook pasta according to directions and pour lamb sauce mixture over the cooked ziti (or pasta of your choice). Sprinkle with either Parmesan or Romano cheese.

Simple Breakfast Smoothie For Kids

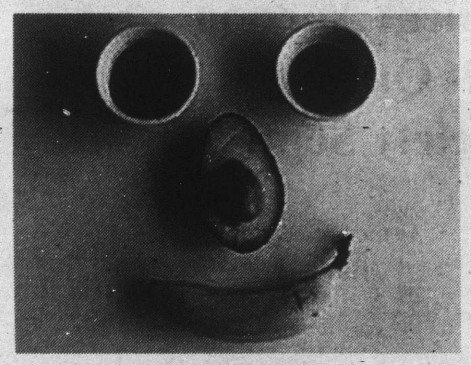

By SUSIE

No time for breakfast?

Here is a delicious simple smoothie for your child to head off to school with. This has protein, healthy fats, carbohydrates, and important nutrients that will keep them alert until snack time!

Sunbutter is made from sunflower seeds and is great for those who need to stay away from nuts in general. No one will taste the avocado so no skimping!

- 1 ripe frozen banana, cut into chunks (cut before freezing!)
- 1 tablespoon maple syrup (the real stuff)
- ½ ripened avocado
- 1 heaping tablespoon cocoa powder (raw cacao is best)

- 2 tablespoons peanut butter or sunbutter (for children allergic to nuts)
- 1 teaspoon flax seeds
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup organic whole milk (or nut milk)

Blend in high speed blender and serve!

More Healthy School Snacks

By SUSIE

Individual hummus servings are available in many places now and come in a variety of flavors. Packing one of these with some whole grain crackers, pita bread, tortilla, or vegetable sticks make a nutritious and tasty snack.

A thermos full of leftover soup, stew, chili, or pasta makes a great snack/lunch and as long as you invest in a good thermos (normally around $25.00 but worth it) everything will stay nice and hot.

Greek yogurt dips make a filling snack as well. Buy the full fat organic kind and just mix in some sea salt, pepper, garlic powder, onion powder, and fresh herbs. Your kids will love it served with crackers or vegetables, or some rice chips. (I like Lundbergs brand.)

A great drink option would be ORGAIN drinks for kids. They come in strawberry, vanilla, or chocolate and the kids drink these up. They contain protein, vegetables, and fruits and are loaded with important vitamins and minerals that they need to keep their energy levels up. These need to be cold, so make sure you put an ice pack with these.

Here is a great recipe for pumpkin bread that is grain free to pack as well!. Pack with a container of cream cheese or some butter for them to spread on.

1 1/2 cups blanched almond flour (I use Honeyville brand, it is the best!)
3 eggs
1/2 cup kerrygold butter (or another grass fed butter)
1 cup pureed pumpkin (I use canned for simplicity)
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
1/2 cup dark chocolate chips (I use LILLY'S no sugar added brand.)

Cream together butter and sugar. Add in vanilla and eggs and beat well. Now add flour and baking soda, as well as spices. Combine and fold in chips.

Spoon into greased loaf pan and bake at 350 degrees for about 45 or 50 minutes.

COA Quabbin Foliage Tour Oct. 11

The Quincy Council on Aging will leave the Kennedy Center at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 11 and travel to the Quabbin Reservoir area and West Brookfield's Salem Cross Inn.

The group will enjoy a full-course luncheon featuring soup, salad, chicken pot pie or maple salmon and dessert. After lunch the group will be joined by a native tour guide who will take them throughout the Quabbin Reservoir.

Following the tour the group will stop at Brookfield Orchards, one of New England's largest apple growers. The group should arrive back at the Kennedy Center at about 5:30 p.m.

The cost of the trip is $72. For more information on this trip call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

To register visit the Kennedy Center at 440 East Squantum St., Quincy. Payment must be made at time of registration.

Hand, Foot And Mouth Disease: What To Expect

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Hand, foot, and mouth disease is a childhood illness that causes rashes on the feet and hands, as well as painful blisters around the nose and mouth.

Hand, foot, and mouth disease (HFMD) is the result of a viral infection. Outbreaks of HFMD typically occur in Asia, but are fairly uncommon in the United States. Currently there is no vaccine to prevent HFMD. Experts agree that avoiding close contact with infected people is the most advantageous way to avoid contracting the illness.

HFMD was first reported in New Zealand in 1957. Following the study of the coxsackievirus in 1958, the disease was officially named Hand, Foot and Mouth Disease. This contagious illness is now known to be caused by the Picornaviridae family of viruses. Children are most commonly affected by the disease, especially those under 5 years of age. HFMD usually dissipates on its own and typically doesn't require medical intervention. Foot and mouth disease (FMD) is frequently confused with HFMD. These two diseases are not interrelated. FMD only affects animals like cattle, goats, and sheep, while HFMD is a human disease that typically affects infants and children. FMD is contagious among certain types of animals, but it isn't considered a public health threat.

Viruses belonging to the enterovirus category of viruses are commonly involved in the development of HFMD. Coxsackievirus A16, as well as other coxsackieviruses, is the most common type of enterovirus to cause HFMD. These viruses are spread by the oral and fecal route. They are usually found in the infected patient's saliva, nose mucus, feces, and blister fluid. Common methods of transmission include:

- Close, personal contact with an infected person
- Contact with airborne viruses spread by coughing and sneezing
- Touching contaminated objects
- Direct or indirect contact with infected feces.

Children under 10 years of age, and especially under 5, are most at risk from HFMD. This is because many haven't yet developed the proper antibodies that fight the disease. Children who are active in childcare centers or schools and have regular involvement with other children have a heightened risk of being infected.

One of the chief symptoms of hand, foot, and mouth disease is a rash with blisters on the soles of the feet. Symptoms usually occur approximately 3 to 7 days after first contact with the virus. A 24 to 48 hour fever (100°F to 102°F) or sore throat are often the first noticeable symptoms. These are succeeded by; rash with flat, non-itching red blisters on the hands and soles of the feet 1 to 2 days after fever, loss of appetite, headache, throat, mouth, and tongue ulcers. Some patients present with no symptoms at all, but are still capable of infecting others with the virus.

Complications for HFMD are rare as the disease disappears on its own within a week or two, but can develop if the disease is left untreated in certain individuals. If enterovirus 71 is the virus behind HFMD, the nervous system may be affected and conditions such as Meningitis, Encephalitis or Acute flaccid paralysis can result. A secondary infection may ensue if the blisters or rash on the skin has been scratched. There is also a risk of dehydration for children who have trouble swallowing as a result of blisters in the throat. In severe cases, cardiorespiratory failure can occur.

The diagnosis of HFMD can usually be done by examining the patient and observing for sores or blisters on the feet, hands, and genitals. The physician may also ask about other common symptoms of the disease such as fever, headache, and sore throat. Lab studies may be required in some instances where a clinical diagnosis is needed. Doctors may look for related antibodies in the blood, or collect throat or stool samples for examination.

There is no vaccine for the prevention of HFMD. Person-to-person contact is how HFMD spreads. Some of the best methods for reducing risk include, disinfecting surfaces, washing hands often with soap and hot water, and avoiding sharing eating utensils and drinking cups.

For the majority of healthy individuals, HFMD is a nonthreatening disease that absolves on its own within a few weeks. At present, particular treatments for HFMD are nonexistent. Numbing mouthwashes or sprays may help reduce mouth pain, which can be helpful for increasing fluid and food intake. Over-the-counter medications to relieve pain and fever may be helpful in some instances. Although HFMD can sometimes result in hospitalization and even death, most patients that develop HFMD from enterovirus present common symptoms of the disease and usually recover without complications.

Hancock Park Rehab, Nursing Center Awarded Accreditation

Hancock Park Rehab & Nursing Center announces it has earned The Joint Commission's Gold Seal of Approval® for accreditation and certification by demonstrating compliance with national standards for advanced post-acute care services, health care quality, and patient and resident safety in nursing homes.

The accreditation and certification awards recognize Hancock Park Rehab & Nursing Center's dedication to continuous compliance with The Joint Commission's state-of-the-art standards.

Hancock Park underwent a rigorous on-site survey to obtain The Joint Commission's Nursing Care Center accreditation and Post-Acute Care certification option. The Joint Commission expert surveyor evaluated Hancock Park for compliance with standards of care for post-acute care services as well as those specific to the needs of all patients and residents, including infection prevention and control, leadership, and medication management.

"In achieving Joint Commission accreditation and certification, Hancock Park has demonstrated its commitment to the highest level of care for its patients and residents that goes beyond federal and state requirements," said Gina Zimmermann, M.S., executive director, Nursing Care Center Accreditation, The Joint Commission. "Accreditation and certification are voluntary processes and I commend Hancock Park for successfully undertaking both of these challenges to elevate its standard of care and instill confidence in the community it serves."

The Joint Commission's Nursing Care Center accreditation program, formerly the Long Term Care accreditation program, was established in 1966 and accredits nearly 1,000 organizations offering nursing and post-acute care services. The Post-Acute Care Certification option became available as part of the Nursing Care Center accreditation program in July 2013. The Joint Commission's standards address important functions relating to the care of patients and residents and the management of nursing and rehabilitation centers. The standards are developed in consultation with industry experts, providers, measurement experts and consumers.

"Receiving accreditation and certification from The Joint Commission continues BaneCare's established tradition of providing the highest quality of care to our residents," said Harry Bane, vice president of operations, BaneCare Management, "while at the same time, demonstrating a meaningful commitment to continually improve upon that care."

Hancock Park joins additional BaneCare skilled nursing center's receiving the new Post-Acute Care Certification, including: Brighton House Rehab & Nursing Center in Brighton; Colonial Rehab & Nursing Center in Weymouth; Harbor House Rehab & Nursing Center in Hingham and John Scott House Rehab & Nursing Center in Braintree. Bay Path Rehab & Nursing Center in Duxbury will undergo the on-site survey later this year.

Founded in 1951, The Joint Commission (TJC) is the nation's largest standards-setting and accrediting body in health care. TJC accredits and certifies more than 20,500 health care organizations and programs in the United States, inspiring them to excel in providing safe and effective care of the highest quality and value. 'Unforgettable' Kicks Off Cabaret, Musical Revue Season

JM Productions of Quincy, MA., announces its 2016-2017 Cabaret and Musical Revue Season presented live at the Common Market Restaurant, 97 Willard St, Quincy.

The first show is "Unforgettable" – the music of Nat King Cole, Peggy Lee, Bobby Darin, Patti Page, Doris Day and more – on Thursday, Sept. 15th and Friday, Sept. 16th for two matinees and Saturday, Sept. 17th for an evening performance.

"Unforgettable" stars Tina Storer and Russell Watts with a five-piece swing orchestra.

The new matinee series has been very popular and sold out all last year so a second matinee date was added to each month with tickets at $35 per person which includes lunch, show, coffee, tea, tax and gratuity.

An additional fall show in the 2016/2017 series is: "Side by Side," a Mother/Daughter Love Story starring Boston Globe columnist Beverly Beckham with Tom Lamark on piano with shows on Thursday, Oct. 27th and Friday, Oct. 28th for two matinees.

Beckham has been telling stories in print for 40 years; now she is telling a special one in song. It's a mother/daughter love story about growing up in the 1950s in a neighborhood where big families and stay at home mothers and Sunday dinners were the norm. Where her family - she was an only child, she had a working mother - was an exception. But a happy exception.

It's about family and familiar settings and Woolworth's and South Shore Plaza and hats "borrowed" from a shop in Quincy Center, about high heels and white gloves and church on Sunday. And it's about music - the love songs her mother sang for her father, the torch songs she sang at minstrel shows, and the pops songs she was always singing around the house. It's an hour of story and song that will bring back memories of days gone by.

For tickets visit www.brownpapertickets.com/event/2582850. Print tickets at home or office 24/7. Tickets are also available by calling Brown Paper Tickets at 1-800-838-3006, stopping into the Common Market Restaurant or calling in reservations at (617) 773-9532.

Halloween Attraction At USS Salem

Boston-Based Immersive Productions and Jason Egan, creator of Fright Dome Las Vegas, announces Ghost Ship Harbor, a new immersive Halloween attraction on USS Salem in Quincy.

With more than 60,000 square feet of indoor and outdoor "terror experiences," Ghost Ship Harbor will "horrify and petrify" fans with interactive and twisted experiences. Ghost Ship Harbor will be based on the premise that a plague has taken over and to ensure survival, civilians must visit the USS Salem before the ship departs on Oct. 31.

The attraction will feature three distinct haunted houses including Contagion, where those who are trying to flee will be required to undergo a thorough examination before they are allowed to board the ship; Plague, where chaos ensues once the virus has been discovered onboard the only ship that can save humanity; and Ouija, the true paranormal VIP experience that will explore the truly haunted side of the ship.

Ghost Ship Harbor will also feature chilling scare zones and a macabre food village. Ghoulish professional actors, intense costumes and props designed to shock and frighten all who dare to visit, will provide an experience of sheer terror from start to finish.

The USS Salem is a historic, iconic and creepy location already well documented as a haunted destination. The ship, often called, "The Sea Witch" once served as a hospital and morgue following the 1953 Ionian Earthquake. Today, some believe spirits have lingered onboard ever since and hundreds of ghost sightings have been documented.

The USS Salem was featured on the television show Ghost Hunters and featured in the book 13 Most Haunted in Massachusetts by author Sam Baltrusis. The ship was also featured in the 2016 film The Finest Hours produced by Walt Disney Studios.

"For many years, Greater Boston has lacked a haunted destination for the Halloween season, one that delivers on a promise of sheer terror," said Matt DiRoberto, founder of Immersive Productions and Ghost Ship Harbor. "By partnering with Jason Egan and the team from Fright Dome, we are creating a destination event that will be something New England has never experienced before."

Ghost Ship Harbor runs 19 nights from Sept. 30 through Oct. 31.

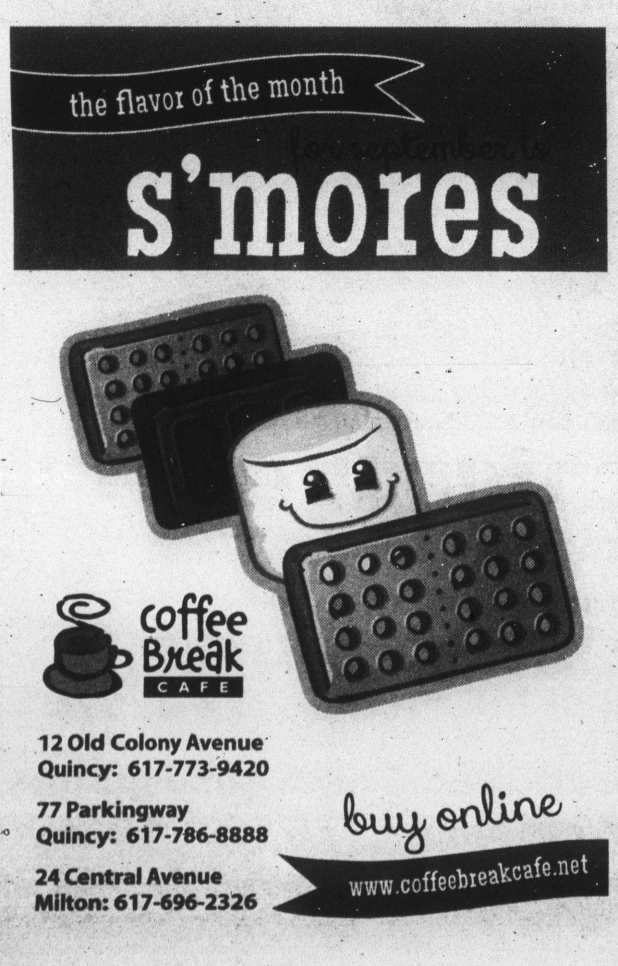

Tickets are on-sale now and advance purchases begin at $29.99 with Fast Pass and VIP Experiences also available. Tickets at the Box Office onsite will begin at $34.99.

Organizers say the attraction is not appropriate for children under age 12.

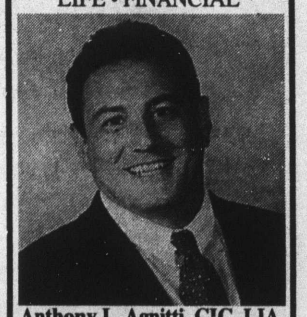

To purchase tickets in advance or for more information, visit http://www.ghostshipharbor.com/

More than 150 people will be hired to staff Ghost Ship Harbor, including actors, front-of-house staff, sound and staging technicians and more.

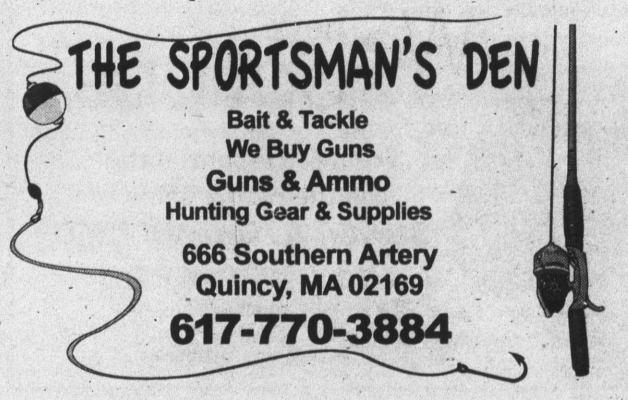

More details about the season hires will be posted on the website as soon as they are available.

Indicted Quincy Police Lt. Suspended Without Pay

tified Corliss he had been suspended from his position of lieutenant without pay for the period he remains under indictment.

"You are hereby suspended from your position as a lieutenant in the Quincy Police Department during the period you are under indictment for misconduct occurring while serving in your position," Koch said in a letter dated Aug. 31. "You shall not receive any compensation or salary during the period of suspension.

"Your status will be reviewed by me upon conclusion of the criminal proceedings now pending against you."

Dennis Carter, the attorney representing Corliss, on Sept. 1 declined to comment on the suspension. He said his client should be afforded the presumption of innocence like all criminal defendants are.

"Lt. Corliss intends to vigorously fight the criminal charges and clear his name," Carter stated.

In his letter to Corliss, Koch cited section 25 of chapter 268A of the Massachusetts General Laws. That section of the law allows an appointing authority to suspend without pay any official indicted for misconduct on the job. The state law says that if a case concludes without a guilty verdict, the suspension must be lifted and the official would be entitled to back pay.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said Corliss had to turn in his gun and badge in September 2015, when he first was placed on paid administrative leave as an internal investigation began.

The indictment alleges 20 separate instances where Corliss either submitted fraudulent detail slips, submitted false overtime pay requests, or made fraudulent Quincy Police Department roster entries between March and September of 2015 – including instances where the lieutenant was on vacation in the Bahamas and on Cape Cod, but still collected regular pay.

The indictment alleges Corliss defrauded the department out of more than $10,000.

Twelve invoices containing false information supplied by Corliss were sent via the U.S. Postal Service to unidentified companies that paid for details during that time period, the indictment alleges, which is the basis for the dozen counts of mail fraud.

The charge of mail fraud provides for a sentence of up to 20 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000. The charge of fraud involving federal funds provides for a sentence of up to 10 years in prison, three years of supervised release and a fine of $250,000. Prosecutors, in a statement, noted that actual sentences for federal crimes are typically less than the maximum and are imposed by a district judge based on sentencing guidelines and other factors.

A 23-year veteran of the Quincy Police Department, Corliss has been off the job since September 2015, when the Quincy Police Department launched an internal investigation into the hours and details he put in for.

Corliss was initially placed on paid administrative leave last September, and then given a six-month unpaid suspension by Koch in December following the investigation. The mayor also reassigned the lieutenant away from his post as commander of the Special Operations Unit. Additionally, Corliss was barred from working details for 12 months and forfeited 20 vacation days.

In a December 2015 statement, Keenan said the internal investigation found 21 instances of Corliss working city time overlapping with private details and/or other city time and that the investigation revealed the lieutenant took nine vacation days that were not recorded in department attendance records. The value of those incidents, according to Keenan, was $11,000.

In June, when the suspension ended, Corliss was again placed on paid administrative leave pending the result of the federal investigation. He remained on paid administrative leave until Aug. 31.

In a statement one day after the indictment was unsealed, Koch credited Keenan and the department for the internal investigation into Corliss last year, and said the matter was taken seriously by those involved.

"This matter was addressed swiftly, thoroughly and professionally by Chief Keenan and the Quincy Police Department immediately after these issues were raised," Koch said Aug. 30.

"The department's handling of this matter in such a methodical and transparent way speaks to how seriously it was treated and how seriously the internal investigation that was the basis for the outside review was conducted."

Corliss joined the Quincy Police Department in 1993, according to the indictment, and promoted to the rank of lieutenant in approximately 2004. He was the commanding officer of the Special Operations Unit from 2005 until 2015.

The indictment states Corliss received $265,568 in compensation in 2015, including $83,383 in salary, $27,580 in additional salary because of his educational degree, $104,498 in overtime and detail pay, a uniform/clothing stipend of $1,912, a stipend for meals and weekend differential pay of $1,572, a yearly stipend for reading for $4,169, and cashed-in, unused vacation days totaling $4,035.

The City Council in February appropriated $38,922 to the Police Department to purchase a new payroll software system meant to flag any potential abuse in the hours officers put in for – including regular pay, overtime and details. Keenan had requested those funds, seeking to replace the previous system, which was primarily handwritten.

Antique Fire Badge Fetches Nearly $900 At Auction

By SCOTT JACKSON

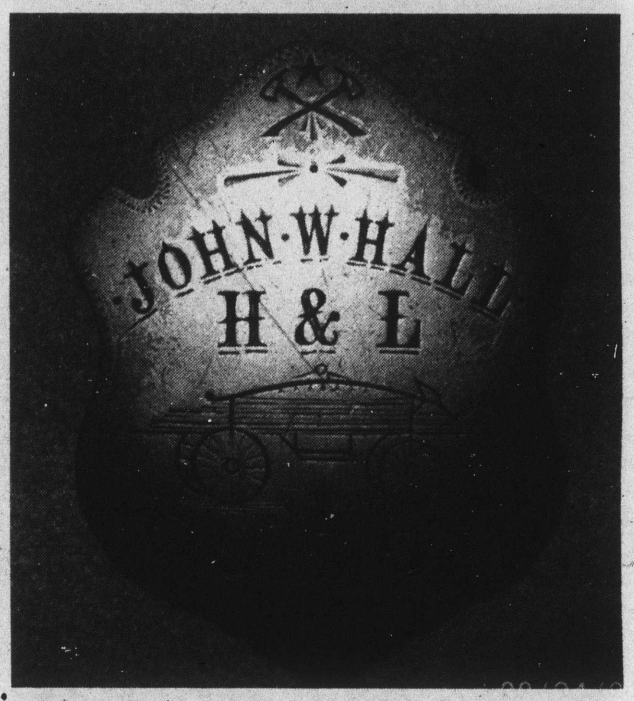

An antique Quincy Fire Department badge sold for nearly $900 at a Sept. 1 auction in western Massachusetts.

David Baillargeon of Swinging Bridge Auctions in Huntington said the badge sold for $891, including the 15 percent buyer's premium. The person who purchased the badge, he said, is a private collector from Western Massachusetts who is a retired police officer; the collector also bought two pieces of Springfield Fire Department memorabilia that went up for auction Sept. 1.

The Quincy Fire Department badge, dating perhaps to the 1880s, has the name John W. Hall and the letters H & L, meaning hook and ladder, inscribed on it, along with a period fire carriage, the number one, and Quincy.

The John W. Hall Hook & Ladder Company was the name of the new ladder company when it was formed in 1882. The company is now known as Ladder 1.

Hall thrice served as Quincy's fire chief – 1871-1872, 1878-1883, and 1886-1888 – and the hook and the ladder company was named for him. It is believed that the badge auctioned Sept. 1 once belonged to a member of the company.

THIS ANTIQUE Quincy Fire Department badge, dating back to perhaps the 1880s, sold at auction for nearly $900 last week.

The badge was found on a bookshelf in Florence, Massachusetts, by the family-owned auction gallery.

The pending auction of the badge was highlighted in the Sept. 1 issue of The Quincy Sun, in the "Son Beams" column.

Baillargeon said there was much interest in the badge, and several Quincy residents had placed bids on the phone the day of the auction.

"There were a lot of bids

Conservation Work Underway At Quincy Homestead

Rotted Exterior Wood Being Replaced; Historic Home To Be Painted Paler Shade Of Yellow

By SCOTT JACKSON

The exterior of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be repainted in the coming weeks, and work is set to begin on the Hancock Street entrance.

The homestead, on the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road in Quincy Center, was first built in 1686. The house at that time included the kitchen and a sleeping chamber above. Extensive additions to the house were made in 1706, and later renovations took place in 1736.

The Quincy Homestead is owned by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and operated by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Alexandra Rollins – one of three co-chairs on the Colonial Dames committee overseeing the conservation effort – said paint samples were taken and analyzed to determine the color of the exterior of the building in the early 18th century. The last such sampling took place in the 1980s or '90s, she said.

"The whole field has evolved quite a bit since then," Rollins stated.

As a result of the analysis, the homestead will be painted a paler shade of yellow – which Rollins described as more buff than yellow – than it is now. The brighter yellow most recently on the building's exterior "couldn't be achieved in the 18th century," she said.

The building's cream, green and black trim, however, will be unchanged because it is correct.

The first step in the exterior painting, which is being paid for by the state, was the scraping away of old paint. With that complete, wooden sections that had rotted are now being replaced, and the painting is expected to commence as soon as this week. Rollins said that process could take up to six or eight weeks to complete.

The work on the Hancock Street entrance is also set to begin as early as this week, and take several weeks to finish. Rollins said the door and entryway would be conserved during the process. The granite steps there will be removed because they are not original to the building and replaced with wooden steps.

"We hope to use that as the main entryway instead of going through the kitchen," Rollins said. "This

Morrissey Sponsoring Document Shredding Day At Kennedy Center

Many financial statements and private papers hold all of the information a knowledgeable thief needs to assume your identity and begin stealing your money.

Financial institutions and consumer watchdog agencies urge citizens to destroy those documents rather than put them in their recycling or trash bin.

But not everyone has a shredder at home, so Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey is sponsoring secure document shredding events at seven senior centers across Norfolk County this fall to help dispose of those piles quickly, safely and for free.

A document shredding event will be held in Quincy at the Quincy Council on Aging, Kennedy Center, Wednesday, Sept. 21 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Center is located at 440 East Squantum St.

"We want people who have these kinds of documents collecting on their counter or cluttering things up to come down to the Kennedy Center and we will make sure they are securely destroyed," Morrissey said. "Identity theft can be among the more challenging cases to investigate and prosecute, as information thieves can sell or pass data to actors in other states or other continents who then begin buying things with your money or your credit."

There will be a brief seminar on financial safety starting promptly at 10 a.m. before shredding begins at 11 a.m., Morrissey said.

"We know that seniors who did not come up in the age of computers can be specifically targeted. This is a simple step to help citizens prevent crimes before they happen," District Attorney Morrissey said. "Shredding is the twenty-first century equivalent of locking your car doors at night."

'Stars Of Gold Walk' Sunday

This Star Won't Go Out will host the "Stars of Gold Walk," a 5K walk and family event fundraiser, Saturday, Sept. 11 at Pageant Field in Quincy.

Participants can register online at www.starsofgold.org.

The family and pet-friendly off-street walk starts at 10 a.m., with participant registration beginning at 8:30 a.m. Sign up is at the registration table in front of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater, 1 Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Walkers can choose to do three laps to complete a 5K walk, or choose the shorter 1-mile option. Water tables will be set up at the halfway point around the route.

on it," he stated.

The private collector who won the auction for the Quincy badge also won separate auctions for two pieces of Springfield Fire Department memorabilia – an 1898 fireman's log book, which sold for approximately $1,000 not including the buyer's premium, and a 1913 history book of the department that sold for $100, plus the buyer's premium.

Also auctioned off that day was an antique leather helmet from the fire department in Port Chester, New York, that sold for $1,050 to a phone bidder.

Baillargeon said the big sellers at the Sept. 1 auction were a pair of samurai swords that sold for $1,500 and $1,000 each.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, at approximately 3:25 a.m., Officers Tom Gaeta, Christian Donovan and Michael O'Brien were dispatched to a Willard Street apartment complex to investigate a family disturbance.

Upon arrival, the officers heard a commotion coming from the second floor of the building. They followed the noise down the hallway toward a specific apartment. In the hallway was shattered glass and smears and drops of blood. At the door was a large pool of blood.

The door to the apartment was open so the officers looked inside and found the place to be a mess, with items strewn all over the floor and furniture. There was more blood on the floor, couches and walls. The officers announced their presence and searched the unit but there was no one there. Moments later, police dispatch informed the officers that a male suspect called the police station to report that he was at a local gas station and admitted to stabbing someone. Dispatch then sent units to the suspect's location.

The officers cleared the apartment but as Officer Gaeta passed by an adjacent apartment, he heard a moaning noise coming from behind the door, so he banged on the door and a male answered the door clutching his bleeding chest. This male was able to tell Officer Gaeta that his neighbor stabbed him and his friend. On the kitchen floor was his male friend, who was bleeding from the right side of his chest and in obvious pain. Officers applied direct pressure to the wound and an ambulance was dispatched.

As they waited, the two victims said that they were stabbed after trying to break up a fight their neighbors were having. They said that the fight involved a boyfriend assaulting his girlfriend in the hallway, which is where some of the blood came from. The two victims said that the female was being beaten so they went to the defense of the girlfriend, who had her young son with her. The victims were able to break them apart and set her free.

As they were about to leave the hallway, the male suspect grabbed a steak knife from his kitchen and attempted to stab them but they were able to disarm him. The suspect then went back to the kitchen and came out with another steak knife and stabbed one victim in the middle of his chest and the other below his right shoulder. The suspect then fled while the victims retreated to their apartment. Both victims were taken to Boston Medical Center for their injuries.

Meanwhile, Officers Chris McDermott and Andrew Keenan located the suspect at the gas station and he was taken into custody. Inside the suspect's vehicle were traces of blood and a bent steak knife (blood on the handle) resting by the foot pedals. Brewster Ambulance arrived on scene and made the determination that the suspect needed to be transported to the hospital for his injuries. Once inside the ambulance, the suspect repeatedly said that he was attacked first and "stabbed them to protect myself."

At the hospital, the suspect was very uncooperative and repeatedly said that he wanted to fight all of the Police Officers involved in the incident, demanding that handcuffs be removed so he could "F@#$ them up." He then said, "I'm screwed because those guys I stabbed were in the Outlaws Motorcycle gang." He added that he stabbed them in self defense because they were hitting him in the head with a hammer and pulled a knife on him. While in a hospital room, the suspect kept yelling out that he was going away for two and a half years because he had a criminal case "hanging over my head."

Once medically cleared, Officers Joe Cox and Keenan transported the suspect back to the station for booking. During his phone call, the suspect repeatedly told his mother, "I stabbed him." Officer McDermott stood by the vehicle until BCI could process the scene and tow the vehicle to the police station.

While at the crime scene, the suspect's mother arrived and inquired what happened. She then pointed at one of the ambulances and said, "Those guys beat up my son - I'm calling the landlord. They shouldn't be living here." When asked how she knew of the fight, she said that the female victim of the domestic violence called her. She then changed her story and said that the female victim came by her house.

When asked which account was accurate, she gave a blank stare. She said that the female victim, her son's girlfriend and her child were fine and at a Dorchester address. Boston Police were contacted for a well-being check which confirmed that they were safe and unharmed. The suspect, a 22 year-old Dorchester resident, was charged with assault with intent to murder (two counts).

Nice Work!

Beware of "Free Trial" scams: The Federal Trade Commission has sued numerous companies recently for allegedly taking more than $280 million from people with a deceptive "free trial" scheme. The scam originates on websites, in the mail or on the telephone and often promotes government grants and money-making products, enticed by "free" information at no risk. However, according to the FTC, when people gave their credit or debit card numbers to pay a supposedly small shipping and handling fee for the information, these scammer often charge victims one time fees as high as $129.95, with recurring monthly fees, all without their knowledge or permission. Be wary of these offers and check with a friend before sending money. As always, be sure to check your credit card statements monthly.

Register Of Deeds O'Donnell: Homestead Act Protects Homeowners

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell is reminding homeowners about filing for Homestead protection.

Under Massachusetts law, a Homestead recording provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"Protecting one's primary residence is a key objective for all homeowners," O'Donnell said. "If you own a home and it is your principle residence, one way to protect your home asset is to file a Homestead. The Homestead law also allows the filing of an Elderly Homestead defining elderly as a person who is 62 years of age or older."

O'Donnell said one of the major changes under the 2011 Homestead Law passed by the Massachusetts Legislature is that a valid homestead cannot be terminated when refinancing a mortgage. Another clarification of the statute is that a Homestead can provide protections for a primary home kept in trust.

"It is important to note there are certain debts that are exempted from protection under the Homestead Act, such as federal, state and local tax liens, as well as mortgages contracted for the purchase of a primary home and nursing home liens," O'Donnell pointed out. "Most other mortgages, debts, and encumbrances existing prior to the filing of the Declaration of Homestead, along with probate court executions for spousal and child support, are also exempted from Homestead protection.

Homestead recordings can be filed at the Registry of Deeds for a state imposed fee of $36. To find out more about the Homestead law, or to get a free application, please go online to the registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"It is important to make clear that a Homestead protects consumers against the forced sale of their primary owned residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. While the debt is still owed, homeowners will at least have the comfort of knowing that with a Homestead filed at the Registry of Deeds, their primary residence cannot be forcibly sold to satisfy most debts," O'Donnell added.

Asian Art At Josiah Quincy House Sept. 24

Historic New England will offer a special tour of its collection of art and objects from Asia on Saturday, Sept. 24 from 10 a.m. until noon. The tour will take place at the Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston.

Asian art and culture has long captured the western imagination. Beginning with the China Trade in the late 18th century and continuing through the 19th century Victorian fascination, the Quincy family amassed an impressive collection of Asian and Asian-inspired artwork and luxury goods.

Join Historic New England Senior Curator of Collections Nancy Carlisle and Objects Conservator Michaela Neiro for an in-depth look at these objects on view at Quincy House. Part-tour, part-lecture, Asian Art at Quincy House explores the recently reinstalled collection in context and reveals the challenges of working with materials and techniques like lacquer and japanning.

Space is limited and registration is required. The cost is $5 for Historic New England members and Quincy residents and $10 for nonmembers. For information or to register call 617-994-5930 or visit www.HistoricNewEngland.org.

will bring it back to what it would have been like in the first few years."

The work being done on the Hancock Street entrance is being undertaken by the Colonial Dames, who received a $49,000 appropriation from the city's Community Preservation Committee for the project in March.

Other work has also taken place at the Quincy Homestead in recent years since a new five-year memorandum of understanding between DCR and the Colonial Dames was signed. Rollins said the house fell into a state of disrepair over the course of two years after the previous 99-year memorandum of understanding lapsed.

"The house fell into great disrepair in two years. It requires constant upkeep," she said. "The Quincy Homestead Committee was set up after it was signed and DCR agreed to get it back to acceptable levels of preservation."

Other projects included the replacement of gutters and downspouts, as well as extensive roof repair.

In the kitchen, the floors were restored, the plaster consolidated and whitewashed, and beams and other wooden features were oiled.

Windows throughout the house were removed, conserved and put back in place as well.

Rollins said the Colonial Dames have additional projects in the pipeline, including the restoration of the 1686 sleeping chamber and two meeting rooms. The organization, she stated, has applied for a $25,000 grant for that work, and would likely have to raise the same amount to match the grant.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead sits on part of the original land Edmund Quincy acquired for a farm in the 1630s. Five generations of the Quincy family lived in the homestead; among them was Dorothy Quincy Hancock, wife of John Hancock and the first first lady of Massachusetts.

The Colonial Dames purchased the building in 1904 and entered into an agreement that allowed the state to assume ownership of the property with the organization operating it.

"We want people from Quincy to come into the house," Rollins said. "Primarily, that's who comes through."

The Colonial Dames are overseeing the work on the Hancock Street entrance, which is being funded by the city's Community Preservation Committee. BOTTOM LEFT: New paint at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be a shade of pale yellow – described as more buff than yellow. The brighter yellow paint most recently seen on the exterior "couldn't be achieved in the 18th century," said Alexandra Rollins, a member of the Colonial Dames who is working to oversee preservation efforts at the historic property.

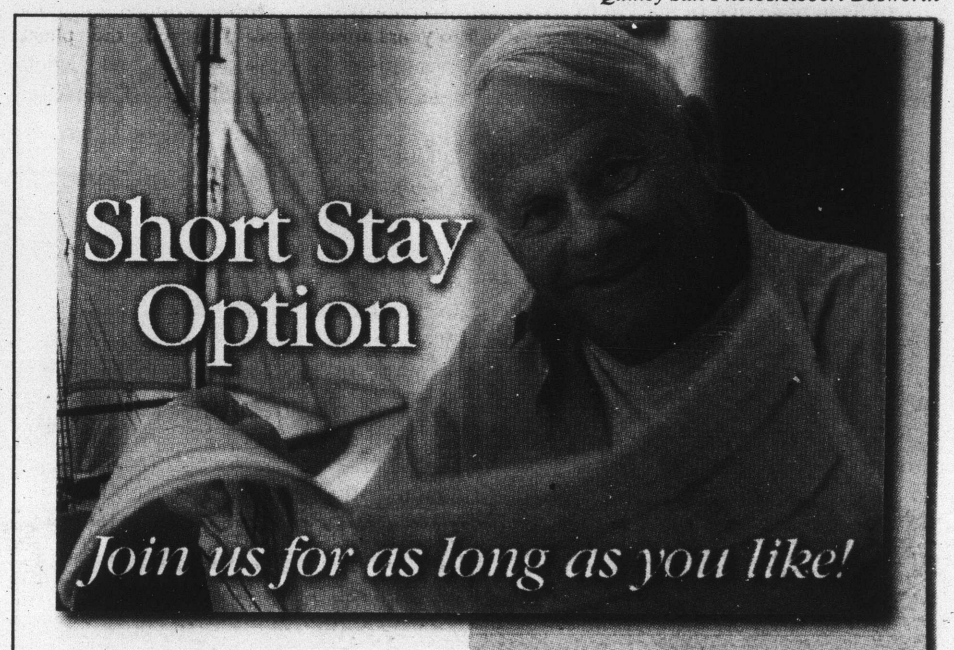

GRANITE steps pictured here at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be removed and replaced with wooden steps, because the granite ones are not original to the house. OPIOIDS NO HELP FOR BACK PAIN

Not only are opioid medications potentially addictive and liable to cause side effects (including sedation, nausea, and constipation), but they are also ineffective at relieving back pain. So says a recent meta-analysis that reviewed the results of 20 randomized, controlled trials involving 7,925 participants. Of these, 13 trials involving more than 3,400 participants examined the short-term effects of opioid analgesics on chronic low back pain. In one-half of these trials, at least 50% of the participants withdrew from the study due to adverse side effects or drug ineffectiveness. Even higher-than-recommended doses of the opioid drugs were found to be of little benefit. By contrast, chiropractic treatment addresses the source of back pain instead of trying to mask the symptoms.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we feel that this evidence confirms that the drug-free care provided by a doctor of chiropractic often yields better clinical outcomes and greater patient satisfaction. For gentle and safe, drug-free chiropractic care, we invite you to call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We recommend a chiropractic checkup for all members of the family. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We want to educate you so that you can make choices you feel good about and are comfortable with, and that you can commit to for a lifetime of good health.

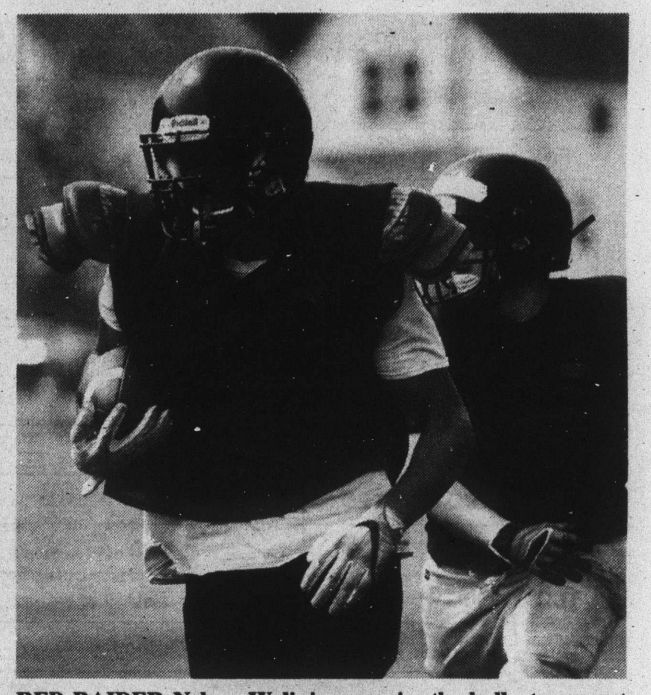

P.S. Seventy-eight Americans die each day from an opioid overdose, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Prime Hyundai South Supports Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk

The Prime Hyundai South dealership of Quincy will raise funds for the Jimmy Fund Sunday, Sept. 25 to support lifesaving adult and pediatric patient care and cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute by participating in the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai.

This is the 14th consecutive year Hyundai is the presenting sponsor.

Supporting the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk is one way in which Hyundai helps fight cancer. Each year, a share of every new Hyundai vehicle sold in New England benefits the Jimmy Fund. Hyundai Hope on Wheels is the united effort of nearly 800 Hyundai dealers across the U.S. to raise awareness about childhood cancer and celebrate the lives of children battling the disease. Since 1998, Hyundai has contributed more than $10 million to the Jimmy Fund and Dana-Farber.

On Sept. 25, an estimated 9,000 people are expected to participate in the 2016 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai. The goal is to raise more than $8.3 million for the Jimmy Fund to support innovative breakthroughs and personalized patient care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk gives participants a unique opportunity to walk one of four routes along the historic Boston Athletic Association's (BAA) Boston Marathon course and to raise money for the Jimmy Fund.

For all 28 years, the BAA has supported the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk.

To register for the 2016 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai (#JimmyFundWalk) on Sept. 25, or to support a walker, visit www.JimmyFundWalk.org or call (866) 531-9255. Registration is easy and walkers can enter the promo code NEWS for $5 off.

Quincy Recreation Dept. 3 On 3 Hoop Tournament

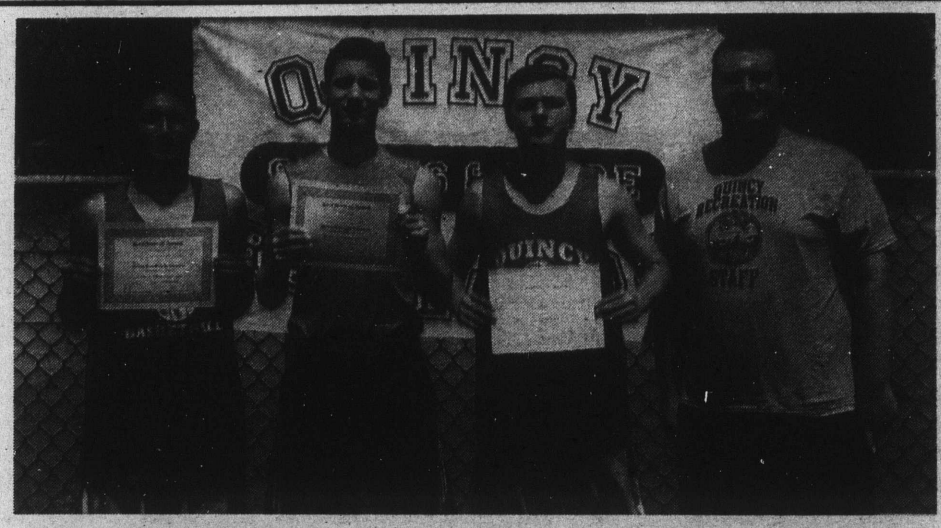

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual citywide 3-on-3 basketball tournament at the Fenno Street courts. Teams earn the chance to represent their parks by finishing in the top three of their respective district tournament. In the double elimination tournament, games are played to 11 or highest score after 10 minutes and are officiated by Recreation Leaders. Youngsters are divided by age group where they compete in the Midget (Ages 8-10), Junior (11-12), and Senior (13-16) divisions. The tournament was directed by Sports Specialists Terence Rooney, Curran Jorgensen, and Tyler Braun.

The Midget division saw O'Rourke and Fore River playgrounds matched up in the championship. Behind the unselfish play of Daithi Quinn and Angie Colotti, O'Rourke was able to claim the title. Also playing well on the offensive end for O'Rourke was Renzo Santangelo, DJ Blaise and Shane Wright. Fore River played great defense but fell just short, led by the great effort of Kevin Gray and Tyler Munchbach. Also competing for Fore River was Anthony Poitier and Konrad Kloczkowski .

In the Junior division, the championship saw teams from Kincaid and Squantum looking to take home the title and bragging rights on the park. Riley O'Connell and Ryan McDonough showed great passing skills, and Bryan Amorim played strong defense for Kincaid. In the end, however, the offense skill of Squantum proved to be too much. Gavin and Seany Toland used both their jump shots and finishing ability around the hoop to score while Danny Bellotti and Colm O'Malley always seemed to find the open man.

The Senior division was hotly contested, with several teams who could have easily taken home the championship. After a long, challenging road, the title game featured teams from Perkins and O'Rourke. Lead by Kyle Murphy, Perkins went up big to start the game. O'Rourke managed to recover and after a few big shots from Ethan McDevitt and Franco Colabro, O'Rourke got the game back into contention. David Ryan picked up the defense for O'Rourke and challenged all of Murphy's shots. Damyan Markov and Sammy Cordahi found their rhythm at the end of the game for Perkins and contributed greatly to their playgrounds championship.

All champions and runners-up were presented certificates of excellence. The tournament was a great success, as it was well attended and the youngsters all showed a great deal of sportsmanship. Congratulations to all who participated.

Quincy Recreation Dept. Wiffle Ball Tournament

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its city-wide wiffle ball tournament. Twenty-four teams from all over the city competed in the annual event at Bishop Field. Each of the city's four districts entered two qualifying teams, setting up an eight team double elimination tournament in three age groups.

In the Senior Boys Division, Spencer Smith, Joe Moynihan, Alex Kiley, and Colin McGrath of Squantum playground were the champions. Their coach was Recreation leader Matt Eagles. Runners-up were Drew Borretti, Ryan Borretti, and Nick Moosick of Fore River. Their coach was Recreation leader John Crump.

In the Junior Boys Division, two teams battled for the title. Dan Freeman, Danny Bellotti, Colm O'Malley, and Gavin Toland of Squantum were the champions. Their coach was Recreation leader Caitlin Bulger. Runners-up were Charlie McGrail, Colin McGrail, Patrick Webber and Will Wismar of Montclair led by Recreation leader- Kyle Richardson.

In the Midget Boys Division, Patrick Bryan, Ryan Wirtz and Ronan Brown of Beechwood won in extra innings over Heron Road playground. Their coach was Recreation leader Matt McDonald. Heron Road runners-up were Owen Desmond, Jack Dunn, Teddy Lynch, and Dean Schaaf, and were coached by Recreation leader Ryan Harty.

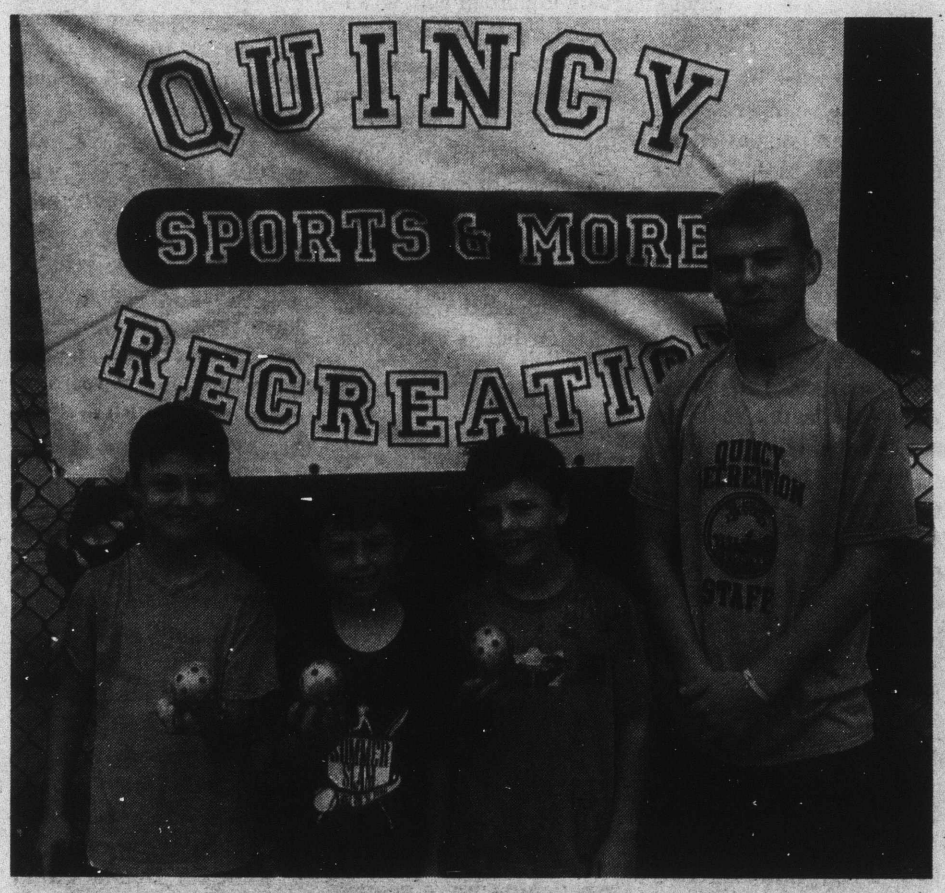

The participants played very hard throughout the extreme heat, which resulted in many extra inning games. First and second Place winners received gold and silver whiffle ball trophies. Congratulations to all the kids that competed in the tournament, which was ran by Sports Specialist Tyler Braun. Assisting him were Sports Specialists Curran Jorgenson, and Terence Rooney.

Buying vs. Leasing, Reliable Pick-Ups, Synthetic Oil

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

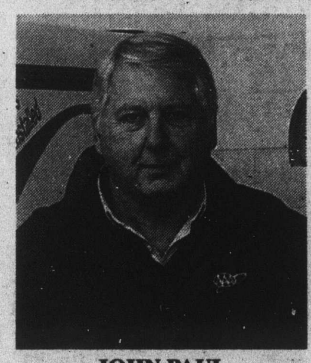

My vehicle is 12 years old with a little less than 100,000 miles on it. I am in my late 70's and I'm thinking it would be nice to have a new vehicle. I would like your opinion as to the pros and cons on buying or leasing, particularly at my age.

Leasing has both advantages and disadvantages. When you are leasing you are basically "renting" the car for the length of the lease. One advantage of leasing is that you may end up driving a car that you may have considered outside of your price range. These more expensive cars may have more creature comforts but more importantly have additional safety features that may not be available on lower priced models. Leasing is also best suited to people who drive less than 10,000 miles per year. One caveat is that if the car is damaged beyond what is normal wear and tear you will need to have the car repaired prior to the end of the lease or be financially responsible for any damage. At the end of the lease you have a couple of good choices. You can walk away, lease a new vehicle or buy the car you have been leasing (this can be a popular option and sometimes a good deal).

I have a 2010 Nissan Sentra and recently when I have come to a complete stop the car dies. This has a happened a couple of times in the last three months. I was just wondering what it could be.

Since the item happens so infrequently this will be a bit harder to diagnose. At this point I would try to rule out a fuel problem. As a first step try to run the fuel level as low as possible and refill the tank with a high quality fuel. I would do this for a couple of tanks. Other possibilities are a faulty mass-air flow sensor and a problem with the throttle position switch.

My mother has a Nissan Maxima that is 20 years old, has very low mileage and is in good condition, it does have a small bit of rust and needs a new muffler. She is 85 years old and does not drive any more. What can we do with her car?

JOHN PAUL

At this point all you can do it try to sell it. Then establish a price using a price guide such as www.nadaguides.com. Once you have an idea of what your car is worth then compare your car with similar models selling on popular websites like www.cargurus.com and www.iseecars.com. This way you can determine a realistic price for your car.

I'm hoping you can help us. We have a 2013 Jeep Wrangler Unlimited with oversized tires. The spare tire mount is factory with the 2 separate hinges on the tail gate. The spare tire bangs when on bumpy roads. We've tried a spare tire spacer (suggested by the dealership), didn't work. We tried heavy duty larger bolts to attach the tire to the mount, didn't work. Any ideas how to stop the banging? Everything seems to be tight and well attached. We don't want to lose the spare in traffic one day.

It is the oversize tires that are the problem. There are aftermarket oversized rubber spacers that help quiet the banging but the permanent fix may be a replacement spare tire holder. Looking online there are heavy duty holders that look more robust and don't look like they will shake and bang over bumps.

Any thoughts on the new Honda Ridgeline. I need a truck from time to time for light hauling and occasional trips to the home improvement store. I have two questions how does it drive and what about the plastic cargo bed?

The Honda Ridgeline drives like a Honda Pilot, decent ride and handling with all the creature comforts of any premium SUV. I like many of the features such as the dual opening tailgate and large waterproof trunk. As for the cargo bed, I don't see any issues, it is a heavy composite and looks very rugged and should easily stand up to years of use.

You recently stated in your column that it is "always a good idea to switch to synthetic oil" you indicated the many advantages to switching to synthetic oil. Does this advice still apply to older cars, ones that built prior to the advent (I'm assuming) of synthetic oil? I have a 1974 Porsche 914, very low (27,500) miles and have always used regular oil, and would switch to synthetic for the advantages you mentioned. But I'm not sure if there are additional implications such as special oil filters that I need to be concerned about.

There are many benefits to synthetic oil including improved heat transfer. Oil contributes a great deal to engine cooling and is especially important with an air-cooled engine like the one in your Porsche 914. Regarding older cars and modern oil the biggest issue becomes "flat tappet" engines typically found in hot roads and muscle cars. These engines require oil with zinc-dialkyldithiophosphate or ZDDP. This additive enhances lubrication but is quite toxic so oil manufactures have been reducing the amount of ZDDP. If you own a muscle-car, look for oil specially designed for these engines that have sufficient ZDDP and using the correct weight oil is critical. As a side note, years back I owned a 1966 Corvair and used synthetic oil (certainly not a Porsche but a flat air cooled six-cylinder engine) and never had any problems.

I have a 2002 Subaru Outback with only 19,000 miles on it. Lately there is a ticking noise coming from the engine area (like a clock). I have kept up with the maintenance schedule on a regular basis. Any advice, suggestions or comments you could give me would be greatly appreciated.

Ticking noises are usually associated with "top-end" valve-train noises. The problem could be a poorly adjusted valve, sticking valve lifter or worn rocker arm. A technician will use a type of stethoscope to narrow down the location of the noise. Once determined then they will need to, at a minimum remove the valve cover to see what is going on. Depending on what is found the issue could be a minor problem or more complex but you need to trust your repair shop.

I have owned a 2012 Nissan Frontier 4x4 for a couple of years now and it has always idled rough. It is most apparent when the engine is warm, and matters little whether it is in drive or neutral. I can see the steering wheel and passenger seat vibrating. Can this be fixed? Other people have had this issue and Nissan doesn't seem to want to do anything about it. Does the idle have to be bumped up or could it be the MAF sensor? Or is it something else?

The issue may be inherent in the design of the engine and may not be able to be fixed although there is at least one possible solution to look at. Nissan did issue a technical service bulletin that describes a very similar symptom and a fix. The technical service bulletin number is NTB13-021A and it involves reprogramming the vehicle's computer.

My husband and I enjoy reading your column and we are turning to you again, regarding a new vehicle purchase which we are considering. We have a 2005 Honda CRV with just about 200,000 mile son it. We truly love this car, always very reliable and it has served my two boys very well. We realize that it is time to let her go before any major mechanical thing happens to her. We are considering a small to medium size pick-up truck. We don't believe in buying new but rather cars that are one to two years old. Can you suggest a good and reliable pick-up that is also good on gas? We always seem to need a pick-up for one thing or another and our Honda has always helped out in most cases. Please advise us. We are looking to trade the Honda within the next few months.

Small to mid-sized pick-up trucks are few and far between these days At one time Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge, Toyota, Nissan and even Jeep made small to midsized trucks. Today you are left with far fewer choices. At the top of my list is the Toyota Tacoma, it offers several cab configurations, four or six cylinder engines and impressive build quality and reliability. The other choice would be a Nissan Frontier. One vehicle that may work for you is the Honda Ridgeline, more of a SUV with an open cargo area but reliable and dependable.

Although you mentioned you typically buy used vehicles, if basic function is all you are looking for Toyota has a version of the Tacoma Access Cab that is priced quite reasonably. It is a basic truck although still equipped with a decent selection of creature comforts.

Way Of Hope Pentecostal Church Relocates To Quincy

The Way of Hope Pentecostal Church is a 17-year-old church that started in Boston's Northeastern University African Meetinghouse where it met the needs of the student community.

Over the years the church has had several different homes and now finds itself presently at 1458 Hancock St., Suite 243, Quincy.

"We have been in Boston for 16 years and have served the community in various capacities from providing summer programs to operating a food pantry. We have also taken part in the Black Ministerial Alliance and the Ten Point Coalition in Boston to collaborate on larger community initiatives," said Senior Pastor Sharon Porter. "We are a caring church that wants to know how we can serve the community in Quincy."

Youth events are held Friday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. In the past, there have been summer camp programs for children from 5 – 12 years and the church is planning to start an after school program for children ages 6 – 12.

"We also help families in several areas from relationship building, marriage intervention, child rearing, and food assistance among other services," Pastor Porter said. "There are group meetings that occur to address the whole person and every family member. Each themed group is done in a safe and open place to discuss different issues we face on our journey and also the celebrations and successes we also experience. This is all done through a Biblical lens."

"We believe in working with people from all walks of life as well as in every area of life to help them live a more abundant life," she added.

Another candidate on the ballot was former Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. He was among four candidates seeking two nominations for Ward 3 councillor.

COUGHLIN

"I was standing on the sidewalk on Taylor Street near the northerly doorway of the Wollaston School gymnasium greeting those on their way to vote and asking for their support. There were sign holders for several candidates milling around and chatting and someone pulled up in a car next to us. Their radio was on and they said something about a plane crash at the World Trade Center.

"There was some confusion initially because there was a reference to Logan Airport and someone thought it was the World Trade Center across from the harbor from Logan where the terrible event had occurred. As time elapsed it became clarified that the plane was from Logan and the crash had taken place in New York City. I remember saying a prayer to myself for those who were lost.

"At first it seemed like an awful single accident and I recall talking of a story in history about a small plane that had crashed into a building in New York. I believed, if my recollection is correct, it was the Empire State Building. As time continued to unfold another resident came up and reported a second airplane crash at the same location. Clearly something was terribly amiss.

"Rumor and speculation filled the information void ebbing and flowing like the tide on a beach eroding our sense of confidence, self assuredness, and the normal sense of certainty we take so blithely for granted. As the morning progressed and people continued to come to vote there was talk on the street about potentially cancelling the preliminary election.

"It was hard to know what was the right thing to do with so little known initially but as time passed and the spectre of it being acts of terrorism came to the fore I remember thinking to myself that to stop the electoral process perhaps would feed into precisely some of what those behind these heinous acts were seeking to accomplish: to undercut our democratic way of life; to erode our sense of freedom and liberty. These thoughts were tempered by the great horror of what had happened, respect and sorrow for those whose lives were lost and the heroic stories that were being revealed.

"We needed to persevere."

Former Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallsen

HALLSEN

"It was election day and we came in early. I watched the second plane go into the World Trade Center tower on TV. There was a lot of panic, everyone started to say it was Osama bin Laden. Then there was some discussion about cancelling the election. We waited for Secretary of State Bill Galvin to make a decision. People were afraid to go out and we had people calling because they had relatives and they couldn't get through. It was chaotic and scary, especially when we found out two of the planes had come from Boston. They started closing the schools. The horror of watching it and then we found out people who knew people who had died.

"It was the fear of the unknown. The election was second place."

My Reflection

The Sun newsroom was already somber before that tragic morning.

On Monday, we learned that the mother of one of our staff writers had died unexpectedly over the weekend while on vacation in the Caribbean. His chair was empty, the computer screen dark. Our thoughts were with our colleague. We wondered about the funeral arrangements and when we could pay our respects.

On Tuesday morning, I arrived at work ready for a long day because of the election. We wouldn't go to press until 10 or so that evening – after the votes had been tallied and the election story written.

After booting up my computer, the phone rang and one of our reporters answered. He quickly hung up and said "Bob, turn the TV on."

We watched video of dark smoke billowing from the World Trade Center. Then, the second plane struck. It was not long before news reports referenced al-Qaeda and Osama bin Laden. The U.S. was under attack by terrorists.

We soon learned that one of the passengers on American Airlines Flight 11 that struck the first tower was a former Quincy resident – Susan (McAleney) McKay.

The city began to collectively mourn for all those whose lives were lost.

We continued to work and tune in the TV at intervals throughout the day. The more we watched, the harder it was to comprehend. The words "unbelievable, tragic, and surreal" seemed to repeat over and over.

Fifteen years later, 9-11 is still a very difficult day. We pause to remember all those who were victims that day and the loved ones they left behind. We also recall the heroism of firefighters, police and so many others who died during rescue efforts.

I didn't know anyone who lost his or her life on 9-11.

But I wonder if our paths had ever crossed.

On May 11, 2001, my wife Amy and I went on vacation to California. We landed in L.A. after taking a 6-hour non-stop flight from Boston.

We were among the passengers that day on United Flight 175.

The same flight that five months later struck the second WTC tower.

I wonder if the flight crew that day was the same crew on Sept. 11, 2001.

And realize how precious life really is.

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Vine, Splendor of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Mayor Eyes Uniform Trash Collection Containers

Mayor Tomas Koch announced Tuesday he will propose to the City Council a broad overhaul to how the city collects trash and recyclables, including issuing uniform covered barrels to all households in the City.

The measure aims to dramatically increase the amount of waste residents recycle and in turn reduce other trash -- providing the cost savings to pay for the new household containers without any additional fees passed on to residents.

Eliminating uncovered barrels – and plastic bags – left curbside will also reduce litter citywide and curb food sources for rodents, Koch said.

"We spent a lot of time looking at this and exploring a number of different ideas, and the benefits to efficiency, cost, cleanliness, the environment and neighborhood quality of life issues created by uniform collection will be substan-

Fall 2019 New School Target

By SCOTT JACKSON

The architect planning the city's new middle school said Monday construction could begin next spring and the building should be ready in time for students and staff to move in in the fall of 2019.

Scott Dunlap, a managing principal at Wayland-based Ai3 Architects, on Monday provided the City Council with an update on the planned replacement for the 89-year-old Reay E. Sterling Middle School. Dunlap, whose firm also designed the new Central Middle School that opened its doors in 2013, said construction of the new Sterling could begin in the late spring of 2017 and be completed in about two years, with building occupancy in the fall of 2019.

"The goal for occupancy of the project is fall 2019," Dunlap said. "We believe the building can be completed well ahead of that date, but we want to certainly leave room in the schedule to be able to furnish the building, install technology in the building and make sure it's fully prepared prior to the fall occupancy by students and staff."

Once complete, Dunlap said the new Sterling would be "truly a model middle school for not only the city of Quincy but certainly the entire commonwealth."

Included in the school, he stated, would be the most up to date technology available.

Joins City, State Officials At Local Walgreens

By TOM GORMAN

There are four million opiate prescriptions written in Massachusetts every year amounting to some 200 million pills – many of which end up unused and potentially getting into the wrong hands.

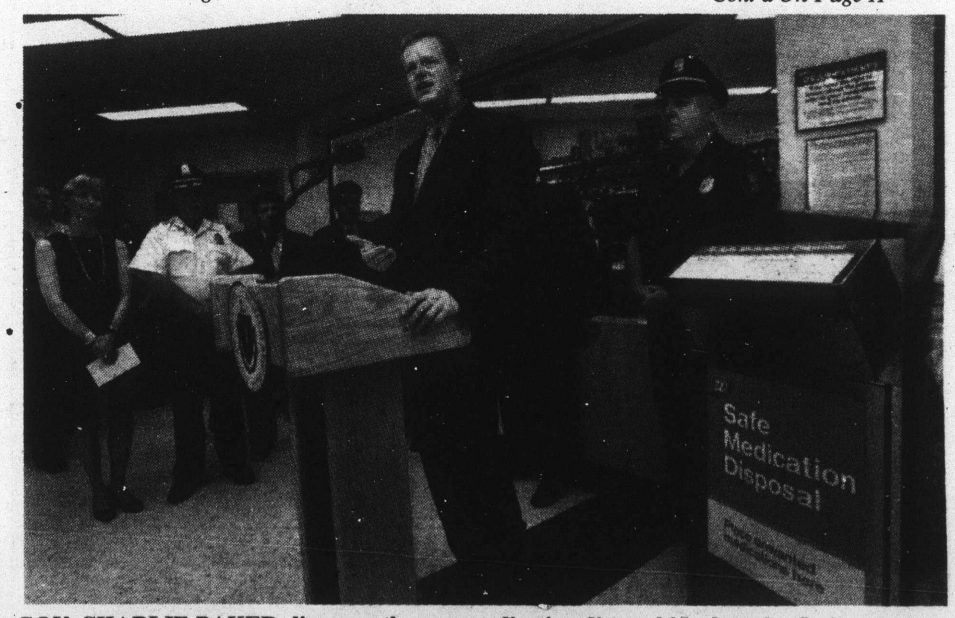

In an effort to fight the rising opioid addiction epidemic, Gov. Charlie Baker was joined by city and state officials at the Quincy Avenue Walgreens pharmacy on Sept. 7 to unveil one of the store's medicine disposal kiosks where unused pills can be discarded.

"I want to thank Walgreens for this very important effort to make it easier and frankly more clinically and socially acceptable for people to bring in, throw away and dispose of properly, prescription medications," Baker said.

Walgreens is the first national pharmacy chain to install 13 drug take-back kiosks in its Massachusetts stores and 500 in 35 other states. The store's regional Vice President Brad Ulrich explained that the kiosks provide a safe place for people to get rid of unneeded or unused medications at no cost and no questions asked.

"We need to make the City Worker: Mother Teresa 'Changed My Whole Life'

Bill Foley Volunteered With Newest Saint; Attends Canonization In Vatican City

By SCOTT JACKSON

Bill Foley was among the thousands of people who filled St. Peter's Square in Vatican City recently when Pope Francis canonized Mother Teresa, elevating her to sainthood.

Foley, who works for the city of Quincy, first met Mother Teresa at a special Mass in Newton in 1996 during her visit to Boston. In March 1997, he spent a month in Calcutta, India, volunteering with Mother Teresa and returned to Calcutta for another month following her death that September.

Foley said the crowd at the Vatican at the Sept. 4 canonization was unlike anything he had ever seen before.

"I've been to a lot of sporting events. I've been at the Red Sox pennant when they played Cleveland and won. I've been at hockey games. You couldn't compare it to anything – there's not a stadium around here that would house over 125,000 to 200,000 people. I was literally at a standstill for over two hours waiting to get into the Vatican," Foley said.

"It was crazy. You had people with small children to people that were over 80 years old that were there – all facets of life. Every nationality.

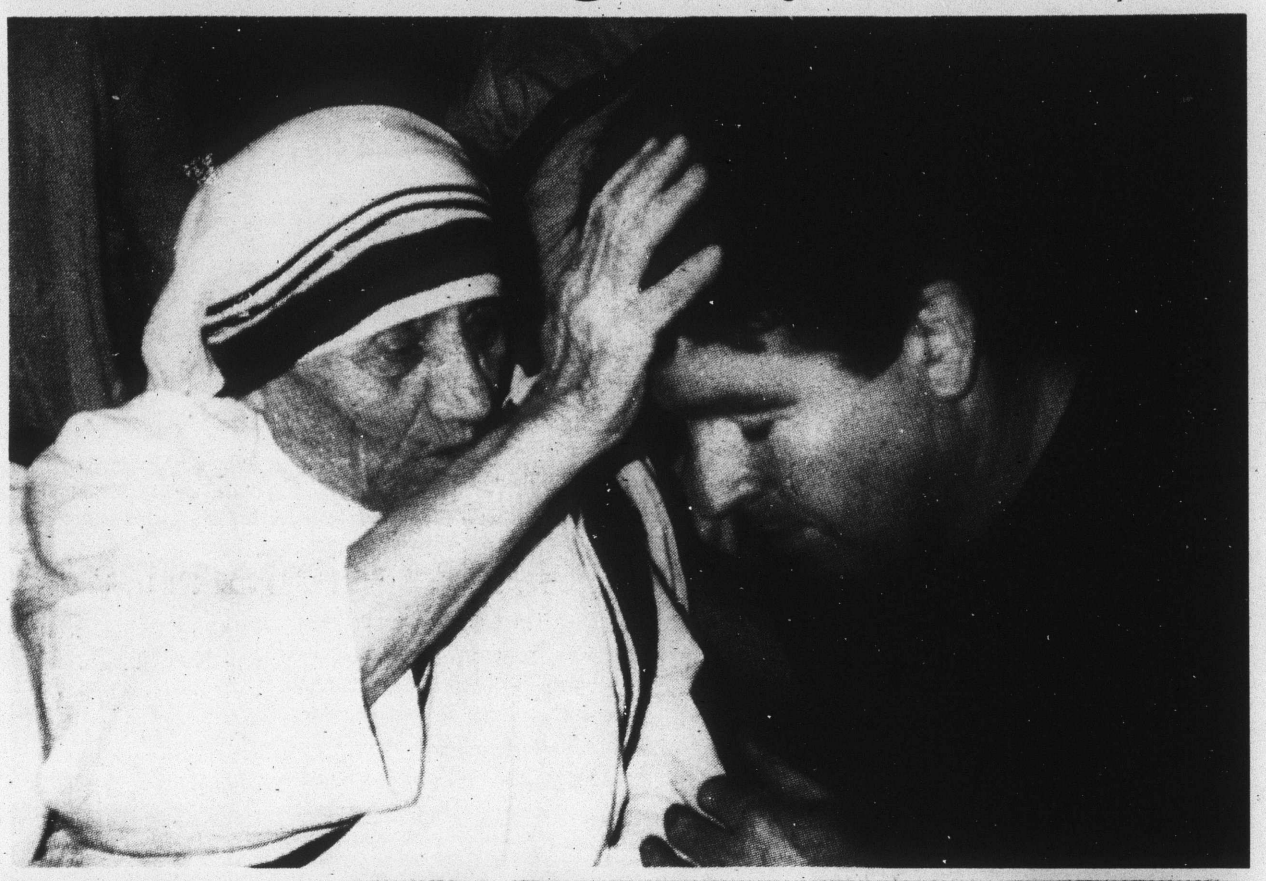

"I'll tell you one thing about Mother Teresa that I observed when I knew her: She was the most humble person I probably ever met, next my own mother. She didn't want that. She wouldn't have went for that. If you told her she was going to be canonized, she wouldn't have shown up."

Mother Teresa had a way of bringing people together, Foley continued.

"She had a thing about bringing people together with God and doing charitable work. In her own way, I think she got us all together and accomplished her mission," he said. "She was something out of this world."

BILL FOLEY shares a moment and blessing with Mother Teresa nearly 20 years ago. Foley, who works for the city of Quincy, spent one month in 1997 in Calcutta, India, with Mother Teresa and returned there for another month following her death that September. Foley said Mother Teresa – proclaimed a saint by Pope Francis earlier this month – "changed my whole life." "I always thought she was a saint," Foley said.

Committee Opposes Lifting Charter School Cap

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy School Committee unanimously voted to oppose a referendum on the November ballot that would lift the cap on charter schools in the state.

The committee on Sept. 7 voted 7-0 in favor of a resolution introduced by Mayor Thomas Koch opposing the referendum.

Question 2 on the Nov. 8 ballot would allow for 12 new charter schools each year in the state if approved by voters. Charter schools are independent public schools that operate under five-year charters granted by the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

There are currently 78 charter schools in Massachusetts, according to the state, and another two approved but not yet open; 43,548 students attend charter schools, and 32,500 others are on waiting lists.

Koch, who is chairman of the school board, in his resolution said Quincy is losing $361,497 to charter schools – and public school districts statewide will lose more than $400 million – this year alone, calling that "a loss of funds that is undermining the ability of districts to provide with the educational services to which they're entitled."

Additionally, the mayor said charter schools are often approved despite objections from the majority of local residents and elected officials, are not accountable to local elected officials once they begin to operate, and "fail to serve the same proportion of special needs students, low income, and English language learners as the district from which they receive students."

The Commonwealth's charter school system, Koch said, "is creating separate and unequal opportunities for success," and passage of the referendum would only worsen the problem.

"Lifting the cap on charter schools would greatly worsen the problems listed above and lead to a costly and divisive two-track school system," Koch said.

Committee member Anne Mahoney suggested the board make a reccomendation to the City Council to pass a similar resolution to oppose lifting the cap on charter schools.

"It would help as a city and really help educate people on this motion so they will make the right vote when the time comes," she

Investigation Still Open In Wollaston Woman's Death

By SCOTT JACKSON

The death of a 52-year-old Wollaston woman whose husband said he accidentally struck her with a van while backing out of his driveway remained open more than 10 days later.

Capt. John Dougan said the death remained under investigation as of noontime Tuesday, and no charges or citations had been filed.

"Accident reconstruction is still looking at it," he said. "They're looking over a few leads."

Police received a report of a pedestrian accident shortly before 2:30 p.m. on Sept. 2 at 19 Phillips St. in Wollaston. The victim, 52-year-old Zhen Li, was pronounced dead at the scene. Her 54-year-old husband, whose name has not been released, told officers "he was backing his vehicle out of his driveway and accidentally struck his wife," police said in a statement.

The husband was uninjured but taken to the hospital because he was so distraught, according to police.

The husband's name has not been released because no charges or citations have been filed against him.

WHITE HOT

Of the three precious metals (gold, silver, and platinum), platinum is both the rarest and most valuable. Chemically inert and resistant to corrosion, platinum does not tarnish when exposed to the atmosphere, but the quality that endears it most to its admirers is its white color. This hue makes this most durable metal the perfect choice for diamond settings. Platinum's lustrous white color enhances the whiteness of diamond to create a piece that sparkles all over. For this reason alone, platinum was the preferred metal of choice for diamond engagement rings, with platinum bezels that hold the diamond securely in a reflective white halo.

Platinum is sought after for its durability and hypoallergenic nature. Its lustrous color is classically beautiful. Our platinum engagement ring settings are carefully crafted to showcase a stunning center gem. If we don't have it in stock we will get it, usually within 72 hours with no obligation on the customer's part. Our store is located at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. ST. PETER'S SQUARE in Vatican City (inside Rome, Italy) was filled with more than 125,000 people for the Sept. 4 canonization of Mother Teresa. Those in the crowd ranged from small children to those over the age of 80 and came from a variety of different nations, according to Bill Foley, who attended the event and said it was unlike anything he had witnessed before.

or to her canonization, and said she helped turn his life around.

"I think it's nice of her to be recognized and thought of as a Saint, but in my eyes I always thought of her as a Saint," he said. "After working with her, I never experienced anything like that in my life. It changed my whole life.

"I was on the other side, living a different lifestyle, and I turned my life around. You know what they say – it's progress not perfection – I was turning my life around, headed in the right direction, and all of sudden I ran into her and met her, and things changed.

"I think it's great in one way that she's a saint for all the people who pray to her. But me personally, I always thought she was a saint."

Foley said he could not describe the feeling he got from spending a month in Calcutta with Mother Teresa.

"When I actually got to spend some real time with her, you couldn't express the feeling that you get," he stated. "I was there for a month and I got to go to Mass with her every morning, and it was nice."

While in Calcutta, Foley volunteered at Prem Dan, a convalescent facility run by the Missionaries of Charity, which Mother Teresa founded; worked with children on the street; brought medicine and other medical supplies to local villagers; and visited area hospitals to talk to individuals. He took turns rotating between those different tasks.

"They had you move around," Foley explained. "They only let you do something for two or three days and then they moved you around because they didn't want you to get too sick of one thing."

Foley said many of those in need who he met were lonely and in need of someone to talk to. Even today, he stated, he still talks to those in need he meets out of compassion – and also assists at homeless shelters, such as the Pine Street Inn in Boston and the now closed shelter on Long Island.

MOTHER TERESA – now known as St. Teresa of Calcutta – talks with Bill Foley in 1997. Foley spent one month with Mother Teresa in the Indian city that spring and returned there that fall following her death. "She had a thing about bringing people together with God and doing charitable work," Foley said. Photos Courtesy Bill Foley

"A big thing that we suffer from in this world is loneliness. Just the compassion of talking to somebody, saying hello and a couple of sentences or a short story, can go so far in life," Foley said.

"I get it back tenfold. I do it as a little bit more than a hobby now. It takes two minutes to say 'hey, what's up' or 'how you doing?' Sometimes I might embarrass the person that I'm with – 'why do you always have to talk to somebody' – but it actually makes me feel good by participating in these things."

Foley said he learned that lesson from Mother Teresa herself.

"She never passed anybody on the street. Even going from the Mother House to Prem Dan, when she'd walk it took us 45 minutes to go for a 15- or 20-minute walk, because of her compassion to another human being," Foley said.

"I like to think that rubbed off on me a little bit and maybe I can share that – by doing what I'm doing, maybe someone like yourself can say 'if Foley can do it, we can do it.'"

Foley said he has thought about returning to Calcutta to volunteer there again. When in Rome, Foley talked with a Bosnian woman who works at an orphanage in the city, and said he might be able to make it there with his wife and three children at some point.

Foley, however, said one doesn't have to travel across the world to help someone out – you can do that at home where you live.

"You don't have to go to Calcutta, and you don't have to go to Rome to a canonization, to help a person," he said. "It's a lot easier, I'll tell you right now, to help somebody in a different country and do it for a short time than to help the person right next to you."

SISTERS OF THE Missionaries of Charity were among the thousands who attended the Sept. 4 canonization of Mother Teresa, who founded the group in 1950 in Calcutta, India.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1908 real photo postcard view of the A.B. Robbins Iron Company's new factory building at 33 Newport Ave. in Norfolk Downs. The company's specialty was ornamental iron products such as balconies, railings and fences. Alpheus B. Robbins of Boston had bought a new house on Beach Street in Wollaston a few years earlier and like a number of Boston businessmen he decided to move his company to the burgeoning industrial area of North Quincy. The old Wollaston Foundry, which was just to the left of this plant, was the first company to locate here and became known as the "Mother of Wollaston Industry." Early in the 20th century its presence attracted such well-known companies as Pneumatic Scale, S.H. Couch, Boston Gear Works and the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company, and many more. A few years after building this factory Robbins became ill and moved to California for health reasons. Charles Gilliatt bought the business and changed the name to the Norfolk Iron Company. Today all these companies are gone from Quincy and this building is now home to a variety of businesses including a sign company, kickboxing studio and a Born Again Ministry. The wing on the right is now the South Shore Auto Collision Center. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

This President Says Leave The Yakoo, Red Raiders Alone

Readers Forum

I am writing in response to the op-ed regarding retiring Yakoo and the Red Raiders - what a crazy idea.

I grew up in South Quincy. I went to Lincoln School and Sterling Junior High and then Quincy High School – the same as my mother and her siblings who all grew up in South Quincy.

I was a cheerleader at Quincy High – as was my daughter. My niece went to North Quincy High and was a cheerleader there. She is younger than my children and I had been out of high school for many years when she was cheering at the Thanksgiving (football) games.

My husband and I went to those games but I told my niece that I was coming to see her cheer but there was NO WAY I could cheer for North Quincy – even though I don't know anyone who was playing for Quincy High School.

When I think of the North Quincy Red Raiders and Yakoo I am not thinking of Indians in a derogatory way. I think of Quincy as I knew it – and Quincy has changed tremendously. My South Quincy neighborhood is so different. What used to be a neighborhood of Italian families is now rental properties with people I don't know anymore. That nice neighborhood feeling is gone.

We now live in Rockland but South Quincy will always be where I am from – my grandparents had their home there. My mother and her siblings grew up there as did myself and my siblings and my children. We have many pets buried in the back yard of that South Quincy house.

I work in an insurance agency in Quincy and we insured the man whose image is Yakoo. He came into the office one day and we got to talking. I told him I was definitely a Quincy President. He offered me a Yakoo pin and I took it. I still have that pin although I have never worn it – but it is special to me.

So I say to Sherrie from Weymouth – Mind your own business and leave the North Quincy Red Raiders and Yakoo alone!

A Fun Caricature

Re: Yakoo

It would be nice if we could all accept one another, but, I suppose that's not going to happen.

Could we please try to think of this as a fun caricature in honor of a former teammate for a high school football team!

Changing A Beloved Tradition Would Be 'Ridiculous'

I'm writing in response to the article about the North Quincy High Red Raiders and Yakoo.

As a proud graduate of North Quincy High and a former patient of Dr. Yacubian, I say, "get over it!"

Change is not always a good thing. I think it's past time to get back to basics and a much simpler time. A time when you didn't need to worry about offending someone before you said or did something. A time when "diversity" wasn't even heard of – no one gave a thought to someone being different from them in any way. A time when schools didn't have a "zero tolerance" policy on kids being kids on a natural path to them becoming mature adults. A time when yes, someone did lose at something because not every child had to be a winner so no feelings would be hurt, good lord. A time of simplicity and tradition.

I find it a ridiculous sign of these ridiculous times that anyone would want to change a beloved tradition like the Red Raiders and Yakoo because they're afraid of offending someone.

Once again – get over it!

Seeking To Locate Working Women Of WWII

American Rosie the Riveter Association is trying to locate women who worked on the home front during WWII. Thousands of women worked to support the war effort as riveters, welders, electricians, inspectors in plants, sewing clothing and parachutes for the military, ordnance workers, rolling bandages, clerical, farming, and many other jobs such as volunteer workers collecting scrap metals and other critical materials.

These women have stories of their WWII experiences that are of historical value and perhaps have never been told. American Rosie the Riveter Association would like to acknowledge these women with a certificate and have their stories placed in our Archives.

If you are a woman (or descendant of a woman) who worked during WWII, or if you are just interested in more information, please call the toll free number 1-888-557-6743 or e-mail americanrosietheriveter2@yahoo.com.

Council Hearing On Parkingway Addition

The city council was planning to hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. at city hall on proposed land taking to extend the Mayor Charles A. Ross Parkingway.

The proposed extension would add about 300 spaces to the southern end of the parking area. The new area would cover a triangular block bounded by the Parkingway, School Street and Hancock Court and a smaller section on School Street across from Hancock Court from the main lot.

Cost to the city to acquire the land and buildings was estimated at $413,200. In addition, it would cost $150,000 to construct the lot. The City Council in July appropriated $13,500 as the necessary qualifying fee for borrowing to finance the project.

(Editor's Note: The project was never built because of strong public opposition.)

QUINCY SEEKS SUCCESSOR TO DR. ASH

The city launched a search for a new commissioner of health to succeed Dr. Richard M. Ash who would retire in October. Dr. Ash will become 70 during October and under state law must retire at the end of that month.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said that he asked Personnel Director Kenneth G. Gardner to look for a replacement. Mr. Gardner said there was no requirement that the new health commissioner be a doctor. The city is concentrating its search for a person trained in public health. The post now pays $11,825 per year.

QCAP Hosting 5th Annual Best Chef Challenge Oct. 6

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) invites guests to cook up some fun at its 5th annual Best Chef fundraising event at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 6 at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

The competition features some of the area's most celebrated chefs in a battle of culinary skills.

Susan Wornick will serve as master of ceremonies.

Battling for the Best Chef title this year will be:

Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove & Wahlburgers; David Todisco of the Tavern at Quarry Hills, Granite Links; Tony DeRienzo of Abby Park and Novara; Jose Munoz of The Four's; and Greg Jordan of the Quarry Restaurant in Hingham.

The challenge: In a race against the clock, the chefs must use a basket of secret ingredients commonly provided by QCAP's Southwest Community Food Center – the organization's food pantry. Using only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, they must take these basic ingredients and create a gourmet dish.

Past ingredients have included corn flakes, canned green beans, and peanut butter.

Crowning the 2016 Best Chef will be judges Marc Bertrand of 98.5 The Sports Hub; Chazy Dowaliby, former editor, Patriot Ledger; and Barbara Isola, Quincy School Committee and host of "Into the Frying Pan."

New this year: One lucky guest will have the opportunity to bid and win a spot at the judges' table, helping to sample the dishes and select this year's Best Chef.

All guests can sample dishes from the chefs' restaurants as part of the "People's Choice" competition.

The night will also feature raffles and live and silent auctions, including vacation packages, sporting and entertainment event tickets; autographed memorabilia; fine art; jewelry; and golf, restaurant, and spa gift certificates.

Tickets are $100 per person and $175 per couple. Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serves more than 22,000 unduplicated people annually in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull, and more than 80 surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston communities.

For more than 50 years, QCAP has been the leading, non-profit organization in the Greater Quincy area dedicated to reducing poverty and helping low-income families achieve economic security.

In addition to the Southwest Community Food Center, services include adult education and workforce development, financial education, including money management and credit repair counseling, job coaching and placement, Head Start and Early Head Start, access to quality and affordable early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance and weatherization, homebuyer education, mortgage foreclosure counseling, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, and housing services.

Major sponsors include: Rockland Trust, Bank of Canton, State Street, Mutual of America, Stop & Shop, Wells Fargo, Woodard & Curran, Anodyne Medical Services, Eastern Bank, The Law Office of George Burke, Loomis, Sayles & Company, MountainOne Bank, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, Quincy Mutual, South Shore Savings Bank, Steward Carney Hospital, and EnTrust.

The keynote speaker at the event will be Richard Primack, a Professor of Biology at Boston University, who is well-known in the field of climate change biology. For the past 14 years, Prof. Primack and his colleagues have been investigating the effects of a warming climate on the plants and birds of Massachusetts, with an emphasis on continuing the observations made 160 years ago by Henry David Thoreau in Concord. Prof. Primack will specifically address the impact of climate change on the Blue Hills Reservation.

There will also be a special raffle as part of the festivities: a gourmet dinner for six at the top of the Blue Hills Observatory, catered by Cypress Catering, the catering arm of popular Milton restaurants Abby Park and Novara. Tickets for the raffle are $15 each or 3/$35 and can be purchased at www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/Raffle2016.

Since 1979, the Friends of the Blue Hills has protected the Blue Hills Reservation by inspiring people to care for, enjoy, and explore its stunning natural beauty and resources. The organization maintains 125 miles of hiking trails, protects the park from unwise uses, and provides free year-round programing to encourage people to visit the Blue Hills.

Ann's Strawberry Squares

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for a delicious strawberry bar that my niece Ann made. She brought over a sample last week and it was so delicious I had to share it with you today.

I had never baked this before, but it is an easy recipe to follow, and the bars are a great treat with coffee or tea.

STRAWBERRY SQUARES

Recipe:

Preheat oven to 400 degrees
½ cup of sugar
½ cup butter
1 egg
1 and ½ cup of flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon of almond extract (or vanilla can be used)
3/4 cups strawberry preserves (or any jams or preserves of your choice)

Blend together well the butter, sugar, egg, and flavoring. Combine flour, salt and baking powder and add to mixture. This will make dough.

Press half the dough into a greased and floured 9-inch square pan. Then top with preserves and spread evenly almost to edges. On wax paper, roll out remaining dough so it is approximately a 9-inch square. Place over preserves and peel off wax paper and adjust over preserves.

Bake 30 minutes (400 degrees) or until toothpick comes out clean. When out of the oven for about 15 minutes sprinkle the top with confectioners sugar. Cut into squares when cooled.

P.S. Apricot jam, strawberry jam or any favorite fruit preserves can be used.

Homemade Granola Bars

By SUSIE

Here is a fun and tasty recipe for some homemade granola bars. These can be stored in Ziploc baggies and are so much fun to make. Have the kids join you as well!

The flax adds important nutrients and it is tasteless. Make sure you buy ground flax and always store in freezer to prevent it from getting rancid.

- 6 tablespoons pasture butter (I use kerrygold)
- 1/3 cup coconut sugar
- 1/4 cup maple syrup (the real stuff)
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- ¼ tsp sea salt
- 2 cups quick-cooking/instant oats organic PLAIN oats (do not use regular old-fashioned oats)
- 1-3/4 cups crispy brown rice cereal (I use Erewhon brand)
- 1/2 cup sliced almonds
- 1/4 cup flax meal
- I/3 cup mini chocolate chips (I use Enjoy Life brand)

Instructions

1. Line a 9 x 13-inch baking pan with parchment paper and grease lightly

2. In a large pot, combine the butter, sugar and maple syrup. Bring the mixture to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring constantly. Lower the heat and simmer until the sugar dissolves and the mixture is slightly thickened, about 2 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the vanilla and salt.

3. Add the oats, rice cereal, almonds and flax meal to the pan and fold with a rubber spatula until well combined.

4. Transfer the mixture to the prepared pan and press down lightly with a rubber spatula to even out. Sprinkle the miniature chocolate chips over top, adding more or less to suit your taste, and press down firmly with the spatula so the chips stick. The mixture should be tightly compacted in the pan.

Place the pan in the refrigerator for 1-1/2 - 2 hours to cool.

As the Society approaches its 125th anniversary in 2018, it has set goals of telling the often overlooked story of modern Quincy, as well as of our storied past, and of reaching new audiences through social media, video, podcasts, digitization of resources, while we maintain its traditional role services, including educating 1,400 Quincy Public Schools children annually and providing a gathering place for all those interested in the history of Quincy.

Deep Vein Thrombosis: Signs, Symptoms, Treatments

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Deep vein thrombosis (DVT) occurs when a blood clot (thrombus) forms in one or more of the deep veins in your body, usually in your legs. It can result in leg pain or swelling, but may arise devoid of any symptoms.

Deep vein thrombosis can develop if you suffer from particular medical conditions that affect how your blood clots or can also happen if you are inactive for long periods of time, such as after surgery, following an accident, or if you are confined to a bed. DVT is a severe condition because blood clots in your veins can break loose, travel through your bloodstream and lodge in your lungs, impeding blood flow (pulmonary embolism).

Signs and symptoms of a DVT can include:

• Swelling in the affected leg. Rarely, there may be swelling in both legs.

• Pain in your leg that often starts in your calf and can feel like soreness or cramping.

Blood clots can be initiated by anything that prevents your blood from circulating normally or clotting properly. Various factors can increase your risk. Risk factors for DVT include:

• Inheriting a blood-clotting disorder.

• Prolonged bed rest, such as during a long hospital stay, or paralysis.

• Injury to your veins or surgery.

• Pregnancy which increases the pressure in the veins in your pelvis and legs.

• Birth control pills or hormone replacement therapy.

• Being overweight or obese.

RUTH JONES

• Smoking.

• Some forms of cancer increase the amount of substances in your blood that cause your blood to clot and some cancer treatments also increase the risk.

• People with heart failure have a greater risk of DVT and pulmonary embolism.

• Bowel diseases, such as Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis.

• A personal or family history of deep vein thrombosis or pulmonary embolism (PE).

• Being over age 60 increases your risk of DVT, though it can occur at any age.

• Sitting for extended periods of time, such as when driving or flying. Blood clots can form in the calves of your legs if your calf muscles aren't moving for lengthy periods.

A dangerous complication associated with deep vein thrombosis is pulmonary embolism. A pulmonary embolism transpires when a blood vessel in your lungs becomes blocked by a blood clot (thrombus) that has migrated to your lungs from another part of your body, usually your leg. A pulmonary embolism can be life threatening, so it's crucial to be attentive for its signs and symptoms and seek immediate medical attention if they occur. Signs and symptoms of a pulmonary embolism include:

• Unexplained sudden onset of shortness of breath.

• Chest pain or discomfort that worsens when you take a deep breath or when you cough.

• Feeling lightheaded or dizzy, or fainting.

• Rapid pulse.

• Coughing up blood.

A less grave, but more common complication that can occur after deep vein thrombosis is a condition known as postphlebitic syndrome, also called post-thrombotic syndrome. This syndrome is used to specify a collection of signs and symptoms including; swelling of the legs, leg pain, skin discoloration, and skin sores. This syndrome is caused by injury to your veins from the blood clot and the subsequent reduction of blood flow in the affected areas. The symptoms may not occur until a few years after the DVT.

To determine a diagnosis of deep vein thrombosis, your doctor will take a complete history and perform a physical exam to check for any areas of swelling, tenderness or discoloration on your skin. The doctor may suggest further testing, including:

• Ultrasound.

• Blood test. Almost all people who develop severe deep vein thrombosis have an elevated blood level of a clot-dissolving substance called D dimer.

• Venography where a dye is injected into a large vein in your foot or ankle and an X-ray procedure is performed.

• CT or MRI scans.

The main emphasis of treatment is to prevent the clot from getting any larger, as well as inhibiting the clot from breaking loose and causing a pulmonary embolism.

Treatment options include:

• Blood thinning medications such as Coumadin, Xarelto or Lovenox are commonly suggested for treatment. Blood-thinning medications can have serious side effects if you take too much or too little, so it is vital to take your medication precisely as your doctor prescribes.

• Clotbusters (thrombolytics), also referred to as tissue plasminogen activators (TPA), are drugs that are administered through an IV line to break up blood clots or may be given through a catheter placed directly into the clot.

• Filters. A filter may be implanted into a large vein in your abdomen. The filter prevents clots that break loose from lodging in your lungs.

• Compression stockings. These help prevent swelling associated with deep vein thrombosis.

As is the case with most medical illnesses, prevention is of prime importance. Minimizing risk factors is the key to deep vein thrombosis prevention. Following treatment, it is imperative to watch your diet and look for signs of excessive bleeding, as well as take steps to help prevent a subsequent DVT. It is important to follow up with your doctor frequently to see if your medication, diet or treatments need to be modified. Be vigilant in assessing yourself for any indications of excessive bleeding, which can be a side effect of taking medications such as blood thinners. If your doctor recommends them, wearing compression stockings can aide in the prevention of blood clots in the legs. If you've been stationary, the quicker you get moving, the less likely you are to develop blood clots. Your risk of developing DVT during travel is low, but it becomes higher if you're sitting for more than four hours at a time while driving or flying. You can lower the risk by moving around every so often, get out of your car and move around at intervals during long drives. Walk in the aisles if you're flying, taking a train, or riding a bus. Stretching your legs and feet while you're sitting, helps to keep your blood moving steadily in your calves and can lower your risk of DVT development.

Charter School Cap

Allison Cox, president of the Quincy Education Association, urged the School Committee to approve the resolution opposing the ballot question during the open forum portion of the Sept. 7 meeting. Cox said 91 other school boards across the state had done so prior to that night's vote.

Cox said the $361,497 Quincy will pay to charter schools this year could have been spent inside the school system.

"This is money that could have been used for additional programs for our students, for professional developments, for curriculum materials, and so much more," she said. "Although Quincy students attend, and Quincy Public Schools funds are used, you – the elected leaders of Quincy Public Schools – have no oversight with regard to these funds or these schools."

Other communities will pay more to charter schools this year, Cox said, citing state projections; Somerville is paying more than $7 million, Cambridge $11.6 million, Brockton $4.3 million, Plymouth $6.5 million, Weymouth $1.1 million and Boston $130 million.

"We don't need to look very far to see the devastating impact charter schools are having on nearby districts," Cox said.

Lily Huang, a Carruth Street resident who works for Jobs with Justice, also spoke in favor of the resolution opposing lifting the cap on charter schools during the open forum.

No residents spoke in favor of lifting the cap on charter schools.

"We have prepared the project budget with the specific goal of making certain that it has the most modern technology, not only in the form of computers and wireless access and that kind of thing [but also] from the security side, the lighting side, the energy efficiency side," Dunlap said.

"Technologies are evolving every single day and our goal is to take advantage of all those that enhance student learning and/or increase building operation and efficiency."

Before construction can commence, the City Council must first approve the project. Mayor Thomas Koch on Monday asked the council approve funding for the $59 million project. The Massachusetts School Building Authority in July agreed to reimburse $28.52 million of those costs.

The council must approve the financing for the project by Nov. 18, or risk losing out on the reimbursement. The body's finance committee will meet on Thursday, Sept. 29, at 6:30 p.m. inside the current Sterling Middle School to begin its review of the proposal.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said it was exciting to see dates attached to the project.

"This is a long time coming," he said of the new school. "It's a beautiful plan, a beautiful design.

"I'm very excited to actually see dates attached to building occupancy, end of construction, start of construction – that's the first time, I think, we've had a presentation that's had dates to it. That's very exciting and should be exciting to the community as well."

The new middle school would be built at the same site as the present Sterling, which is located at 444 Granite St., but set further back from Granite Street. The 95,155 square foot facility would have room for up to 430 students in grades five through eight.

The new school will stand three stories tall, with only the top two floors visible from Granite Street because of the site's topography. The first floor would house academic neighborhoods for students in grades five and sixth with seventh and eighth graders on the second floor. The lower level of the building, accessible from the Roberts Street side, will include the gym, music room and a 280-seat auditorium.

A total of 61 parking spaces would be provided – 50 for staff on the Roberts Street side of the building and 11 visitor spaces on the Granite Street side. There are 29 spaces on site currently. A drop-off/pick-up lane would also be added on the Granite Street side, where two entrances would be available for students – one for those in grades six through eight and the other for fifth graders.

Dunlap said the MSBA would reimburse the city for 73.2 percent of all eligible project costs. The only part of the square footage not reimbursable is the seating in the auditorium, he stated, and the MSBA also only reimburses certain project costs – such as furniture and technology – up to a certain point.

The present Sterling Middle School first opened its doors in 1927, and city and state officials have said it suffers from deficiencies in major building systems including mechanical, electrical, envelope, windows and accessibility.

Before being renamed in honor of Sterling, a longtime principal there, the current facility on site was South Junior High School. Koch in August said he would consider asking the School Committee, which he chairs, to name the new school after the neighborhood it is located in and find an alternate way to honor the late principal.

The new middle school would be the third facility to open in Quincy in the last decade, following on the heels of the $127.76 million Quincy High School that opened in 2010 and the $50 million Central Middle School that opened in 2013. The MSBA provided reimbursements of $72.2 million and $32 million, respectively, for those projects.

The 97-year-old Squantum Elementary School is next in line for replacement. A statement of interest has been submitted to the MSBA, the first step in the process of working with the state agency on a replacement or overhaul of the facility.

Koch also included the purchase of the former St. Mary School site on Crescent Street in the capital plan he unveiled earlier this year, and the council could be asked to approve that acquisition this fall. That site could then be used as a location for a new elementary school to serve West Quincy.

Readers Forum

Reader Agrees: Retire 'Yakoo'

I am so glad that Sherrie Noble, in The Quincy Sun's 9/1/16 issue, has expressed my feelings regarding the North Quincy High School mascot "Yakoo." ("Says It's Time To Retire 'Yakoo' and 'Red Raiders'")

I cannot add anything to her well-written, well-reasoned piece and I applaud her courage in speaking out. I've lived in Quincy for almost 30 years and all my children went through the Quincy schools. I was involved in both their individual school PTOs and Citywide PTO. I well remember bringing this very topic up at a meeting of Citywide only to be told that there was no point, nobody would ever countenance changing the mascot to something less racially charged.

I would be personally attacked, and that my children would be marked as the kids of "that woman from away" who wants to "come in and start telling us how to run our lives." So I promised my kids that I wouldn't start trying to get the mascot changed until after they graduated, but I also promised that I would rejoin any change effort after they were at college. I am now reminded of my promise every day when I go by the new playing field being built behind North Quincy High. Thank God there is no picture of Yakoo on the new scoreboard, but when games start being played there, will there still be students dressed in buckskins with warpaint on their faces, turning cartwheels in front of the stands and urging everyone to do war whoops, the way there was when my kids were playing in the band not that long ago?

And the refreshments stand there, which is to be named "Yakoo's" – will there be pictures of that caricature – which is dressed as a Plains Indian, by the way – for the opposing teams from other towns to see?

As Ms. Noble writes: "Yakoo will always be a part of Quincy's history. It is time he and the team name are retired with appropriate dignity as pieces from the past no longer having a place in the diverse, honorable city of Quincy today." I cannot state my viewpoint any better than that, but I would add: Quincy has such a proud past.

Let's face the future, embracing all that makes us proud about Quincy and not being afraid to let go of all that does not.

$250K For Kindergarten Aides Approved

Charlie Baker and the House of Representatives included it in their respective budget proposals, but the Senate did not include it and it was not in the budget that ultimately passed.

While the city did not receive the $250,000 full day kindergarten grant, Mullaney said Quincy received an extra $330,000 in Chapter 70 funds from the state, which more than offset the loss of the grant.

Chapter 70 funds are allocated to communities for educational expenses and go directly to those communities' general funds.

Walter Hubley Appointed Headmaster At Woodward School

Walter Hubley, a lifelong Quincy resident, has been appointed headmaster of The Woodward School in Quincy.

Hubley is the 13th headmaster of the school that is beginning its 122nd academic year this fall. The Woodward School first opened its doors in 1894. Founded in 1869 by President John Adams' cousin and family doctor, Ebenezer Woodward and his wife, Mary Greenleaf Woodward, The Woodward School is an independent college preparatory school for girls in grades 6 through 12.

Hubley's professional experience spans 28 years, working for major communications companies such as Continental Cablevision, as well as three software start-up companies through Pilot House Ventures in Boston. His work includes organizational leadership, software development, product management, and business development.

Hubley has a BS in business administration, a Certificate in Leadership and Management from MIT Sloan School of Management, and leadership training with Thayer Leadership Development Group at West Point.

WALTER HUBLEY

"I am honored to join The Woodward School, a historic institution that has bridged three centuries by remaining true to its founding mission of educating talented and hardworking young women to thrive in college and beyond as engaged citizens and leaders" said Hubley. "Our strong classical curriculum serves as the foundation upon which the School will continue to excel and I am thrilled to lead the School."

Hubley said he will draw from his leadership experience, technology background, and passion for the arts to lead Woodward into the future.

"Woodward embraces the convergence of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) and the Arts - a convergence known as STEAM. Making cross-curricular connections throughout our programs creates a powerful approach to teaching," Hubley continues. "We will continue investing in the arts and introduce more advanced computer science classes, critical for advancement in today's globally competitive economy. At Woodward, it's full STEAM ahead."

"Walter cares deeply about the future of our City and its young people, dedicating his time and talent to a wide range of community issues over the years. His passion for Quincy, and for The Woodward School's place in it, will serve the school community tremendously well. I am very much looking forward to working with him," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Recently appointed to the Board of Directors of Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), Hubley is dedicated to community service. He is the co-founder and president of the Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association, which spearheaded the recent Community Preservation Act (CPA) project at Safford Park on Beale Street, which was managed by the City of Quincy Parks & Forestry Department. He is a former foster parent and long time volunteer foster care case reviewer for the Department of Children and Families (DCF) and a member of the Sons of the American Legion in honor of his father, Edgar, who served in WWII and the Korean War.

This past summer, Hubley partnered with Ward 3 City Councillor Ian Cain and Discover Quincy to organize the first annual PorchFest Quincy, a music festival featuring 70 performances at over 40 locations. Thousands of people from across the South Shore enjoyed music from all genres hosted on neighborhood porches in the Wollaston and Squantum neighborhoods in this free music festival that engaged the community while celebrating local artists.

Hubley lives on Wollaston Hill in Quincy with his wife Kathryn, and their two children, Victoria and Nathan. His daughter Victoria is a 2016 graduate of Woodward and has begun her first year of studies at Lesley University. His son Nathan is a freshman at North Quincy High School.

$4.2 Million Federal Grant For Quincy Center T Station

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) will receive $4.2 million in grant funding through the U.S. Department of Transportation's Buses and Bus Facilities Competitive Grant Program. The MBTA will utilize this grant funding to help build a new Quincy Center bus terminal and make intermodal enhancements.

The grant announcement was made Sept. 9 by Cong. Stephen F. Lynch (D-Boston) and Bay State Senators Elizabeth Warren and Edward J. Markey.

The $4,273,771 grant will be used to help transform the Quincy Center Intermodal MBTA Station. The funding will provide an important first step toward a new bus terminal – and the larger redevelopment of the entire MBTA station – that will link with the Red Line subway, the commuter rail, and the National Park Service shuttle buses. The Quincy Center MBTA station and bus terminal is within walking distance of City Hall, the Adams National Park, Quincy College, and residential and commercial developments.

The MBTA, state officials, and the City of Quincy continue to develop long-term plans for the station, including a new parking garage and the potential for a transit-oriented development on the MBTA property.

"I applaud Mayor Thomas Koch, Governor Charlie Baker, Secretary Stephanie Pollack, and their teams for their close collaboration on the redevelopment plan for the Quincy Center Station," Lynch said. "The City of Quincy and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts are committed to ensuring that Quincy remains a hub for transportation throughout the South Shore. By investing in a new bus terminal, we will not only improve safety and reliability for South Shore residents, but also continue to spur investment to revitalize Quincy Center. I am proud to have worked with our congressional delegation to ensure that the Department of Transportation recognized the value of this federal investment in Quincy."

"This federal transportation grant is terrific news for Quincy and for the region," Warren said. "The new Quincy Center Bus Terminal will improve families' transit options and help revitalize the area. I'm committed to making sure the federal government is a good partner for our cities and towns in Massachusetts, and that means supporting key infrastructure investments like this project. I was glad to work with state officials, the City of Quincy, and the congressional delegation to get this funding."

Markey said: "Whether by train or by bus, when passengers arrive at the Quincy Center Station, they deserve a welcoming mat worthy of the great City of Quincy. With this grant, Quincy and the MBTA can begin creating a truly world class bus terminal that improves safety and reliability while spurring private investment. I thank Congressman Lynch and Secretary Pollack for their leadership in helping secure this critical federal funding."

Koch added: "The Quincy Center MBTA Station is a cornerstone to the much broader revitalization of our downtown now underway, and this grant is a vital initial step toward a vibrant new transportation hub at the heart of our City. I am tremendously grateful for the team of leaders whose work together made this possible, from Congressman Lynch and Senators Markey and Warren to Governor Baker and Secretary Pollack."

In 2015, Congress passed the Fixing America's Surface Transportation Act (FAST Act), which authorized the Federal Transit Administration's competitive Bus and Bus Facilities Grant Program through 2020. The FAST Act provided an 89% increase in funding for buses and bus facilities, in addition to targeted competitive grants. For Fiscal Year 2016, the U.S. Department of Transportation awarded nearly $211 million in grants to improve bus service nationwide.

No Water Restrictions In Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

While South Shore communities are putting in place restrictions on water use amid a statewide drought, Quincy remains unaffected.

Quincy is one of 47 Greater Boston communities to receive its water from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. MWRA water comes from two sources in the central part of the state – the 412-billion gallon Quabbin Reservoir and the 91-billion gallon Wachusett Reservoir.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, on Monday said no restrictions are in place in the city, and the reservoirs have not been impacted by the drought.

The MWRA on Sept. 1 said the Quabbin was at 85.1 percent capacity and the Wachusett at 91 percent; both are considered within normal operating range by the MWRA. The agency predicts the normal operations status will continue through the next six months.

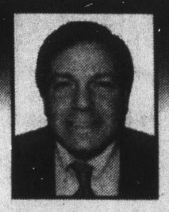

Voluntary restrictions would not begin unless the Quabbin Reservoir level dipped below 65 percent. Mandatory restrictions begin only if the Quabbin was at less than 50 percent capacity.

While no water restrictions are in place in Quincy and the remaining MWRA communities, the agency has asked residents to take steps to conserve water.

Those steps include not running the faucet while brushing teeth, filling bathtubs about halfway, not flushing trash in the toilet, avoiding "marathon showers" that last more than five minutes, and looking for leaky fixtures including faucets, showerheads and toilets.

Lawn watering, the MWRA said, should be done only during the early morning and not when it is windy, hot or raining outside. The MWRA added lawns only need an inch of water per week, and grass can go 10 to 14 days without watering after heavy rains.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

EAT YOUR BROCCOLI

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 30,000 new cases of oral cancer are diagnosed annually. Unfortunately, because the 5-year survival rate of these cancers is about 50%, there are also 8,000 deaths attributed to oral cancer each year. However, recent research shows that such cruciferous vegetables as broccoli, cabbage, and garden cress contain a compound that helps prevent oral cancers. This compound, known as sulforophane, encourages head and neck cancer cells to increase levels of a protein that turns on specific genes that detoxify cancer cells. Researchers found that by rinsing their mouths with broccoli sprout extract, study participants could activate this protective effect in the lining of their mouths, which is certainly good news for broccoli lovers.

Nutrition is important to oral health. Antioxidants and other nutrients found in fruits, vegetables, legumes and nuts strengthen immunity and help protect the teeth and gums.Please call us at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will receive a professional exam to detect and address any existing or impending oral health problems. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Oral cancer includes cancers of the lips, tongue, cheeks, floor of the mouth, hard and soft palate, sinuses, and pharynx (throat).

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are down one cent, according to AAA Northeast.

AAA's Sept. 12 survey of prices in Massachusetts finds self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $2.10 per gallon. The Massachusetts price is eight cents below the national average for regular unleaded of $2,18. A year ago at this time, the average price in Massachusetts was 13 cents higher at $2.23.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is $1.04, from a low of $1.95 to a high of $2.99.

New Contract With School Food Service Workers Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The School Committee has approved a new five-year contract with the union representing the system's food service workers.

The committee approved the five-year pact in a 7-0 vote on Sept. 7. The agreement, which is retroactive to July 1, 2015, includes a 1 percent raise in the first year, 2 percent raises annually in years 2, 3 and 4, and a 3 percent raise in the fifth year, according to Laura Owens, assistant to Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

Those raises are the same as the raises included in contracts with other bargaining units – including those representing teachers, secretaries and custodians – approved earlier this year.

Owens said negotiations with three remaining bargaining units without contracts – those representing bus drivers, bus monitors and security – are expected to take place this month. Those unions are represented by the Teamsters.

In other business Sept. 7, the School Committee voted to make Tuesday, Jan. 31, 2017, a half-day for high school students. QPS Deputy Supt. Kevin Mulvey said the new contract with the Quincy Education Association calls for an extra half-day at the high school level to provide for more in-building preparation time, effective this school year.

The contract allowed the superintendent and school board to determine on which date the extra half-day would fall, and Jan. 31 was determined to be the best and most effective day. A half-day had previously been scheduled that month for Jan. 10, and remains unchanged.

The School Committee also approved the appointment of Kellie Daley-Butts as the new nurse at the Montclair Elementary School.

DeCristofaro said Daley-Butts worked at South Shore Hospital for 11 years, and also spent two years as a substitute nurse in the Quincy school system. She holds two associates degrees – in nursing and in therapy assisting – from Quincy College and a bachelor's degree in nursing from Simmons College.

"She's someone we've had an eye on and she's done a fantastic job," DeCristofaro said.

Brick Orders Continue For Flags For Veterans Island Walkway

The new brick walkway at Flags for Veterans Island has been a big success with nearly 400 bricks sold since the program was unveiled six months ago.

As of last week, 393 bricks have been sold and of that total some 330 have been placed at the island located in Fort Square. About 55 new bricks should be installed this week bringing the total walkway count to 385, said Paul Moody, commander of the Sons of the American Legion Squadron 294 and coordinator of the Flags for Veterans Island.

The bricks are available for a donation of $50. The donor can have the brick inscribed with the name of a veteran, rank and branch of service.

Moody said bricks ordered by Oct. 1 should be installed at the walkway by Veterans Day Nov. 11. Those purchased after Oct. 1 may not be installed in time for Veterans Day and will be set down in the spring.

Moody said he has not capped the number of bricks for the walkway and added the final total could be as many as 600 or more.

Moody thanked the local community for their tremendous response to the brick walkway initiative.

"The people of Quincy and this community have exhibited tremendous patriotism in support of the walkway and especially towards our veterans. If there were no veterans there would be no America. Freedom is not free," he said.

The island now has nearly as many bricks as it does American flags. The island is decorated for Memorial Day and Veterans Day each year with 400 flags that have been donated. The flags represent veterans who are still serving in the Armed Forces, those who are retired from the military, deceased servicemen and women as well as veterans who were killed defending this country's freedom in times of war and conflict.

To date, the sale of American flags and now inscribed bricks has generated about $15,000, Moody said. While some of the money goes to maintaining the island, the majority of the revenue supports veterans' and other worthy causes including the American Legion Child Welfare Fund, the American Legion Comfort Warriors, Children's Hospital in Boston and the VA Hospital in Jamaica Plain. Locally, the money is also used to host disabled veterans at an annual cookout held at the Morrisette Legion Post.

The Sons of the American Legion will decorate Flags for Veterans Island with 400 American Flags on Monday, Oct. 10. The flags will remain at the island for the Sons' Veterans Day observance set for Sunday, Nov. 6 at 1 p.m. at the island.

Anyone who would like to help place the flags on the island Oct. 10 should arrive by 10 a.m. that Monday which is Columbus Day.

The Sons of the American Legion will also be recognized for service to veterans and the local community at the City Council meeting Monday, Sept. 19.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

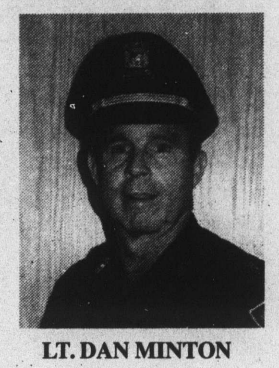

On Monday, Sept. 5, at approximately 3 p.m., Officers John Leuchte and William Lanergan were dispatched to Walmart for a shoplifting in progress call.

Upon arrival, Officer Lanergan was flagged down by loss prevention who told him the female suspect wearing a blue shirt was walking away from the store with a child and a carriage. Officer Lanergan relayed the info to Officer Leuchte who just pulled into the lane in front of the store. He immediately spotted the female suspect and the small child walking away from the entrance/exit of the store.

The female suspect then stopped walking and started pulling items out of her shopping carriage, which she then threw to the ground behind her. As Officer Leuchte got out of his car and approached her she was yelling at her young boy that he should not have put a hover board under the carriage. The officer asked for her ID and why she was throwing items on the ground. She looked at the items on the ground and stated that they were not hers.

At this time, the Loss Prevention Officer for Walmart walked up and told the officer that he tried to stop her from walking out of the store with a Razz Hover Board under her carriage. He stated that when he stopped her she handed it to him and walked out and away from him. He stated that her car was parked on the right side of the store, but when she saw the cruisers pulling up she walked the other way.

Officer Leuchte observed the female suspect throw two pairs of children s pants, medicine, and a body trimmer on the ground behind where she was standing. The officer then asked her for her receipts and the items in her carriage in an attempt to match them up. As Officer Lanergan walked over to where Officer Leuchte was, he had a conversation with a male who had a small female child with him. He said that he was the female suspect's husband (and daughter). As the husband neared his suspect wife, he told her, "There is nothing to tell them. Don't say anything." Officer Leuchte checked on warrants for the couple to no avail.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Lanergan kept an eye on the family, Officer Leuchte interviewed the Loss Prevention Officer who said that he watched both parties shopping in the store. He stated that he observed the husband grab a bike, two storage bins, a box of diapers, and several miscellaneous items and walk through the self check out lane and out the front door of the store. He then walked over to his vehicle on the side of the store. He watched as the young female child helped him load the bicycle and the other items into the vehicle.

The husband and female child then walked back into the store and grabbed 2 bike pumps and again walked out of the self check out and put those into his vehicle. He again walked back into the store. The female suspect was observed on video as she paid for several items at the self check out and then walked out of the store to the vehicle and put those items in the car.

The Loss Prevention Officer saw that the female suspect also put several bags of stuff into the car that she didn't pay for. He stated that she again went back into the store where she again gathered items in her cart and paid for some at the self check out and then walked out of the store where she was stopped. This time she had the Hover Board under the carriage, which she didn't pay for and the items that she threw on the ground when Officer Leuchte confronted her. In total her receipts were for approximately $45.00 worth of merchandise. Officer Lanergan read both parties their Miranda warnings.

Officer Leuchte then asked the husband if there was anything in his vehicle belonging to Walmart after advising him that store security video would show everything that occurred. The husband said that he had a bicycle, diapers and several storage bins in the car. The officer and the husband/suspect then went to the car and removed all of the items and then separated the ones he paid for. He then brought the items back into the store where a clerk totaled the stolen items up at $758.69.

The 63 year-old husband/suspect, a resident of Dorchester, was placed under arrest on the charge of Larceny over $250. Officer Leuchte then advised the female suspect, a 57-year-old Dorchester resident, that she was going to be summonsed to court for Larceny over $250, and the only reason was because of her children being with her. Officer Leuchte told her that he would be filing a report with the Division of Children and Families regarding the incident.

Before they both left for the station, they were given trespass notices from the Loss Prevention Officer.

Nice Work!

Gov. Baker Unveils Medicine Disposal Kiosk

safe disposal of medication easier, and these kiosks do just that," he said. "Using a safe medication disposal kiosk at a participating Walgreens is one of the best ways to ensure medications are not accidently used – or intentionally misused – by someone else."

The kiosks are heavy metal containers with a top, one-way opening drop slot and lock that is mounted to the floor or wall. The kiosks are located next to the pharmacy counter and are available for disposing prescription and over-the-counter medications while the pharmacy is opened. There are security cameras that monitor the kiosks.

Until now, the only option to dispose medicines in such kiosks have been at police stations.

Standing in front of the store's pharmacy next to the kiosk, Baker related that a member of his family received a prescription for an opiate following a dental procedure and had much of the medication leftover.

"The prescription was for far more opioid pain medication - which is another whole story in itself -than this person would have ever needed or required," he said. "As a result, we had a big leftover supply."

Baker said when he told neighbors he was going to the local police station to discard the unused pills, the neighbors suggested the leftover medication should be kept in case someone might need it in the future.

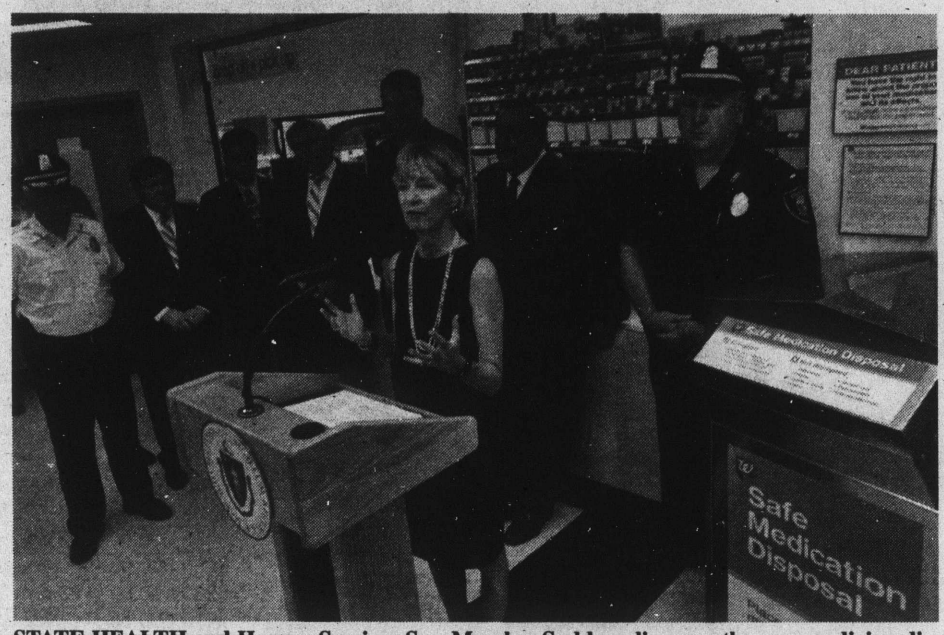

"Far too many people in Massachusetts leave that stuff lying around because someday they might need it," he said. "There are real consequences to that."

The governor said the US makes up five percent of the world's population, yet has 80 percent of the world's prescribed opiates. He noted that opioid addiction often starts at home.

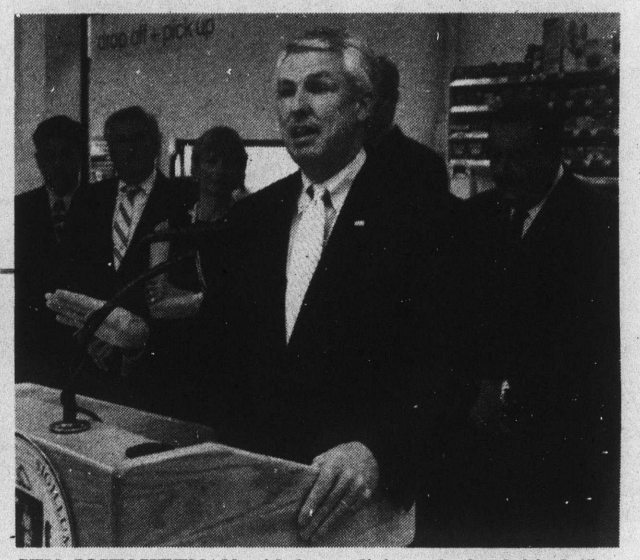

"There's simply too much of this stuff in people's medicine chests, in people's drawers, in people's bathrooms and people's bedrooms," he said. "The epidemic associated with this is real."

In addition to offering the medicine disposal kiosks, Baker said Walgreens pharmacists can also offer counseling as to the importance of removing used prescription painkillers from the home.

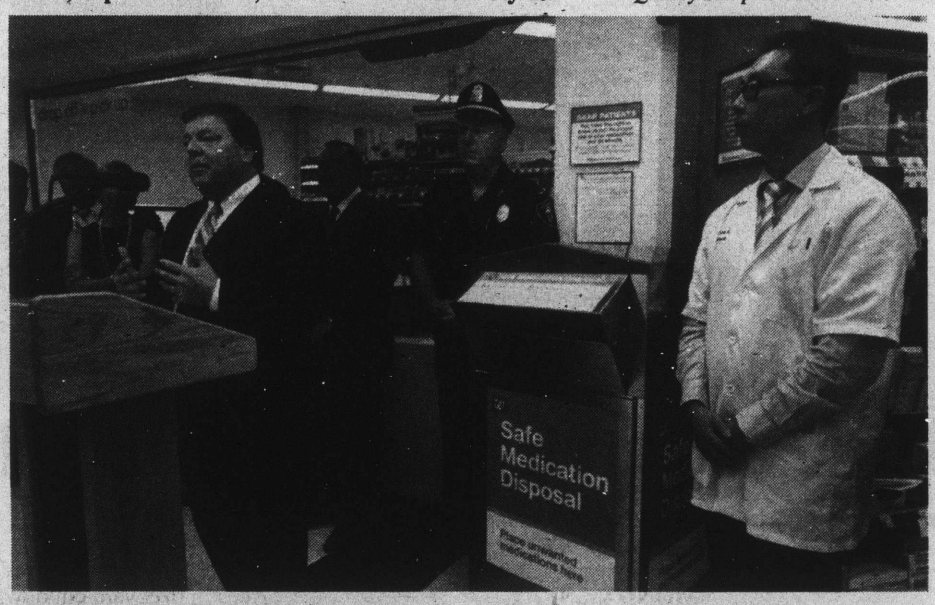

"The opportunity to have a neighborhood organization like Walgreens participating to help counsel people in removing and disposing unused medication is a tremendous opportunity for us to take medication that is addictive and profoundly dangerous off the street," he said.

SEN. JOHN KEENAN said the medicine take-back kiosk "is a critical step" to help battle opiate abuse.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH talks of the importance of a medicine take-back kiosk as Walgreens pharmacist Matthew Moy, right, looks on.

Baker added that realtors ask clients to remove medicines from their homes because of people going to open houses on the pretense of being a potential buyer and rummaging through medicine cabinets and drawers in search of prescription opiates.

Earlier this year, Baker signed legislation aimed at addressing the opioid and heroin addiction epidemic as a result of recommendations from his opioid task force. The first-in-the-nation law requires a seven-day limit on first time opioid prescriptions. Additionally, doctors are required to check a patient's prescription history through the state's prescription monitoring program.

State Health and Human Services Secretary Marylou Sudders said it was appropriate that Quincy was chosen to launch the medicine disposal program since the city was the first in the state to provide its police department with the opiate overdose reversing drug Narcan which officers can administer to overdose patients.

Sudders explained that the state launched its updated prescription monitoring program last month. The program gives pharmacists and health care providers a patient's prescription history from a database that helps prevent overprescribing opiate painkillers.

The secretary explained the old version was "clunky" and that the new program provides information in less than two seconds. Health care providers in Massachusetts can now access patient information from similar programs in Connecticut, Vermont, Rhode Island and New York.

Sudders said the drug take-back program is "another tool in the toolbox."

Sen. John Keenan said legislation now requires those on Mass. Health to have one doctor write a prescription and one pharmacy to fill it in an effort to prevent "doctor shopping" where a patient could potentially get multiple prescriptions.

"We are changing the dynamics of how opiates are dispensed," he said.

Keenan added that the medicine disposal program is "a critical step" to further reducing opioid abuse by providing a place to discard unused medications.

Noting the state's efforts in the opioid issue, Mayor Thomas Koch applauded Walgreens' medicine disposal program and said that partnerships are vital in the fight against opiate addiction and abuse.

"We can only make progress by working together," he said. "It continues to be a challenge for every community."

Koch said while the rising number of overdoses are "discouraging," the fight must continue to help save lives.

"As a father of three, we can never lose hope," he said. "It's somebody's son, daughter, brother, father, mother affected by this, so we can never give up on each of them."

Rep. Bruce Ayers said the fight against opioid abuse is the legislature's top priority.

"Partnering with Governor Baker and his administration, we have enacted landmark legislation aimed at fighting this public health crisis," he said. "It's also important to partner with the private sector, and having a business like Walgreens join us in this fight is a big step. These free, anonymous drug take-back kiosks for unused medications are a positive development in some of our hardest-hit areas, like the city of Quincy."

Also participating in the event were Police Chief Paul Keenan, Police Lt. Patrick Glynn and Rep. Tackey Chan.

WALGREENS REGIONAL Vice President Brad Ulrich said his chain is the first in the state to have a medicine disposal kiosk.

Mosquitoes Test Positive For West Nile Virus

City health officials are urging people to takes precautions to avoid mosquito bites after the Massachusetts Department of Public Health announced mosquitoes collected in Quincy have tested positive for the West Nile virus.

There was one WNV-positive Culex pipiens/restauans complex mosquito sample (pool) identified from samples collected on Aug. 1. The DPH confirmed the positive test Sept. 7.

So far in 2016, the state has reported 20 West Nile virus positive mosquito pools in Norfolk County. The first human case of West Nile virus was announced in late July; it involved an elderly resident from Middlesex County.

While WNV can infect people of all ages, people over the age of 50 are at higher risk for severe infections. The virus is most commonly transmitted to humans by the bite of an infected mosquito.

The Quincy Health Department said residents should take steps to avoid the risk of mosquito bites and to reduce the number of mosquitoes around their homes and neighborhood.

Residents should minimize their outdoors time during peak period of mosquito activity (dusk and dawn); those who must remain outdoors should wear long-sleeved shirts and pants. Special care should be taken to ensure children playing outdoors are properly covered up. If a baby is brought outside, their carriage or playpen should be covered with mosquito netting.

The use of mosquito repellent products containing DEET or picaridin is also advised; oil of lemon eucalyptus may also be considered. Products containing permethrin should only be used on clothing. Repellents should not be used on children younger than two months; oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children under the age of 3. When using repellents, always follow the instructions on the packaging.

Residents should also make sure all screens are tightly attached to windows and doors; all holes in screens should be properly repaired.

Standing water on one's property should also be removed to prevent mosquitos from breeding.

Detailed information about West Nile virus and Eastern equine encephalitis is available on the Health Department's website at quincyma.gov. Information on reports of WNV is available online from the DPH at mosquitoresults.com.

Norfolk County Real Estate Activity Bounces Back In August

After a disappointing July, Norfolk County real estate market bounced back with mostly solid gains for the month of August, according to a report released by Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

"After a down July, it was nice to see the real estate market recover in August," O'Donnell said. "Increases were seen in both home sales and lending. August was a month where all stakeholders benefited from the strong real estate market in Norfolk County."

O'Donnell said there were a total of 1,945 property transactions, both residential and commercial, recorded in Norfolk County during August. "This represented a nine percent increase year over year. The average sales price for these properties was $874,726, a 47 percent increase from August 2015," he said.

O'Donnell also noted the total volume of real estate sales, both residential and commercial, came in at $1.18 billion, a 60 percent increase from the same time period in 2015. It should be noted that these figures were enhanced by a $205 million dollar sale of Westwood Station that took place during the middle of August.

Lending activity also showed some impressive gains, O'Donnell reported. For the month of August, a total of 3,511 mortgages were recorded, a 35 percent increase from the previous year. "Furthermore, total mortgage financing came in at $1.7 billion, a 60 percent increase from the previous August. Clearly, the continuing low interest rates are spurring individuals and businesses to borrow money for home and capital improvements and education," O'Donnell said.

If there was one cloud in the silver lining concerning August's data, it was the increase in foreclosure activity experienced in Norfolk County. A total of 32 foreclosure deeds were filed compared to 19 filed in August 2015. Also, the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgages recorded, the first step in the foreclosure process, was 96 compared to 31 recorded during the previous August.

"The significant increases in foreclosure activity were discouraging, especially after we thought the market had turned the corner. There is no question that some of our neighbors continue to struggle," O'Donnell said.

"I want to again stress the Registry's continuing partnership with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950. These agencies are there to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option for homeowners is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333.

"I cannot stress enough to call them promptly if you are struggling with paying your mortgage," O'Donnell said.

Maria Droste Counseling Expands, Dedicates Quincy Offices

Maria Droste Counseling Services has expanded its offices at 1354 Hancock St., Quincy.

Two of the existing suites were dedicated in honor of the agency's founder, Sister Joanne Westwater, RGS, LICSW, ACSW, BCD and the Immediate Past Director, Sister Lorraine Bernier, RGS, LICSW.

In addition, two newly acquired suites were dedicated to two longtime advocates for the agency: Darlene Sheehan, RN, LADAC and Paul McDevitt, M.Ed., LMHC, CRC, LADC1.

Since her untimely death over 10 years ago, Sheehan's family have been strong benefactors and special friends to the agency.

McDevitt, founder of the Modern Assistance Program, another social service agency in Quincy Center, had long supported the agency's effort. Mr. McDevitt, the husaband of state Auditor Suzanne Bump, died of cancer Monday. He was 74.

A ribbon cutting ceremony with city and state officials as well as families of the honorees and the Maria Droste Board attended the dedication.

This is the 25th year anniversary for this Quincy agency and the current ever-growing demand for the type of services they offer has necessitated this expansion.

In response to the tragic impact of substance use on families in the South Shore, the agency has initiated a new group called The Welcome Program. This five-week open enrollment group is designed to help clients deal with their own or a loved one's substance use problem (alcohol, opiates, prescription drugs etc.). This substance use educational group is targeted to serve adults over 18 years who wish to find out how change and healing can happen for them.

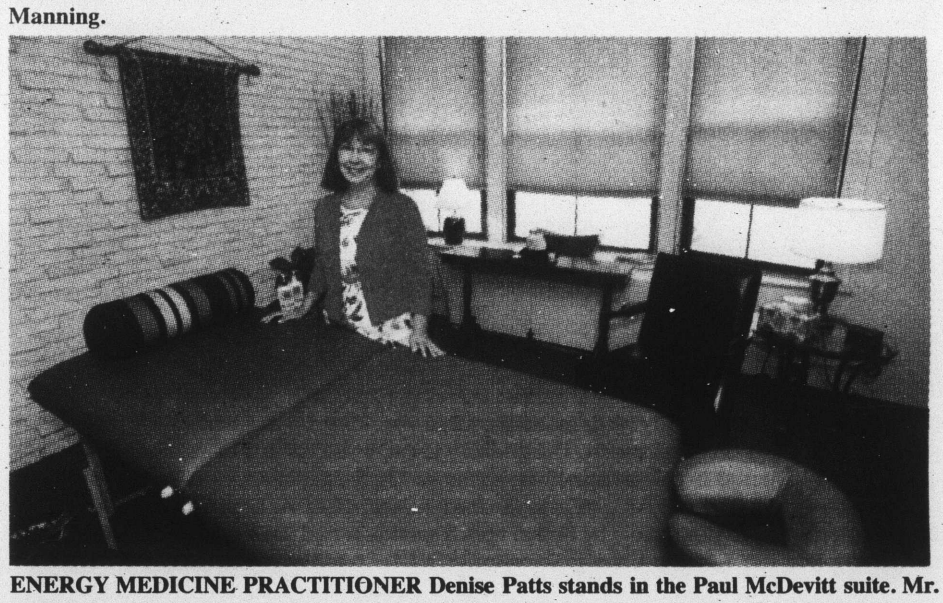

Maria Droste Counseling Services staff of licensed clinical social workers cover a wide range of specialties that include but are not limited to: alcohol and drug abuse; family and relationship counseling; anxiety, panic and phobias; and depression, stress management and Attention-Deficit/ Hyperactivity Disorders (ADHD).

Fees are collected using a sliding scale and several health insurance plans are accepted. The agency's clients include children, adolescents and adults coming for individual, couples, family and group therapy.

To learn more about the substance abuse, mental health and holistic services Maria Droste offers, visit the agency's web site: mariadrostecounseling.com.

Firefighters Raise $8,000 For Pediatric Cancer Research

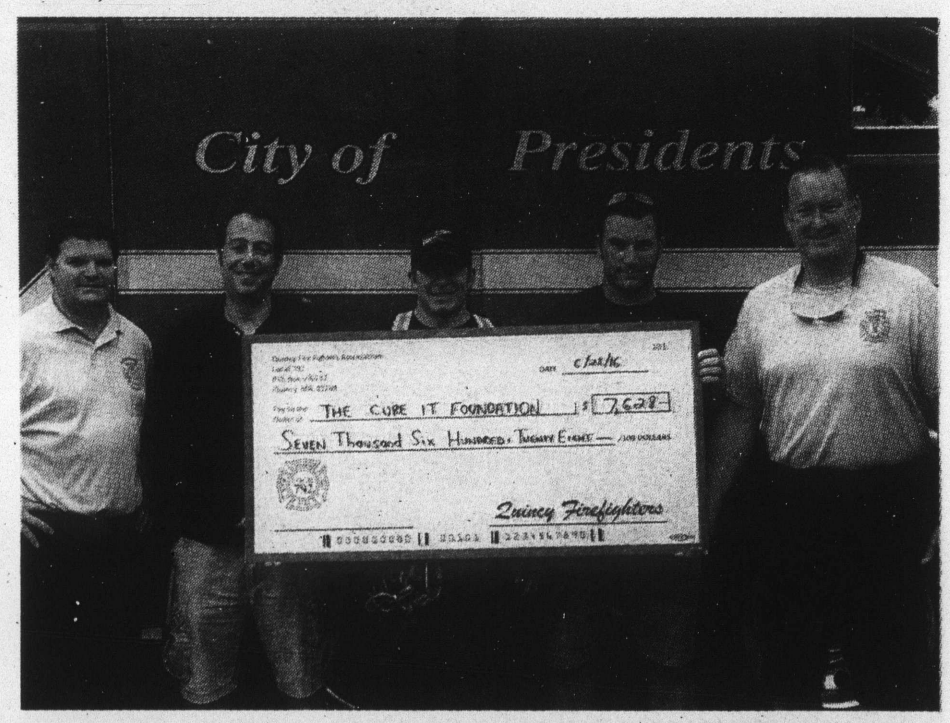

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS recently participated in the "Fire Up A Cure" event that raised money for pediatric cancer research. The firefighters competed against other local fire departments in events such as tug of war, an obstacle course, a buffalo chicken wing eating race and a fire truck push race. "Fire Up A Cure" was started in Chicago by Dr. Jason Canner and brought to the Boston area two years ago. The Boston area team that raised the most money for the cause this year, would win a trip to Chicago to compete in the event there. The Quincy Firefighters won the trip to Chicago by raising over $8,000. Winning team members with team captain Hannah Carol are (from left) Shawn Darcy, Pat O'Donnell, Andrew Smith, Derick Monroe, Hannah Carrol (Team Captain), Dave DeYoung and Tom Gannon.

3,105 Voters (5% Turnout) Cast Ballots Here In MA Primary

By SCOTT JACKSON

Just over 5 percent of Quincy's registered voters went to the polls Sept. 8 to cast ballots in the state primary – which featured just one contested race in the city.

A total of 3,105 voters cast ballots in the primary – 5.44 percent of the 57,077 residents who were eligible to do so.

The lone contested race was in the Democratic primary for Governor's Council. Incumbent Christopher Ianella Jr. carried both Quincy and the remainder of the fourth district, defeating challenger Stephen Flynn.

Ianella received 1,350 votes in Quincy to Flynn's 994, and won the district contest by a total of 19,374 to 10,650. Ianella is unopposed in the Nov. 8 general election.

Ward 6, Precinct 5, which includes the Squantum peninsula, had the highest turnout of the city's 30 regular precincts with 9.87 percent; 232 of 2,350 eligible voters there went to the polls.

The remaining incumbent office holders on Quincy ballots for the primary, all Democrats, were unopposed Sept. 8. They include the five members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill - Sen. John Keenan and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, Dan Hunt and Ron Mariano – as well as U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and county commissioners Francis O'Brien and Joseph Shea.

Lynch and Keenan will both face opponents in the Nov. 8 election.

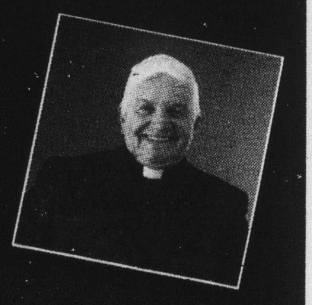

Lynch, a South Boston resident, is facing a challenge from Republican William Burke of Quincy in the contest to represent Massachusetts' eighth congressional district on Capitol Hill.

Keenan is opposed by Alexander Mendez, who is running as an independent candidate, in the race to represent Quincy and the rest of the Norfolk and Plymouth district on Beacon Hill. Both candidates are Quincy residents.

Headlining the Nov. 8 ballot is the race for the White House between Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton and Republican nominee Donald Trump. Other presidential candidates are Libertarian Gary Johnson and the Green Party's Jill Stein.

Quincy Looks To Rebound At Milton After Braintree Loss

Presidents Visit Wildcats Friday

By JOE REARDON

Bill Reardon looked across to the far sideline last Friday night at sweltering Veterans' Memorial Stadium at a senior-laden Braintree team whose time has come. Quincy's head coach believes, though, it's just a matter of time before a very young Presidents squad matures and plays at a high level.

The border showdown wasn't much of a struggle for the Wamps as they took advantage of the Presidents' turnovers and some sloppy tackling to roll to a 54-7 win in the season opener for both teams.

Reardon shrugged off the defeat as a learning experience for his young squad and he's eager to get back on the field this Friday at Milton.

"I told them that's one and we have ten more," said Reardon. "We have to come ready to work. That's what makes football so special. It's a dog fight out here on Friday night. It's unforgiving in a lot of ways. It's put up or shut up. We're going to learn to put up.

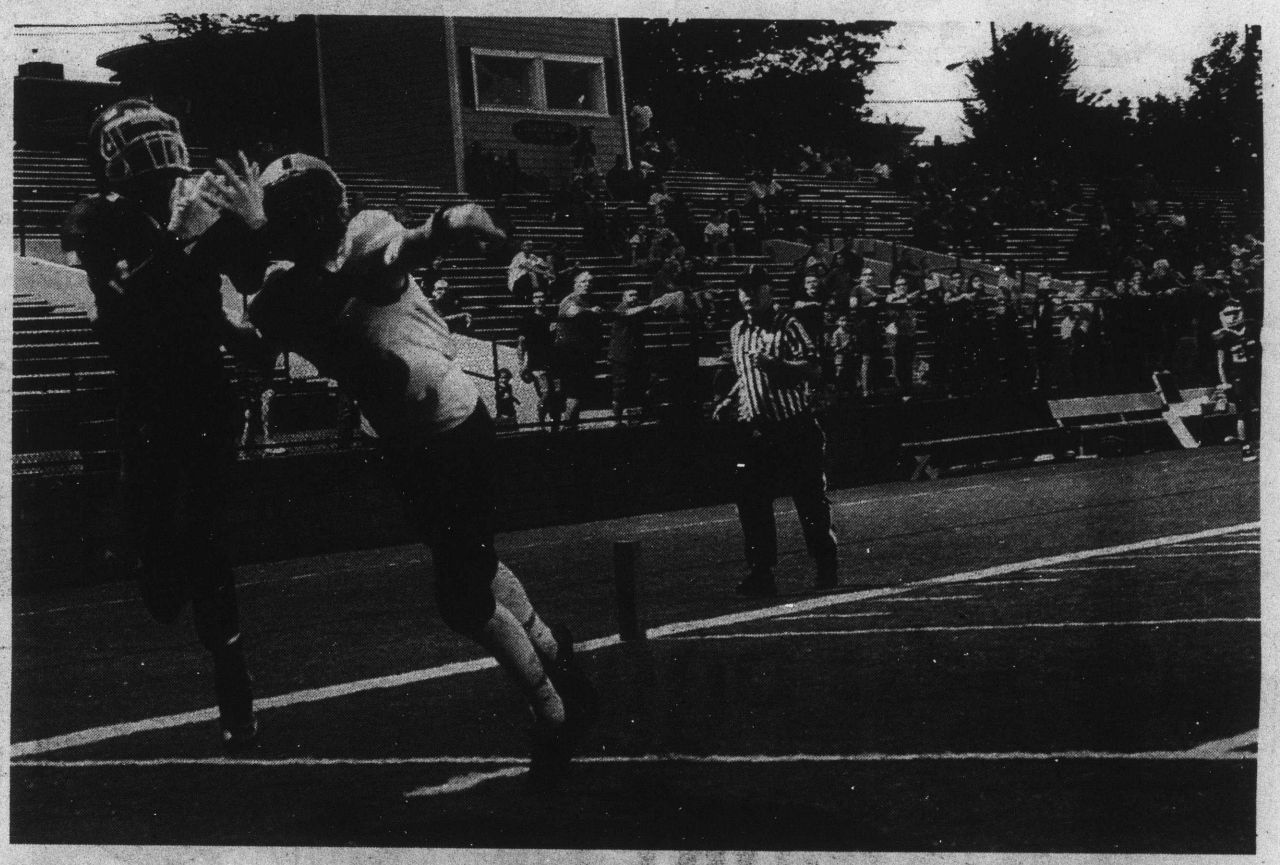

"I do think we're going to get better. They're going to have all this experience. Braintree's a good football team. This is their year. We'll be on that side in a couple of years."

Braintree put the game well out of reach in the first half (34-7), but it was Quincy that gave its fans something to cheer about first off. The Presidents struck hard after recovering a Wamp fumble deep in the Braintree end. Junior quarterback Nicholas Maberry proceeded to hook up with Shorn Hawthorne deep in the right corner of the end zone for a 16-yard passing score just 3:43 into the first quarter. Mikhayla Foley added the point-after kick and Quincy was on the board, 7-0. Unfortunately, Hawthorne went down with an injury soon after and was out the rest of the game, taking away the Presidents' passing attack.

The Maberry/Hawthorne attack should prove to be a strong point for the Quincy offense this fall. "That's a

The turnover led to a 16-yard touchdown reception from quarterback Nicholas Maberry to receiver Shorn Hawthorne (below) 3:43 into the first quarter. But it was all Braintree after that as the Wamps defeated the Presidents 54-7. VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

SECONDARY HEADACHE

A "cervicogenic headache" is an unusual headache because the pain does not come from the head. Instead, this form of "secondary headache" (meaning that it is caused by another illness or physical issue) is "referred pain," meaning that the pain is perceived to occur in a part of the body that is not its real source. In this case, the source of the pain is the cervical spine (neck). Triggering events such as "whiplash" (acceleration-deceleration injury), a fall, or arthritis in a joint at the back of the neck cause compression, inflammation, and/or irritation of a nerve, causing the cervicogenic headache. To relieve this pain, the chiropractor will most likely focus treatment on reducing inflammation of the third occipital nerve.

Many of the worst headaches can be slow to respond to the intended effect of most medications. Please call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment for superb, drugless chiropractic care. Your case will be evaluated, any recommended procedures will be explained and demonstrated, and your questions will be answered. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we will only accept you as a patient if we feel we can help you. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Chiropractors have an excellent understanding of cervicogenic headaches and other instances of referred pain.

connection we're going to have to ride all season," said Reardon. "Then Shorn got hurt and we didn't have that available to us the rest of the game, which was tough. Nick throws the ball well. We just have to give him some opportunities to make it happen."

The Quincy defense thwarted a Braintree drive on its next possession when junior linebacker Brian Nguyen pounced on a fumble at the Presidents' 23-yard line. The offense went four and out and that was as close as Quincy would get the rest of the night.

Braintree back Nick Martin closed out a six-play, 60-yard drive by the Wamps with a 13-yard rush off left tackle to tie it 7-7 with 10:53 remaining in the half. Braintree caught the Presidents' defense on its heels on a perfectly executed double reverse on its next possession, allowing Zach Harris to scamper 47 yards untouched to go up 13-7.

The rout was on as the Braintree offense scored on its next three possessions, two of which came after Quincy turnovers, to take a more than healthy lead into the locker room at the half.

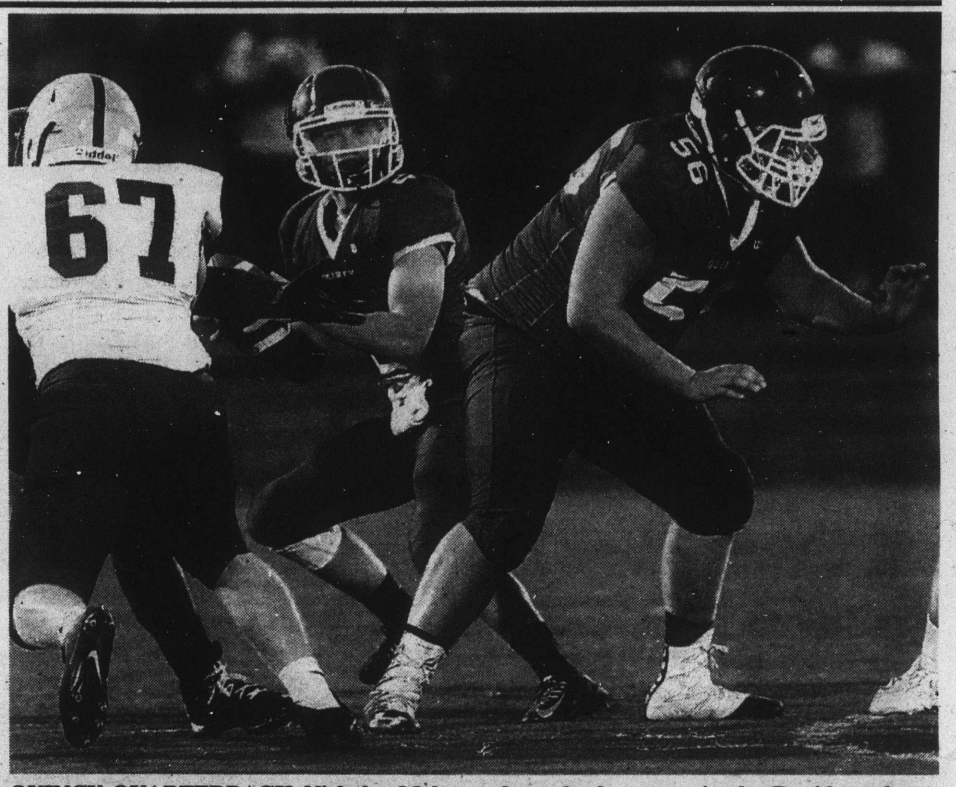

Quincy was busy during the preseason as Reardon worked on getting in as many reps as possible. The Presidents had a joint practice with Bob Bancroft's Pembroke squad and they scrimmaged both Scituate and East Bridgewater.

"We did OK first time out (with Pembroke)," said Reardon. "Scituate is a very good football team and they took it to us a little bit. I thought we responded well against East Bridgewater. The more reps these kids get the better they're going to be. That's just way it is. They're young and for some of them it was their first varsity game."

The Presidents will have plenty to work on this week in preparation for Milton, another Bay State Conference squad. "We have to watch the film and make sure we're getting to the right guys," said Reardon. "There were a lot of spots tonight where we weren't blocking the right people and making the right reads on defense. A lot of times we were in position to make tackles and we didn't make tackles."

Grinding Brakes, Changing Flats, Transmission Repairs

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

Could you please advise me of a good choice for an automobile purchase? I currently have a six-year-old Nissan Altima which I have enjoyed. I would like your input for a Toyota Camry or Ford Fusion. My other thought is a used Infiniti. What do you think?

The Ford Fusion is a very nice and stylish car and with the availability of all-wheel-drive makes it a better choice for Northeast winters. If you were comparing a front-wheel drive Fusion and a Camry, the Toyota historically is a better choice, due to reliability and resale value. Regarding the Infiniti, it will have a bit more technology and be a bit more luxurious. Keep in mind it is a used car and you can expect some repairs and a shorter warranty, but it might look better in your driveway.

My 2009 Nissan Altima with very low miles has a problem with the brakes; they grind in extreme heat and extreme cold. This noise disappears after driving for just a short distance. I had the brakes checked twice and the dealer says they are okay. Does this sound right?

The original front brake pads on some Nissan products are prone to squeaking and noise. The remedy is to replace the pads with an updated set. If this car still has the original brakes after all this time the pads could be the problem. Talk to your dealer about performing the update or replacing the pads with a high-quality aftermarket brake pad.

Have you had a chance to look at the Chevy Malibu? My Chevy Impala lease is almost over and I'm thinking of buying a Malibu as my retirement car. What if anything would you compare it with?

The Chevy Malibu is a much better car than the last generation car. The ride is quite good, the handling better than expected, the fuel economy is quite good and performance should more than satisfy most drivers. In addition the interior borders on some of the best quality from Europe. I would shop the Malibu against the Honda Accord, Hyundai Sonata, Ford Fusion and Toyota Camry. Any of these cars would have trounced the previous generation Malibu. That has all changed with this latest model based on my last road test I would put the redesigned Malibu at the top of the list.

I'm getting a little older and wonder about changing a flat tire, especially getting the wheel loose. Today the lug wrenches are very small and I'm not sure I have the strength to get everything loose. Any suggestions?

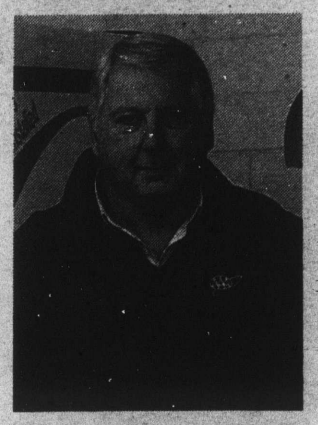

The cheapest solution is to get a long breaker bar and deep socket. This should give you the extra leverage you need to get the lugs loose. Recently I have been testing a 12 volt LI-ION battery powered cordless impact gun. It is lightweight and is strong enough to loosen and tighten most lug-nuts and also has a handy built in LED light. Check out this tool and others at www.mychanic.us

I have a 2007 Chevy Tahoe with 83,000 miles on it. Last night when leaving a parking lot and pulling onto road the transmission came out of gear and the engine revved up. I let off the gas and took it out of drive. When I put it in D or 3 it won't move but if I put it in 2 it will take off and then I can shift up to D and run fine. When I put it in D or 3 it won't take off. It won't downshift when I slow down. The fluids are fine and everything looks hooked up from a visual inspection. What the heck happened?

There certainly could be several answers to this problem depending on which transmission is in your vehicle. More than likely one of the clutches has failed. The transmission will need to be disassembled and inspected to find the problem.

My car would not start. AAA came by and the jumpstart turned the engine but it would not stay on. The battery tested out to be OK. My questions are: could it be the alternator or is it something simpler? The car is a 1997 Saturn with only 64,000 miles. Should I think about a replacement car?

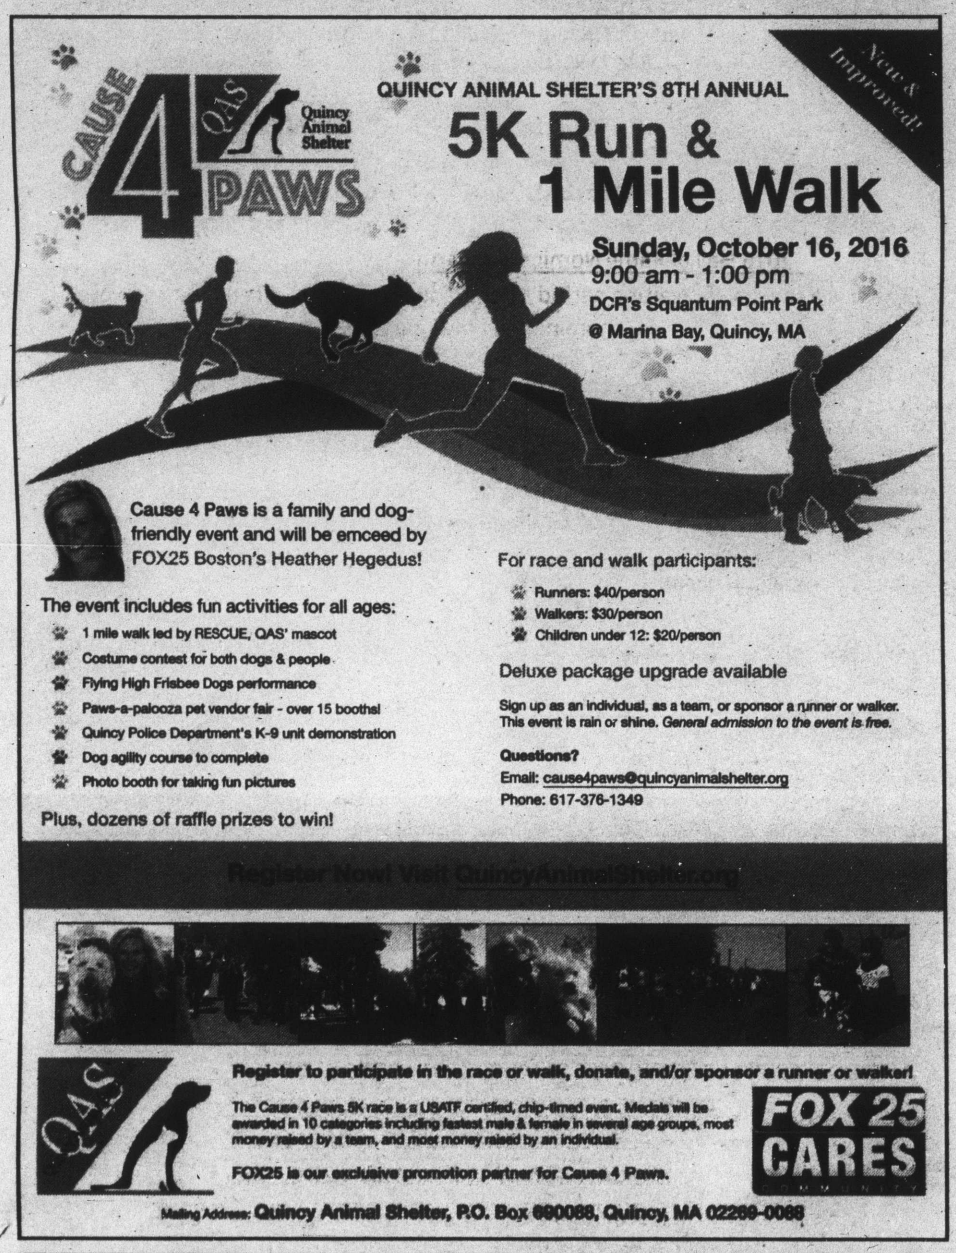

The problem is more than likely a faulty alternator, fuse or wiring problem. Considering the low mileage, it is hard to imagine not having it repaired. Regarding is it time for replacement, a newer car will most likely be more dependable, more economical and produce lower emissions and have the latest safety features. One issue that you need to think about is that Saturn is no longer making cars which could make future repairs a bit more difficult, not impossible but could take longer than normal.

Americans Spend An Average 17,600 Minutes Driving Each Year

New AAA Foundation Report Reveals Habits, Characteristics Of The American Driver

American drivers spend an average of more than 17,600 minutes behind the wheel each year, according to a new survey from the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety.

The research finds that more than 87.5 percent of Americans aged 16 years and older reported driving in the past year. During this time, drivers travelled nearly 10,900 miles on average and spent more than 290 hours on the road.

"The amount of time the average driver spends behind the wheel each year is equivalent to seven 40-hour weeks at the office," said John Paul, Senior Manager of Traffic Safety at AAA Northeast. "It's clear that traveling by car remains a central part of Americans' lives."

The American Driving Survey is the most current and comprehensive look at how much Americans drive on a daily and yearly basis. It revealed that Americans drove a total of 2.45 trillion miles last year, which is a 2.4 percent increase from 2014. Other survey findings show that:

• On average, men report driving 2,314 more miles than women per year and spend 18 percent more time behind the wheel.

• More than 86 percent of U.S. households have at least one car for every driver in the home and 28 percent report having more cars than drivers.

• Seniors over the age of 75 drive fewer miles (5,840 annually) than teenagers (7,551 annually). Drivers ages 30-49 drive an average of 13,506 miles annually, more than any other age group.

• Drivers who report living in rural areas drive more miles (13,029 annually) compared to drivers who live in cities or towns (10,571 annually).

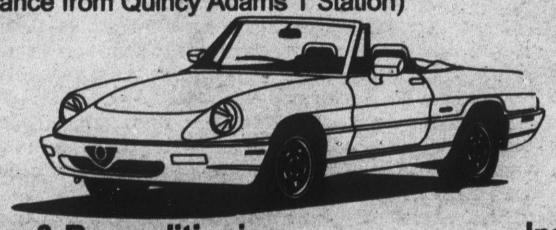

• Motorists in the Midwest and Southern regions drive more (11,295 miles annually) compared to those in the Northeast (9,328 miles annually).

• More than 50 percent of miles driven by Americans are done in cars, followed by SUVs (20 percent), pickup trucks (17 percent) and vans (7.9 percent). Men report doing a much greater share of their driving in pickup trucks compared to women who report doing most of their driving in cars and SUVs.

• Over 66 percent of total driving trips and nearly 62 percent of total miles driven are done by drivers without a passenger in the vehicle. Women are 24 percent more likely than men to have a passenger in the vehicle on any given trip.

• On average, Americans drive the most during the fall (October through December) at 31.5 miles daily and drive the least during the winter (January through March) at 26.2 miles daily.

The new survey results are part of the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety's annual American Driving Survey, which reveals the driving habits of the American public. The survey data are from a sample of 5,774 drivers who provided information about their daily driving trips in calendar years 2014 and 2015. The AAA Foundation released their first American Driving Survey in 2015.

The Quincy Youth Football League kicked of its 66th season of football Sunday, Sept. 11th at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Each team had its own patriotic salute to the 15th Anniversary of the 9/11 attacks. There were flags, moments of silence and a special rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner" national anthem by Miss Sophia Hurley.

The North Quincy Apaches couldn't have asked for a better start to the 2016 season than KR James Ward's 65-yard kickoff return for a TD on the opening play of the game.

On the next series, Apache RB Tyler Le raced through the Milton defense for a 38-yard TD to extend their lead to 12-0 at the end of the first quarter. Tyler Le added his third TD of the afternoon when he returned a Milton punt 25 yards for a TD to make the score 25-0.

The Mustangs mounted a comeback drive led by RB Gabriel Estevez. Milton QB Ernie Mealey connected with Estevez on an 18-yard TD pass. Estevez rushed for the conversion but it wasn't enough as the Apaches defeated the Milton Mustangs 25-7.

Apaches Head Coach Ryan Craig praised the efforts of his linemen Declan Geary, John Bell, Dillon Donahue, Clayton Corley and Harrison Gaudiano. QNQ Cross Country Vs. Whitman-Hanson

The QNQ girls cross country did last week what no other QPS cross country team has ever done: defeat the powerful Whitman-Hanson Panthers 25-30 behind the strong running of Abby Murphy and newcomer Kara Polsgrove.

In fact, QNQ had exactly two athletes in the meet that were part of last year's program. Sophomore Abby Murphy was the winner wire-to-wire over the 2.5 mile challenging Pageant Field course. Newcomer Kara Polsgrove, a transfer from North Carolina, was a close third, Devin Hiltunen (4th) who played volleyball last fall, and Olivia Palazzi (7th) in her first season of cross country since middle school, propelled the team to victory. Add to that freshmen Mairead Kelly (10th) and Ava Lapsley (12th) and sophomore Eve Anderson (17th) closed out the top seven finishers.

"If nothing else we have pedigree on this team," said Coach Geoff Hennessy in his 35th year of coaching track and cross country dating back to 1983. Murphy was a league all-star, team MVP and was the only harrier to advance to the MIAA Allstate last fall. Kara Polsgrove and brother Ryan who runs with the boys came here when their dad was hired by Eastern Nazarene College to be the Lions' men's basketball coach. Kara was a top harrier in North Carolina and an older sister is on a track scholarship at Liberty University in Virginia.

Hiltunen has dominated the track & field world since she was 10 with the track club, Central Middle School, Baystate Games and high school running mostly in long sprints, but did run cross country as a freshman and grabbed medals in several freshman races. Olivia Palazzi has been a strong player in basketball and was a top runner for the Presidents in spring track. Her grandfather Togo Palazzi played for the Celtics in the early 60's. Mairead Kelly comes from a strong track and running background. Her mom ran for Hennessy in the 90's, and older sister Deirdre is the top runner at Dexter Southfield School, while cousin Erica Brady was a three time Allstate Qualifier for the Red Raiders prior to running for Manhattan College.

The boys lost 20-40 but showed some strong team running. Jimmy Cannon dominated the race winning in 14:04 but the Panthers depth grabbed the next six places. Ryan Polsgrove, a good looking sophomore, was 8th, while seniors Aidan Golden and Kevin White finished 9th and 10th. First timer senior runner Brian O'Connell took 12th, sophomore Nick Ouellette was 15th and freshman Tim Pick was 18th.

"We had a good turnout of rookies so we'll improve as the season transpires," said Hennessy. Cannon has been a top Patriot league runner all last year, Aidan Golden is a four year senior who also excels in Basketball and Baseball, while Kevin White is also a four year runner and has made dramatic improvements over his four years. Brian O'Connell is a former soccer player and is improving day by day. Nick Ouellette has been running for several years through the track club and middle school while Tim Pick is another multi-sport athlete with great dedication.

"What impresses me the most is that among our top seven guys there have been only two missed practices since August. That will reap rewards down the road," Hennessy said. The coach is being assisted by a talented staff led by Carolyn Mullaney, a former NCAA All American at Norwich, Deirdre (Donovan) Page, a former North Quincy star and a recent Fitchburg State Hall of Fame inductee as well as NCAA All-American Kim Allen, last year's Quincy High Outdoor track coach (the teams will be combined this spring), and Lucas Buckingham, a North Quincy High biology teacher who ran in college. QNQ traveled to Hingham Tuesday and next Tuesday hosts Pembroke in a Patriot League Fisher Division battle.

Real Estate Activity Bounces Back In August

showed a solid 11 percent increase in August compared to the same time period in 2015. O'Donnell noted, "A Homestead is an important consumer protection tool that I would encourage all homeowners to consider. A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of your primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000."

In conclusion, O'Donnell said, "After a less than robust July, it was great to see Norfolk County real estate activity rebound so strongly. It appears that a sizeable pool of buyers were aggressive in getting back into the market. Hopefully, the housing inventory level will not take a dip anytime soon. Another positive indicator is the continuing low interest rate which has been a key driver for real estate sales and lending."

Mayor Eyes Uniform Trash Collection Containers

tial," said Koch. "We expect to have a thorough conversation with the City Council and the community in the coming weeks and months and work through the inevitable challenges that will arise."

The Koch administration expects to have a formal proposal submitted to the City Council this fall, with any changes likely not taking effect until the start of a new fiscal year next July 1. Under the concept, about 28,000 households in the City would be provided one covered barrel for trash and one for recycling at a cost of an estimated $3 million.

The City does not pay to have recyclables processed, but pays for every ton of garbage. The state Department of Environmental Protection said a recycling program with large uniform containers could double the amount the City recycles every year to 10,000 tons. That would save more than $300,000 in annual trash collection costs, savings that would be used to offset the costs of purchasing new containers for households across the City.

The program would be similar to the standardized container program now in place in a number of Massachusetts communities, including Weymouth and Braintree. City officials have been studying programs in those communities to get a feel of the challenges that Quincy will face if it moves forward.

Among them are the size of the containers, the availability of additional containers for larger households, and enforcement policies for property owners who refuse to abide by new rules. A standard program would provide households with a 96-gallon container for recyclables and a 64-gallon container for trash.

Koch said those details of the proposal continued to be fleshed out, adding he would like to see option for seniors and some other households for smaller containers.

Some communities also charge a fee for additional containers or bags, although Koch said he's more apt to pursue an option that will allow residents to just buy their own extra containers that meet the specifications of any new program. In many cases, existing containers used by homeowners, known as totes, would meet the requirements.

"Recycling is important to our environment. Providing a standard, uniform means of collecting trash and recyclables in covered containers is important for our neighborhoods," Koch said.

Paul McDevitt Loses Battle With Cancer

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council adjourned its meeting Monday night in memory of Paul McDevitt, who died earlier that day at the age of 74 following a battle with cancer.

McDevitt, the husband of state Auditor Suzanne Bump, had served as the president of Quincy Center-based Modern Assistance Programs, Inc., which he founded 30 years ago.

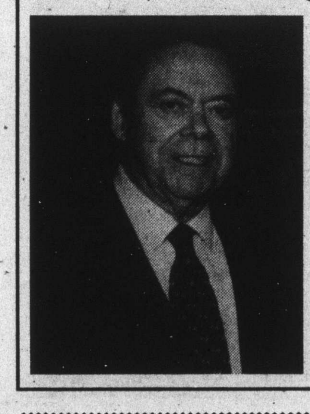

He was also a longtime supporter of Marie Droste Counseling Services, which last month dedicated a new suite in its Quincy Center headquarters in honor of McDevitt, among the other organizations he was involved in. In June, the Paraclete Center in South Boston, whose board he chaired, named its building McDevitt Hall.

Councillor Joseph Finn remembered McDevitt during the council meeting Monday.

"I knew Paul McDevitt for many, many years. Those of us in the recovery community really lost an incredible presence and a friend," Finn said. "I get slammed for it, but you know what, it was the proudest honor I had in my life to run Father Bill's Place for seven years because I know the lives that have been touched and the people that have been impacted by it.

19th Annual Quincy ArtsFest Saturday, Sunday

The City of Quincy and the Quincy Art Association announce the 19th annual Quincy ArtsFest will be held Saturday, Sept. 17 and Sunday, Sept. 18 on the grounds of Merrymount Park.

The festival will feature artwork, live entertainment, crafters and children's activities that has become an autumn highlight for many Quincy families.

"We are fortunate to have such passionate citizens taking an active role in their community promoting the arts," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "Doing so is incredibly important, especially in this day and age."

ArtsFest will be held on the grounds of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex and Adams Field. The baseball field will transform from an athletic field into a center for the arts.

With a larger location at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex, the City of Quincy and Quincy Art Association were able to expand the event to include the Quincy Symphony Orchestra. The QSO will perform a free concert at Adams Field on Saturday, Sept. 17 from 5 to 7:30 p.m.

Concert goers are welcome to bring lawn chairs and blankets to sit on the field with friends and family. The bleachers will also be accessible to all spectators.

All art will be able to be viewed before, during, and after the concert.

"We are excited about participating in the ArtsFest and look forward to it very much," said symphony conductor Yoichi Udagawa. "We've put together a program of gorgeous classical music as well as many beloved selections from Broadway and the movies, and coupled with the setting, we think this will be a spectacular night for the arts."

Plan: Quincy Needs 4,000 New Housing Units By 2020

By SCOTT JACKSON

A five-year housing production plan being contemplated by the City Council says Quincy needs up to 4,000 more housing units – both affordable and market rate – over the next five years to keep up with the demand.

The council is being is asked to approve a new five-year housing production plan, and the body's housing committee will take up the matter Oct. 17. A representative from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, which worked with the Quincy Planning Department to put together the 80-page document, was unable to attend Monday's meeting.

Robert Muollo, a principal planner with the Planning Department, said the housing production plan provides an overview of the current housing in the city and projects housing needs of both the current population and in the future.

The project plan projects significant household growth – up to 8,100 new households by 2030. The growth is forecast for all age groups: young, middle age and seniors. To help meet

Paul Franz New Park Director

Mayor Thomas Koch has appointed long-time Park Department Project Manager Paul Franz as the new head of the department.

Franz started working on major Quincy park projects as a contractor in 1995 and joined the city full-time as a project manager in 2000. He replaces Christopher Cassani as executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

"Paul has been instrumental in almost every park project over the last 23 years, and his passion for our city, his experience and his knowledge make him a great fit for a position that holds great importance for our residents and a special importance to me personally," said Mayor Koch, who served as park director for 12 years prior to becoming mayor and whose father, Richard, served in the post for many years.

"Our community has done some great things at our parks through the years and Paul has been a big part of it every step of the way. We've got plenty of work to do, and he's the right person at the right time for this job," Koch added.

Franz graduated from Gordon College in 1972 and went on to manage the Sports Turf Division for commercial landscaper J. Farmer & Company, where he specialized in the construction of parks and playgrounds. In 1992, he began working as a consultant for park and athletic field design construction, a job that in 1995 found him working on Quincy projects with the new Park Director, Tom Koch.

FANCY THAT

While round brilliant-cut diamonds are the most popular choice for center stones in engagement rings, there has been a significant uptick in the preference for fancy-cut diamonds as well. Of particular interest to many is the "emerald cut," which is a step cut with angled corners and rows of pavilion and crown facets that run parallel to the girdle. The traditional shape of these elegant gemstones is rectangular. Another very popular cut is the "pear cut," which is rounded on one end with a tapering point on the other, like a teardrop. As a variation of the round brilliant, pear-cut diamonds are known for their brilliance. Along with the "oval cut," the tapered pear cut makes fingers look more slender.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Starting Our 49th Year

This week's issue marks the beginning of The Quincy Sun's 49th year in circulation.

As was customary with each passing year, my father would always write a short blurb or a full column thanking the Sun's readers and advertisers for their loyal support.

This year deserves a thank you too so here goes.

For those who are not familiar with the paper's origin, my father, the late Henry Bosworth, founded The Quincy Sun in the fall of 1968. The first issue – dated Thursday, Sept. 26, 1968 - rolled off the presses 48 years ago this week. There were those who thought the paper would fold within six months. Henry proved all those naysayers wrong.

We've gone to press and circulated another 2,495 issues since that first week nearly 50 years ago.

And while the city has changed over the years our mission has not: we serve Quincy and only Quincy. We have made the "City of Presidents" our only focus because the citizens of this great city deserve a newspaper that is all about the city they live in.

We strive to give our readers as much local information and news as we possibly can – from city government and the school system to high school sports and civic happenings and more. The most important word in our banner, Henry used to say, is "Quincy."

While the focus remains the same, we realize it's 2016 – not 1968.

Since that first issue went to press, the city has changed – and continues to evolve. And so too has the newspaper industry.

Some dailies and weeklies in other parts of the country have ceased. Factors include the Internet and websites along with social media. The online world has changed people's behaviors with how they collect their news. Google search a topic you want to read about and within seconds you'll have dozens of links to choose from.

We have adapted to these growing trends by using new technology to help serve our readers. Five years ago we launched our own website – TheQuincySun.com – to post news between and after deadlines. We also have our own Facebook page to share our news links with our "friends."

But The Sun continues to be our main priority.

And it's in the spirit of our founder that we continue week after week.

The Quincy Sun did not exist before my father envisioned this weekly newspaper. And he took a big leap of faith in starting up The Sun. Back in the 1960s, Henry had a big job with much responsibility at The Boston Herald Traveler. He was in charge of the newspaper's team of reporters who covered the South Shore for one of Boston's daily newspapers. Henry also wrote a column called "Inside South Shore." He was also well known in the city where he was raised before heading off to serve in the U.S. Navy in World War II.

One of his friends recently told me that he asked Henry about leaving the Traveler to start up The Sun. The friend suggested Henry was taking a pretty big risk launching a weekly paper in a city served for generations by a Quincy-based daily paper. The daily, at this time, had dropped the word "Quincy" from its banner and began to regionalize throughout the South Shore.

"It's going to happen," Henry told this friend. "There's no turning back."

Henry once noted that the first issue, in a sense, was the easiest one to put together. The staff had several weeks to gather news, collect ads and lay out pages before going to press that first week. It was the following week that would be difficult, he said, knowing the next issue was suddenly "on the clock" and deadlines had to be met.

And with a dedicated staff, loyal local businessmen and women who advertised and devoted readers, The Sun rose and continues to rise each and every week.

Starting his own weekly was Henry's dream. And he worked and worked and worked to make it come true and keep it alive. For more than 40 years Henry was the heart and soul of this newspaper.

We lost Henry more than seven and a half years ago in February, 2009. Hard to believe that much time has passed.

As we begin our 49th year, I want to thank all of our readers, advertisers and news sources who continue to believe in us. I also want to recognize all those who have worked here – writers, photographers, graphic artists, office workers and more – who have contributed week after week to ensure there is a new Quincy Sun each and every Wednesday.

Henry's dream is now in its 49th year.

Thank you to everyone who has helped keep that dream alive.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 real photo advertising postcard published by Frank Fessenden Crane, a prominent Quincy businessman shown here in his office on Temple Street in Quincy Square. Real estate was his principal business, but he was also an auctioneer, appraiser and an expert dealer in antique furniture. His real estate specialty was selling waterfront locations for businesses. On the wall is a poster for a water ways land auction to be held at the Seth Ventress Hall in Marshfield. In his later years he served the City of Quincy as the Commissioner of Waterfronts, Waterways and Navigation and he was also the Harbor Master. His office furniture, especially the roll top desk and chairs, would be considered antiques today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

South Quincy MBTA Study Gets Negative Reaction From Public

Members of a study team examining the environmental impact of a proposed MBTA station in South Quincy received a distinctly negative reaction from a group of local residents at a public workshop.

About 100 residents attended and 15 of them spoke out.

Officials of the MBTA and a Boston consulting firm appeared at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School to inform residents of the nature and scope of a study now underway to determine the feasibility of extending the MBTA Red Line from Quincy Center to an area between Independence Avenue and Centre Street in South Quincy.

However, all speakers voiced strong disapproval of the proposal.

"I'll do everything in my power to keep this station from being built," said Robert Cerasoli, Democratic candidate for state representative in the First Norfolk District. Rep. Joseph Brett, while affirming he was in favor of rapid transit extension southward, stressed that, "We don't need a terminal a half-mile from Quincy Center."

Pasquale DeStefano, chairman of the South Quincy Civic Association, stated, "Nobody's demonstrated a need for a station." He added that, "Thousands of residents in the area had signed a petition opposing the project."

(Editor's note: The station was built and opened in 1983.)

SHEETS SEEKS PUBLIC AGENDA AT MEETINGS

Ward Four City Councillor James A. Sheets wants to make City Council meetings "more meaningful to audience observers by distributing agenda copies to them before each meeting."

Sheets planned to introduce a resolve at the Oct. 7 council meeting requesting such a distribution of Council agendas. There had been criticism by spectators at special council meetings during the summer that they were unable to follow what was taking place.

Sheets indicated that with agenda in hand, the observer would experience more "educational and positive exposure" to the workings of city government.

This Boston legend will be honored that evening.

Street Magic – one of the best doo wop groups in the nation. They have appeared on national television in vocal competitions. This group originates locally, and some of the members have performed together for over 40 years. This group is loved by Baby Boomers.

Ray and his accordion have played at many of the black tie events that we have looked forward to over the years. Ray always backs up the fantastic voice of Sharon Z. She also plays drums.

Gospel Music, Hip Hop Highlight ENC Production Of 'The Wiz'

Hip hop choreography and rock gospel music will be among the highlights of the Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department's production of "The Wiz."

To be presented Thursday, Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 15 at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. at the Cove Fine Arts Center on ENC's main campus in Quincy, the musical will combine elements of rock gospel music and hip hop in this urban retelling of The Wizard of Oz.

"We are blessed at ENC to have such a culturally diverse student body," Director Tara Brooke Watkins said. "We have done several plays in the last few years that highlight different cultures and spotlight our multi-ethnic talent, but as yet, ENC had never done a musical that does the same. I'm excited to bring that diversity to our annual musical."

As with the original story, Watkins said, ENC's "The Wiz" will focus on the concept of the journey a young person takes to finding him or herself and a home.

"We will be using original drawings projected on a screen, designed by Michael Ballard," Watkins said. "Set pieces reminiscent of children's building blocks will be used to create the various puzzled-together scenes in addition to the technological projections."

The show's music will be directed by ENC Gospel Choir Director David Coleman, while Juanita Pearl will serve as choreographer.

"Juanita has extensive training in hip-hop style choreography," Watkins said, "and has worked in various capacities all over Boston."

Tickets for "The Wiz" are $15, $10 for seniors and students, $5 for children 12 and under. For more information, visit www.brownpapertickets.com.

Troop 24 and Crew 24 from Quincy recently visited the Massachusetts State House.

Thank you Sean Costelle for arranging the tour. All the scouts had a great time. The Nurse's Hall and Flag Room were some of the favorites. We genuinely appreciate the personal gifts and the pizza party.

State Rep. Bruce Ayers was very interested in the scouting program and we are very thankful for his support. Thank you Bruce Ayers for inviting us.

Also, the troop and crew learned a lot during this outing. For instance, we learned about the history, decision-making procecures, and architecture of the State House. It was a combined education and fun experience.

This is also a part of the Citizenship in the Nation Merit Badge. We would love to come back some time in the future.

Local Walk For Water To Impact Lives Around The World

The community is invited to join Glad Tidings Church Walk for Water Sunday, Oct. 9 at 2 p.m. at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

The fundraising goal for this year's event is $10,000. All donations benefit Water Mission, a nonprofit Christian engineering organization that builds safe water solutions in developing countries and disaster areas. Since 2001, Water Mission has used innovative technology and engineering expertise to provide access to safe water for more than 3 million people in 52 countries.

Water Mission will use the funds to drill a well and construct the plumbing infrastructure at Enkeriyian Primary School in rural Kenya.

To sign up for the Walk or to make a donation, visit elev8water.org or call 617-773-9797.

The Walk for Water promotes awareness of the global water crisis while raising funds to provide sustainable safe water around the world. During the approximately three-mile walk, participants are encouraged to carry a bucket of water to symbolize the burden that millions of women and children bear every day as they collect dirty water in developing countries.

The Enkeriyian community in Rural Kenya does not have clean water. Kids are always sick and miss school because of water-related illnesses.

For more information about the Glad Tidings Church Walk for Water, visit elev8water.org or contact Renny Varughese at 617-773-9797 or info@gtc-quincy.org.

Red Cross Needs Donors Of All Blood Types

The American Red Cross urges eligible donors to give blood to help ensure a stable and diverse blood supply for patients in need.

Two blood drives are scheduled this month in Quincy:

- Monday, Sept. 26 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St.
- Wednesday, Sept. 28 from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

A diverse blood supply is important to ensure the needs of all patients are met. Red blood cells carry markers that determine one's blood type, and some blood types are unique to certain racial and ethnic groups. Because blood from donors of the same ethnic background as the recipient is less likely to cause complications, the Red Cross must maintain a diverse blood supply to meet these diverse patient needs.

Whether blood is needed for a chronic condition such as sickle cell disease, a surgical procedure or a large-scale emergency, it's the blood already on the shelves that helps save lives. Donors of all blood types are needed.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). Donors are encouraged to make appointments and complete the RapidPass online health history questionnaire at redcrossblood.org/rapidpass to help reduce wait times.

Those who come out to give blood or platelets Sept. 1-30 will receive a free haircut coupon via email, courtesy of Sport Clips Haircuts. The coupon is valid through Nov. 6, 2016, at participating Sport Clips locations, and donors must have a valid email address on record to receive the coupon.

Jean's Dream Bars

By MARIE

Today's recipe is guaranteed to make you say "Wow!" The combination of coconut and walnuts it is a real dream of a dessert! I have to tell you though that you cannot count your calories when you are making or serving this desert. When my niece, Jean, brought me a couple of dream bars to taste, they virtually melted in my mouth.

Jean's Dream Bars

Recipe:

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees

Step One:

½ cup butter (1 stick)

½ cup light brown sugar

1 and ½ cups of flour

Mix all of the above together. Press into a greased 9 x 12 pan and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. This makes layer 1. Set aside

Step Two:

Mix together in order given:

2 eggs

1 cup dark brown sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring

½ teaspoon baking powder

¼ teaspoon salt

1 package of shredded coconut (approx. 12 ounces)

½ cup chopped walnuts (optional)

When well blended, use this mixture to top layer 1 and spread evenly. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes.

Let cool and then frost with butter cream frosting:

Recipe for Frosting:

3 cups confectioners sugar

1 stick of butter, softened

1 teaspoon of vanilla

3 tablespoons of milk. (Sometimes you need more)

Place all ingredients in a bowl, with a mixer mix until smooth and creamy.

Strawberry Chia Pudding

By SUSIE

In a serving of chia seeds (about 2 tablespoons), you get about 12 grams of carbohydrates, 11 grams of fiber (which helps keep blood sugar at an even keel), 9 grams of healthy fat, and 4.5 grams protein.

They also contain all nine amino acids in proper ratios and are a great alternative for vegetarians, since they are considered a complete protein.

A serving contains 18 percent of the RDA for calcium (for healthy bones), 27 percent RDA for phosphorus (also important for bones, teeth as well as cellular structure) 30 percent for manganese (also important for proper bone formation as well as skin integrity), as well as zinc (important for immune function and hormone balance) and copper (necessary for healthy skin, hair, and helps with the formation of hemoglobin).

They are rich in omega 3 fatty acids which are needed for various important functions, including but not limited to warding off cancers and arthritis, heart disease, and are imperative for brain health and even mood stabilization.

STRAWBERRY CHIA PUDDING

16 ounces fresh strawberries

1 1/2 cups (or one 13 1/2-ounce can) coconut milk

1/4 cup raw honey, or to taste

1 vanilla bean, scraped or 1 teaspoon vanilla

3/4 teaspoon finely grated lime zest

1/2 cup chia seeds

Place the strawberries, coconut milk, honey, vanilla, and lime zest in a blender and blend until smooth. Taste and add more honey if desired.

Place the chia seeds in a large bowl, pour the strawberry mixture on top, and whisk thoroughly.

Let stand for 10 minutes and whisk again.

Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours and up to 3 days.

Stir the pudding before serving. The longer it sits, the thicker the pudding will become; if you find that it is too thick, whisk in a little water (or coconut water, if you have some on hand).

Pumpkin Bread

By SUSIE

Here is a great recipe for pumpkin bread that is grain free to pack as well! Pack with a container of cream cheese or some butter for them to spread on.

1 1/2 cups blanched almond flour (I use Honeyville brand, it is the best!)

3 eggs

1/2 cup kerrygold butter (or another grass fed butter)

1 cup pureed pumpkin (I use canned for simplicity)

1 teaspoon vanilla

1 teaspoon cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

1/2 teaspoon sea salt

1/2 teaspoon baking soda

3/4 cup coconut sugar or any kind of sugar

1/2 cup dark chocolate chips (I use LILLY'S no sugar added brand.)

Cream together butter and sugar. Add in vanilla and eggs and beat well. Now add flour and baking soda, as well as spices. Combine and fold in chips.

Spoon into greased loaf pan and bake at 350 degrees for about 45 or 50 minutes.

'American Pickers' To Film TV Episodes In Bay State

Looking For Large, Private Antique Collections

Mike Wolfe, Frank Fritz, and their team are returning to Massachusetts to film episodes of the hit TV series, "American Pickers" throughout the region this fall.

American Pickers is a documentary series that explores the fascinating world of antique "picking" on History. The show follows Mike and Frank, considered two of the most skilled pickers in the business, as they hunt for America's most valuable antiques. They seek sizeable, unique collections while learning stories behind them.

Mike and Frank are on a coast-to-coast mission to recycle and rescue forgotten relics. Along the way, the Pickers want to meet characters with remarkable and exceptional items. The pair hopes to give historically significant objects a new lease on life, while learning a thing or two about America's past along the way.

Mike and Frank have seen a lot of rusty gold over the years and are always looking to discover something they've never seen before. They are ready to find extraordinary items and hear fascinating tales about them.

American Pickers is looking for leads of "hidden treasures." These collections can be anything from old vintage cars to sheds filled with large vintage neon signs.

Anyone with a large, private collection or accumulation of antiques or knows of such a collection is asked to send their name, phone number, location and description of the collection with photos to: americanpickers@cineflix.com or call 855-old-rust.

Over 2,000 Books Read As Part Of Dependable Cleaners 'Learn To Read'

Dependable Cleaners announces it has successfully completed the 2016 season of its annual Read to Ride program.

The program is designed to encourage students to continue with their reading during the summer months and Dependable Cleaners is delighted to announce that through this year's program, over 2,000 books were read. Moreover, since the program's inception in 1999, over 74,000 books have been read.

Students across the greater Boston area and southern Massachusetts, ages 6-15, participated in the program for the chance to win a bike or a runner-up prize for every book they read. Over the course of 10 weeks, 10 grand prize winners were awarded a new bike and helmet and 20 runner-up winners received exciting prizes, ranging from gift certificates for a paddle board trip on the Charles River to passes to The New England Aquarium.

Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners, said she started Read to Ride as she believes children who develop an early love for reading become better learners and more successful students.

"Reading truly is the foundation of a flourishing education," Hagearty said. "Year after year we've received such positive responses from Read to Ride and we are honored to be a driving force behind student reading in the greater Boston area."

Read to Ride 2016 is sponsored by Dependable Cleaners in conjunction with Country Ski & Sport and Farina's Bike Store in Watertown.

Psoriasis: Signs, Symptoms Of A Chronic Disease

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Psoriasis is a common skin condition that alters the life cycle of skin cells.

Psoriasis causes cells to build up rapidly on the surface of the skin. The surplus of skin cells form thick, silvery scales and itchy, dry, red patches that are occasionally painful.

Psoriasis is a persistent, chronic disease, which at times can consist of symptoms fluctuating from improvement to worsening. The cause of psoriasis isn't fully known, but it's thought to be related to problematic immune system cells in your body.

Signs and symptoms can vary from person to person but may include one or more of the following:

- Red patches of skin covered with silvery scales
- Small scaling spots (commonly seen in children)
- Dry, cracked skin that may bleed
- Itching, burning or soreness
- Thickened, pitted or ridged nails
- Swollen and stiff joints

Patches of psoriasis can range from a few spots of dandruff-like scaling to major flare-ups that cover extensive areas. Nearly all types of psoriasis go through cycles, flaring for a few weeks or months, then subsiding for an interval or even going into complete remission.

RUTH JONES

There are several types of psoriasis. These include:

- Plaque psoriasis is the most common form and causes dry, raised, red skin lesions (plaques) covered with silvery scales. The plaques itch or may be painful and can crop up anywhere on your body, including your genitals and the soft tissue inside your mouth. The amount of plaques can range from merely a few to numerous amounts.
- Nail psoriasis can affect fingernails and toenails, causing pitting, abnormal nail growth and discoloration.
- Scalp psoriasis appears as red, itchy areas with silvery-white scales on the scalp. The red or scaly areas often extend beyond the hairline.
- Guttate psoriasis primarily affects young adults and children and is usually triggered by a bacterial infection such as strep throat. It's discernible by small, water-drop-shaped sores on the trunk, arms, legs and scalp. The sores are covered by a fine scale and aren't as thick as characteristic plaques.
- Inverse psoriasis mainly affects the skin in the armpits, in the groin, under the breasts and around the genitals, causing smooth patches of red, inflamed skin.
- Pustular psoriasis is an uncommon form of psoriasis that can occur in widespread patches (generalized pustular psoriasis) or in smaller areas on your hands, feet or fingertips.
- Erythrodermic psoriasis is the least common type of psoriasis and can present with a red, peeling rash covering your entire body that can itch or burn intensely.
- Psoriatic arthritis consists of inflamed, scaly skin, and in addition causes pitted, discolored nails and the swollen, painful joints that are typical of arthritis.

Psoriasis typically starts or worsens because of a trigger that you may be able to identify and avoid. Factors that may trigger psoriasis include:

- Infections, such as strep throat or skin infections
- Injury to the skin, such as a cut or scrape, bug bite, or a severe sunburn
- Stress
- Cold weather
- Smoking
- Heavy alcohol consumption
- Certain medications

Anyone can develop psoriasis, but these factors such as family history, viral and bacterial infections, stress, obesity and smoking can intensify your risk of developing the disease.

The objectives of psoriasis treatments are to stop the skin cells from growing so swiftly, which reduces inflammation and plaque formation and to remove scales and smooth the skin, which is particularly true of topical treatments that you apply to your skin. Treatment modes can be divided into three main types: topical treatments, light therapy and systemic medications.

Topical treatments

Used alone, creams and ointments that you apply directly to your skin can efficiently treat mild to moderate psoriasis. When the disease is more relentless, creams are likely to be combined with oral medications or light therapy.

Light therapy (phototherapy)

This psoriasis treatment uses natural or artificial ultraviolet light. The simplest and easiest form of phototherapy entails exposing your skin to controlled amounts of natural sunlight. Additional forms of light therapy include the use of artificial ultraviolet A (UVA) or ultraviolet B (UVB) light either alone or in combination with medications.

Oral or injected medications

If you have severe psoriasis or it's impervious to other types of treatment, your doctor may prescribe oral or injected drugs. Some of these medications are used for only brief periods of time because of potential severe side effects and may be alternated with other forms of treatment.

Treatments are usually based on the type and severity of the psoriasis and the areas of skin affected, however the traditional approach is to commence with the mildest treatments such as topical creams and ultraviolet light therapy (phototherapy) and then progress to stronger ones if necessary. The objective is to find the most effective way to slow cell turnover with the fewest possible side effects.

Regardless of a range of options, effective treatment of psoriasis can be taxing. The disease is unpredictable, going through seemingly haphazard cycles of improvement and worsening. Effects of psoriasis treatments also can be erratic; what works well for one person might be ineffective for someone else. Your skin also can become resistant to countless treatments over time, and the most potent psoriasis treatments can have dangerous side effects.

It is imperative to communicate with your health care provider about your options, especially if you're not improving after using a particular treatment or if you're having uncomfortable side effects. He or she can adjust your treatment plan or modify the approach to ensure the best possible management of your symptoms.

Coping with psoriasis can be a challenge, especially if the disease covers large areas of your body or is in places readily seen by other people, such as your face or hands. The ongoing, persistent nature of the disease and the treatment challenges only add to the burden. Managing life with psoriasis isn't always easy. But making healthy choices and limiting stress in your life can have an impact by helping you live well with psoriasis.

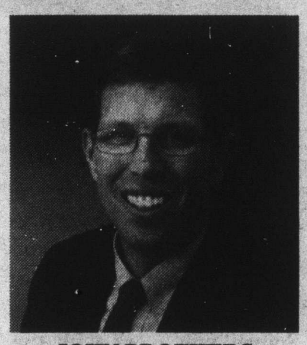

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Brothers Stepping Down As QARI Director

John Brothers is stepping down after 12 years serving as the executive director of Quincy Asian Resources Inc. (QARI), a Quincy nonprofit focused on supporting the South Shore's vibrant and growing Asian immigrant community.

"It's time for a change for me and my family," Brothers said. "I will always treasure my time working with the amazing people who have been a part of QARI." He said he looks forward to new opportunities to apply his leadership, development, and advocacy skills to building stronger communities.

QARI was founded in 2001 to improve the lives of Asian Americans to the benefit of Quincy and neighboring communities. Brothers joined the agency as executive director in 2004. Since then the agency has grown to serve thousands of South Shore residents a year through adult education programs, youth mentoring and leadership programs, native-language access to social services, and cultural events such as the city's August Moon Festival.

JOHN BROTHERS

During his tenure, Brothers oversaw the creation and expansion of QARI's programs and services, including partnerships with the Quincy Public Schools and many other organizations, leading to the addition of a satellite program center in North Quincy.

Abby Nguyen-Burke, president of QARI's board of directors, said, "We thank John for his 12 years of leadership at QARI and for the contributions he's made to QARI and the Asian community in Quincy. We have a strong team in place to ensure continuity in our service to the community and a smooth transition."

Nguyen-Burke and the Board of Directors will lead the search for a new executive director. Brothers will remain in his position into the fall and assist with the search for a successor and the transition of leadership.

English Garden Topic Oct. 5 For Houghs Neck Garden Club

The Houghs Neck Garden Club ended the 2015-16 garden club year with a 10th anniversary celebration held on June 18th at Nut Island.

This free event to which members of the community were invited was well attended and we were blessed with glorious weather. The club was honored at this event when state Rep. Tackey Chan presented a certificate from the Massachusetts House of Representatives to congratulate the club on its 19th anniversary and in recognition of services to the Houghs Neck community.

Earlier in the spring, Club members participated in "Cleaner Greener, Quincy" and in June the club held a free pruning workshop conducted by arborist Jen Kettell at Leo Kelly Park to which the Houghs Neck community was invited. Although exceptionally hot weather stalled outdoor activity during much of the summer, the HNGC was very active in the spring and early summer planting and maintaining various public sites in the neighborhood. Recent milder days have seen members tidying up at the Houghs Neck Welcome Rock and elsewhere.

On Wednesday, Oct. 5, the club's first speaker for the fall, Thomas Mickey, will speak on "America's Romance with the English Garden." Mickey, a graduate of the Landscape Institute at the Boston Architectural College, has been a newspaper garden columnist and is a Master Gardener and Professor Emeritus of Communication Studies at Bridgewater State University.

The meeting will be held in the MWRA Community Room at Nut Island, second floor, 149 Sea St., starting at 7 p.m. with refreshments and a brief business meeting followed by the program at 7:30pm. New members are welcome.

The Houghs Neck Garden Club is a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

Manet Community Health Hires Nurse Case Manager For Office-Based Opioid Treatment Program

Community Forum Oct. 5 At Quincy High School

Manet Community Health Center announces Corinne Sieben, BSN, RN, is the nurse case manager for the health center's new office-based opioid treatment program, which is being piloted at Manet's Snug Harbor and North Quincy practice sites.

CORINNE SIEBEN

Sieben comes to Manet with more than 17 years of community health nursing, including 15 years at McLean Hospital's inpatient dual-diagnosis (psychiatric and substance abuse) unit. "I am eager to transition to the outpatient setting so that I can help support patients with continuity of care and follow them along their journey to regaining their lives and their health," she said.

Manet's Office-based Opioid Treatment (OBOT) program is funded through the Department of Public Health, with technical assistance from Boston Medical Center's groundbreaking Office-Based Addiction Treatment program, as a step toward integrating addiction treatment into overall health care services. The OBOT program is open to Manet patients. Patients wishing to receive mediation assisted treatment must select a Manet primary care provider.

The program will enable Manet providers to offer both buprenorphine, sometimes known as Suboxone, and injectable naltrexone, sometimes known as Vivitrol, to opioid-dependent patients in the privacy of their doctor's office. These medications are effective in the treatment of opioid addiction by alleviating drug cravings and easing withdrawal symptoms. Vivitrol can also be used to treat alcohol dependence.

"The community health center setting provides the comprehensive services necessary to treat the whole person and all of their health care needs – not just the addiction," said Lily Yung, MD, Manet's Chief Medical Officer. "Having a nurse care manager who is in regular contact with the patient over an extended period of time, coordinating all of his or her care, gives the patient a much better chance of success. We also have the added benefit of having a pharmacist right on site to further ensure that the whole care team is on the same page."

In order to prescribe buprenorphine, physicians must obtain a waiver from Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). To qualify for the waiver, licensed physicians must have subspecialty board certification in addiction medicine or undergo at least eight hours of approved training in buprenorphine use. Currently, four Manet providers have received training and waivers.

"This is a problem we see so many of our patients struggling with and now, by being able to prescribe these medications, we are able to treat opioid addiction just like we treat diabetes, hypertension, or any other chronic disease," Dr. Yung said.

As a nurse care manager, Seiben will work with the prescribing provider to help manage all aspects of the patients' health and wellness, including screening for opiates, counseling and education, making follow-up appointments and referrals. She will see most patients on a regular pre-determined basis for several months or longer.

"This program is a good way to give people who are committed to recovery the support they need in a safe environment," Sieben said. "People are able to resume their daily lives while they are getting treatment. It's so rewarding to see people who are able to reunite with their families, go to work and get their lives back on track."

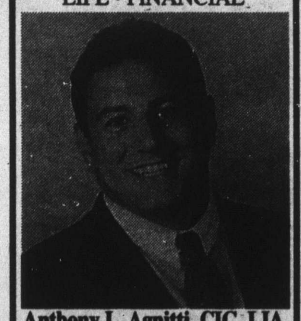

Overcoming the stigma of substance use disorders, Sieben said, "is one of the biggest hurdles we face. One of our goals will be to help educate the community about the benefits of medication assisted treatment so people can understand how programs like this can save lives."

To help build community awareness about substance use resources and treatment options, Manet is hosting a community forum, "What you Need to Know About Substance Abuse Disorders Treatment and Services," on Wednesday, Oct. 5, from 6 to 8 p.m., at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St. The event is meant to help people learn about the substance use disorder treatment system and where they can go for help.

Prior to the panel discussion, representatives from local organizations will be available to offer information about addiction treatment resources. A question and answer session will follow the panel discussion.

The event is free and open to the public. For more information, call 857-403-1575 or email kkroeger@manetchc.org.

School Subcommittees Set Goals For Upcoming Year

By TOM GORMAN

The school committee's subcommittees have set their goals for the 2016-17 school year.

During a special meeting of the school committee on Sept 14, the committee's eight subcommittees met to discuss the district's school improvement plan and priorities and set their respective goals and agendas for the school year.

"This is an organizational meeting," said school committee Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli. "This is for the subcommittees to meet in groups to look at their agendas for the year and discuss what is pertinent."

The subcommittees are: budget and finance chaired by Emily Lebo; policy, chaired by Bregoli; school facilities and security, Kathryn Hubley, chairperson; health, transportation and safety chaired by James DeAmicis; special education, Anne Mahoney, chairperson; teaching/learning chaired by Barbara Isola; rules, post audit, oversight chaired by Bregoli; Sterling building committee, Bregoli and Hubley co-chairs.

After reviewing their agenda items, most of the subcommittees did not make any major changes and a few modified, added or removed some items.

Lebo proposed her health, transportation and safety panel look into developing initiatives relating to diversity and respect. Also on the agenda for the year is discussing discipline and attendance and substance abuse prevention.

Her subcommittee decided to remove an agenda item for traffic concerns at North Quincy High School since, Lebo explained, the issue had "been rectified." Also eyed for removal is the solar panel project since arrays have been installed at some schools.

During his report of the policy subcommittee, Bregoli asked that members be appointed to the athletic subcommittee in order to discuss recertifying coaches for CPR. The athletic panel had been formed a couple years ago but no members were appointed.

The policy subcommittee will be working with Superintendent of Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro during the year to review and propose updates for the policy handbook. Some policy proposals include medication administration, the hiring and advertising process for open school department positions, substance prevention and treatment and registering students for voting at the high schools.

Regarding the voter registration proposal, Bregoli explained that students do not have to be 18 to register. He added that having the registration option at the high school would likely increase the chances of students registering.

"If left to their own devices, they (students) won't register," Bregoli said.

The special education panel will be collaborating with the Quincy Parent Advisory Council (QPAC) to discuss the new guided math program and initiatives for students on performance improvement plans (PIP) and individual education plans (IEP), according to Mahoney. The subcommittee will be working on planning Parent Academies to providing information on dyslexia and rights and responsibilities.

Hubley's facilities and security subcommittee will be monitoring the new Sterling Middle School project as well as repair and upgrade projects under the purview of the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA). reviewing conditions of playgrounds.

In July, the MSBA approved the city's plan to build a new Sterling Middle School on Granite Street behind the existing 90-year-old structure. The state will reimburse Quincy 73 percent of the $58 million construction cost.

The facilities and security panel will also be working on the planned expansion of Teel Field at North Quincy High School, the Faxon Field equalization pipe and looking at safety concerns at President's City Inn that abuts the new Central Middle School.

DeCristofaro said having the subcommittees organized is important to carry out the district's improvement plan frameworks.

"It's a working copy," he said of the improvement plan. "We have to look at the subcommittees, see where we are and where we want to be. Each chairman of the subcommittees has goals. They need to develop a timeline, meeting dates, a list of goals, action steps and initiatives."

The plan outlines the district's benchmarks and teams responsible for developing and carrying out plans and responsibilities.

During the meeting, the superintendent introduced two new administrators of his leadership team that joined the school department this summer. Sarah Anderson is the new middle/high school special education and data support coordinator and Roberta DiTullio is the district's new literacy and Title One coordinator.

Anderson is from Florida and has "tremendous experience in special education at the high and middle school levels," said DeCristofaro.

DiTullio is a Quincy Point resident and has experience in assessments and Title One. DeCristofaro said students and teacher professional development will benefit from her experience.

Early Voting Begins Oct. 24 City Hall, NQ High School

Hancock St.

Early voting at City Hall, inside the atrium of the James R. McIntyre Government Center, will take on 10 weekdays: Oct. 24 through Oct. 28 and Oct. 31 through Nov. 4. The polls there will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays and from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Thursdays and Fridays.

Parking spaces will be set aside for residents headed to City Hall to vote on those days, City Clerk Nicole Crispo said Tuesday, and Mayor Thomas Koch has assured her the construction of the new plaza in front of the building would be completed by then.

North Quincy High will be open for early voting on Saturday, Oct. 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Election Day is Tuesday, Nov. 8. Polls will open at 7 a.m. that day and close at 8 p.m.

Under state law signed into effect in 2014 by then-Gov. Deval Patrick, municipalities are required to let voters cast ballots during a ten-day period leading up to Election Day each biennial statewide election. The law required communities to have one location open during business hours for those ten days, but also gave them the opportunity to offer extended and weekend hours, as Quincy will do this year.

The City Council approved the early voting plan in a 7-0 vote Monday night; Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain was not in attendance and Councillor Joseph Finn was not present for the vote.

Crispo told the council the two locations were chosen because of their proximity to MBTA stations.

"The train stations were a big factor here," she said. "We're going to do our best to get everybody a chance to vote early if they wish."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said it was reasonable to site the early voting locations based on their proximity to MBTA stations, but suggested the Board of Registrars of Voters revisit that plan in the future.

"I'd be interested in seeing some thought being put into not just train stations, but where we have folks who are seniors – where it would be easier to vote if they could have different hours," he said. "Maybe Germantown or Brewers Corner, places where folks have a lower propensity of voting and more single mothers working, more single-parent households, lower wage earners in those neighborhoods."

"To me this is an opportunity and a way to test out some different approaches to how we can increase voter turnout to perhaps serve underrepresented areas either demographically, ethnically, or geographically in the city," Palmucci added.

Crispo said the board would revisit the matter once the election concludes.

"We will analyze the books once early voting is over and once the election is over; we'll go back and look and see what affect it has." she said. "If Ward 4 had a huge response, then perhaps we could get the Lincoln-Hancock School or one of the other polling places to participate."

Crispo anticipates between 70 and 75 percent of the city's registered voters casting ballots in the November election; 57,198 residents were eligible to vote in the state primary earlier this month, and the deadline to register for the November election is Oct. 19. The same state law mandating early voting allows voter registration to take place online, which can be done at registertovotema.com.

Headlining the November election is the race for the White House between Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton and Republican nominee Donald Trump. Voters in Quincy will also cast ballots in the race between incumbent U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, and Republican challenger William Burke of Quincy, as well as the state Senate race between incumbent Democrat John Keenan and independent challenger Alex Mendez, both of Quincy.

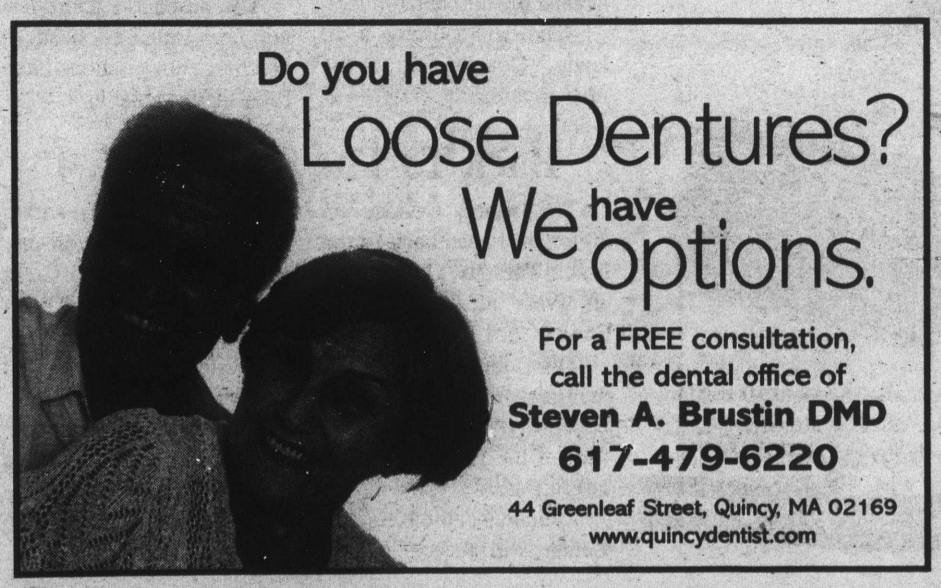

The Quincy Public Schools are closed on Election Day, with eight schools hosting polling precincts.

70's Celebration Oct. 6

The Quincy Council on Aging will celebrate the 1970's with DJ Joey B-Bop on Thursday, Oct. 6th from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Squantum Yacht Club.

The evening will feature music and dancing. Light refreshments will be provided along with a cash bar.

Tickets are $10 per person and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center. For more information call the Kennedy Center at 617-376-1506.

New Barrels Seen Helping Rat Problem

an update his department's work to mitigate the rat problem, said the barrel program would eliminate a major source of food for the rodents – trash in uncovered barrels or bags left at the curb without even being placed in a barrel.

"It will make a difference," he said. "I think we're eliminating a major food source."

Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the proposed trash program is not being pitched solely to deal with the rat problem – an increase in recycling is also eyed, among other benefits – but would help in that regard.

"The driving factor is not rodent issues, but it certainly is going to add to the work we're doing. It eliminates a major food source," Walker said. "One of the issues we have is barrels that are uncovered, plastic bags that are left curbside, and this is a major food source for rodents, rats and any other kind of vermin that needs a meal."

Walker said the formal proposal, which could cost $3 million to implement, would be before the council in the coming weeks or months; the mayor's office is in the process of soliciting feedback for the plan. Under the program, households would receive a 64-gallon covered container for garbage and a 96-gallon one for recyclables. Other communities, such as Braintree and Weymouth, have already implemented a similar uniform waste collection program.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, who, along with Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain sought an update from the Health Department on the rat problem, said the uniform waste collection program would be a good thing.

"The mayor's trash plan – however long it takes – that will be a good thing moving forward," Palmucci said.

Councillor Noel DiBona thanked the administration for beginning the conversation about a new barrel system. In April, DiBona had asked administration officials to consider such an initiative.

"The barrel system, in my personal opinion, is an investment and not an expense," he said Monday. "I think down the road – along with the recycling – we're going to save in the long run mitigating rats."

Palmucci said he and Cain – who was not present Monday – had sought the update on rat control efforts because they did not see a decrease in complaints about the rodents from residents this summer.

The city's budget for the fiscal year that began July 1 included $20,000 for the Health Department to fight rodents, up from $11,000 in the previous fiscal year.

With the extra funds, Scheele said his department has been able to aggressively go after the rats. In July and August of this year, the department set baited traps at 60 private properties, compared to nine during that same period last year.

The department had baited eight properties this month through Monday, compared to four during the entire month of September 2015.

Scheele said he expected a further increase in calls following Monday's meeting.

"I'm thrilled to be up here talking about it," he said. "The more we talk about, the more people know that there is an issue out there, and my office is here to help them anyway they can."

Restaurants, Scheele added, are required to have pest control companies come in on a regular basis, and bait boxes are mandated wherever dumpsters are placed. When contractors raze a building, they are required to set baited traps ten days prior to demolition and keep them there until ten days after work is finished.

The health commissioner said the record-breaking snowfall seen during the winter of 2014 and 2015 caused the rat problem by disrupting the baiting of traps.

"When you have 90 days of bait stations not being treated, that gives the rats a huge opportunity to reproduce, jump into the sewer systems, come out, find new food sources and burrow," Scheele said.

He was optimistic a decrease in rats would be seen next year because of the Health Department's actions.

"I think we're going to continue to go out and try to identify burrows, food sources and harborage areas where they're going to be living in," Scheele said. "As long as we can stay on top of that, I think we'll see a real decrease come next year."

4,000 New Housing Units By 2020

that demand, the plan says up to 4,000 new units of housing would be needed by 2020, including both market rate units and affordable units.

The housing production plan says 9.6 percent of housing units are set aside as affordable – less than the 10 percent threshold in Chapter 40B of Massachusetts state law – and includes as a goal an increase in affordable housing to meet that threshold.

Muollo on Monday said that while Quincy does not meet the 10 percent mark, it meets a second threshold in Chapter 40B by having affordable housing on at least 1.5 percent of developable land in the city. By meeting that threshold, the city is in compliance with Chapter 40B and a developer could not propose an affordable housing project that would be exempt from certain zoning requirements.

Affordable housing is for residents whose income is 80 percent of the median income for the area. Muollo said a resident in a single-person household making up to $51,000 would qualify for affordable housing.

Wollaston Woman's Death Still Being Probed

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than two weeks later, Quincy police are continuing their investigation into the death of a 52-year-old Wollaston woman whose husband said he accidentally struck her with a van while backing out of his driveway.

Capt. John Dougan said the death remained under investigation as of Tuesday afternoon, and no charges or citations have been filed against the husband.

"They are looking at all leads," Dougan said of the investigation.

Police received a report of a pedestrian accident shortly before 2:30 p.m. on Sept. 2 at 19 Phillips St. in Wollaston. The victim, 52-year-old Zhen Li, was pronounced dead at the scene. Her 54-year-old husband, whose name has not been released, told officers "he was backing his vehicle out of his driveway and accidentally struck his wife," police said in a statement Sept. 2.

The husband's name has not been released because no charges or citations have been filed against him.

Collecting Donations Of Household Necessities

Registry Of Deeds Partners With Newlife Home Refurnishing

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is collecting donations for Newlife Home Refurnishing, a non-profit organization dedicated to helping people who are in need of household necessities.

"It's a wonderful organization headed by great people whose mission it is to make sure that families and individuals can function and live in dignity in their own homes," said Register Bill O'Donnell.

The charity opened its warehouse doors in November of 2013, providing such free household items to its clients as furniture, linens, mattresses, dishes, pots and pans and more. There is a wide variety of people who come into the warehouse, including those affected by disasters (such as fires and floods) as well as veterans and others.

O'Donnell said the Registry, due to space limitations, can only collect certain types of household items. He said donations such as linens, sheets, comforters and blankets (no king size) are particularly needed. Other items sought include pots, pans, kitchen and cooking utensils (no dishes), silverware, towels and face cloths, (no beach towels).

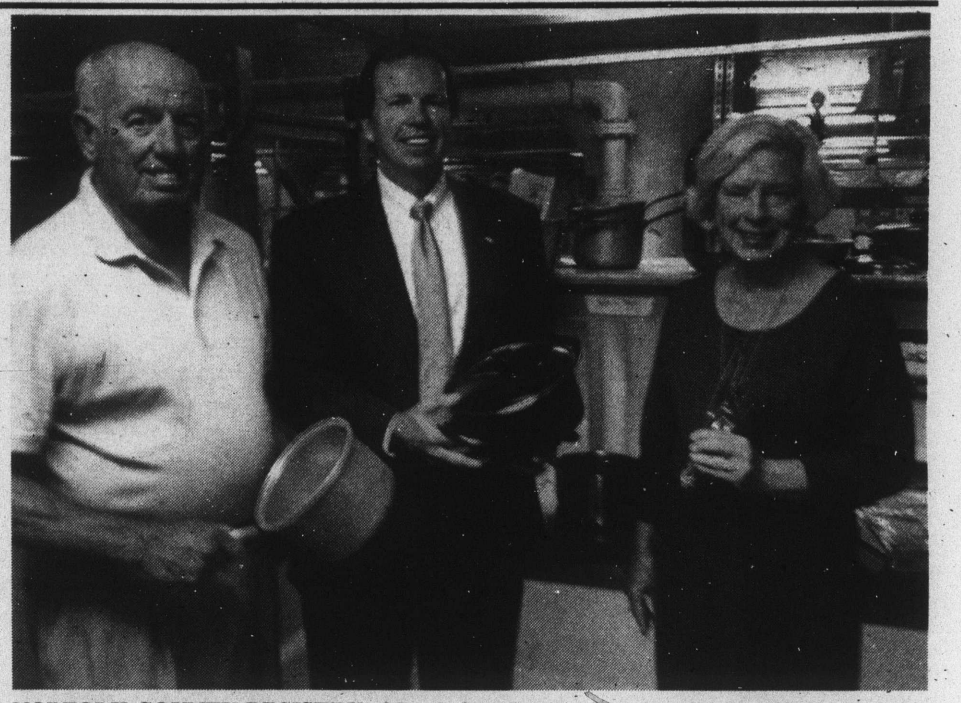

Ron and Barbara Yates of Newlife Home Refurnishing said, "We are delighted to partner with the Registry. This partnership will go a long way in helping us meet our objectives to help those less fortunate in our local communities."

In their nearly three years of operation, newlife Home Refurnishing has served more than 600 households, 1,300 individuals and 75 veterans. Additionally, approximately 90 referring agencies and professionals have sent clients to their organization. "Newlife Home Refurnishing has certainly found a market for this need. And they have been very successful at getting the job done," O'Donnell said.

Those interested in making a donation, can call Alicia Gardner at 781-461-6104 or email her at agardner@norfolkdeeds.org. The Registry requests that if you are looking for a receipt for your donation, bring a list of the items that you are donating. You can also donate to Newlife Home Refurnishing directly at 102 Elm Street, Walpole. Check their website at www.newlifehr.org for hours of operation.

"We are truly delighted to have Newlife Home Refurnishing's join Suits for Success, the Holiday Food Drive on behalf of our local food pantries and our Holiday Toy Drive on behalf of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve "Toys for Tots" as part of the Registry of Deeds efforts to help out the Norfolk County community," O'Donnell said.

Reception, Silent Auction To Benefit Quincy Historical Society Sept. 29

Quincy Historical Society will hold a Reception and Silent Auction to benefit the Society and its work on Thursday, Sept. 29, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti will serve as master of ceremonies. The evening will be catered by the FujiGroup restaurants.

Auction items include tours of the State House by state Sen. John Keenan and state Reps. Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan and of City Hall by Mayor Thomas Koch, tours of the steeple and clock tower of United First Parish Church and of the penthouse of the Granite Trust (Bank of America) Building, special events for children with the Quincy Fire Department and Quincy Police Department, and goods, services and experiences from a wide array of donors, including The Quincy Sun.

As the Society approaches its 125th anniversary in 2018, it has set goals of telling the often overlooked story of modern Quincy, as well as of our storied past, and of reaching new audiences through social media, video, podcasts, digitization of resources, while we maintain its traditional role services, including educating 1,400 Quincy Public Schools children annually and providing a gathering place for all those interested in the history of Quincy.

Proceeds from the auction will help the Society meet these challenges.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, Sept. 12, at approximately 10 p.m., Officers Paul Murphy and Joseph Paccioretti were dispatched to the intersection of Copeland and Miller Streets for a report of a motor vehicle operator asleep behind the wheel of a Ford SUV that rolled into a telephone pole.

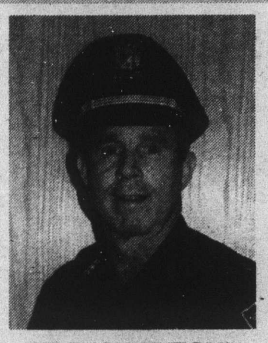

Officer Murphy arrived on scene and was greeted by a male and a female citizen who were waving their arms and pointing at a vehicle driving off on Copeland Street eastbound. The male excitedly yelled, "That's him there! See the taillights? That's him! He was unconscious and he had a needle on his lap!"

Officer Murphy notified Quincy Police Communications via radio and then drove off to catch up to the suspect vehicle. Officer Murphy caught up to the SUV and activated his blue lights as he followed it onto Copeland Street, clocking it at 50 miles per hour. The suspect vehicle then began swerving as it drove east on Water Street. The suspect vehicle eventually stopped on Brook Road.

Officer Paccioretti arrived on scene as Officer Murphy approached the driver's window. Lt. Peter Turowski and Officers Paul Foley and Jeffrey Bossart arrived shortly thereafter. As Officer Murphy approached the vehicle, he observed the driver to be leaning over to his right as he put both hands down to his right. The officer ordered the driver to turn off the vehicle's engine, which he did. He was then told to put the keys on the dashboard, however, it took approximately one minute to take the keys out because he had not put the gear shift into park.

The officer observed the driver's pupils to be extremely constricted and he appeared to be lethargic. Officer Murphy told the driver to exit the vehicle and he then patted him down for weapons. At this time, the male and female witness pulled up to the scene of the stop and confirmed the identity of the driver.

The male witness stated that he was behind the suspect's vehicle on Miller Street approaching the stop sign at Copeland Street. He observed the suspect's vehicle stop approximately 20 yards prior to the stop sign. The male witness said that his first thought was that the driver was on the phone, so he began to pass the suspect vehicle on the left. As he passed by, he observed that the suspect appeared to be unconscious with his head back and his arms out to his sides.

The male witness pulled over ahead of the suspect vehicle and approached the driver's window to see if he was alright. The suspect vehicle then began to roll away, eventually stopping against a telephone pole. The male witness again approached the suspect's window and this time the suspect appeared to be awake, but was unaware that the vehicle hit a pole.

The male witness asked the suspect to pull off the road and into the parking lot of a car wash at the side of the street. The suspect was unable to shift the vehicle into reverse and watched as the suspect hit the gas and revved the engine while it was in park while looking to the rear as if he was trying to back up. He also noted that the suspect had a hypodermic needle on his lap with a small plastic bag.

The suspect then took the needle and placed it down to his right side. The male witness tried to keep the suspect there but he drove off just before the police arrived. The female witness said that she was passing by the vehicle and saw the male witness and the suspect who was unconscious. She called the police and then drove over to the fire station to alert them.

Officer Foley advised the suspect of his Miranda rights, which he said he understood. The suspect gave Officer Foley a sandwich bag, which he had tucked into his sock. This bag contained a Bic lighter, a metal spoon with a white residue and burn marks, a Q-tip, and the torn off knot of a small plastic bag. Based on training an experience, the officers knew that these items are commonly used in the process of preparing and ingesting illegal narcotics, such as heroin.

The suspect admitted to Officers Foley and Bossart that he had used heroin this evening. Officer Murphy noted that the suspect had a fresh puncture mark on his right forearm, consistent with having used a hypodermic needle. Inside the suspect's vehicle, between the center console and the driver's seat, Officer Paccioretti located a hypodermic needle, which was the same area that Officer Murphy observed the suspect reaching toward as he approached his vehicle.

In the cup holder of the center console, Officer Paccioretti also located a ripped empty corner-tie plastic baggie with a white powdery residue. In the cup holder, was a red plastic cup containing a napkin with burn marks on it. Based on training and experience, this was consistent with the packaging and use of illegal narcotics. Officer Bossart conducted field sobriety tests on the suspect, which he failed.

Based on the above observations, the suspect's statements, and the field sobriety tests,

Officer Murphy formed the opinion that the suspect was under the influence of Heroin. The suspect was placed into custody and after a brief search, Fentanyl was also found in the suspect's possession.

The suspect, a 38-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with operating under the influence of drugs, to wit, heroin, possession of a class B substance, to wit, Fentanyl, and speeding.

Nice Work!

WALKING IN THE CITY SAFETY TIP: With so many more cars on the road and some drivers preoccupied with texting, on medication/drugs etc., I recommend that walkers head toward traffic. In the event that a driver loses control of his vehicle, it gives the walker a better chance of moving out of the way and avoiding serious injury.

Planning Board OKs Washington St. Self-Storage Facility

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Weymouth company has received permission from the Planning Board to build a four-story, 122,900 square foot self-storage facility on Washington Street near one of the major gateways into Quincy.

The board on Sept. 14 approved Jumbo Self Storage's plan to construct the new building, which will house 1,062 storage containers, at 661-671 Washington St. The 66,000 square foot property is in an industrial zoning district a short distance from the rotary at the base of the Fore River Bridge.

The facility will be constructed on the site of a former gas station and partially in the space now used as a boatyard. Included in the plan are 12 parking spaces and new landscaping around the site – the developer agreed to plant trees with a caliper, or trunk diameter, of at least four inches, and three eight-inch caliper trees near the South Street side of the property will be preserved.

Jumbo Self-Storage received three special permits from the Planning Board – for a major, non-residential use, for parking, and for signage.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, in a letter to the board, said the storage facility was preferable to other uses allowable in an industrial zoning district, would not add substantially to traffic along Washington Street – 32,000 vehicles travel across the Fore River Bridge daily – and would represent an improvement over the boatyard.

"Some residents have shared with me that a storage facility is not the most optimal use for the property," Croall said. "On some level I agree; however, I'm always aware a zoned industrial area is subject to a lot more undesirable business models coming into your neighborhood other than a self-storage facility.

"Self-storage businesses typically attract a low volume of traffic, which is something to seriously consider given the already high volume of traffic along the corridor. In addition, I believe the investment into the corridor will be a needed update to the dilapidated boatyard that is currently there. The agreed-upon landscape plan should enhance the aesthetic view along Washington Street."

Bill Chaggaris, an abutter on South Street who voiced his opposition to the proposal at two previous hearings, did so again Sept. 14. He said there was no need for a new self-storage facility in Quincy, because an Extra Space Self Storage opened in recent years on Liberty Street.

"Why do you need another one," he stated.

Chaggaris also said the Washington Street facility would add to traffic in the area, expressed concern over drainage on site, and noted part of the boatyard will still remain after the new building is completed.

Quincy Nonprofit Wins Free Solar PV System

A year after its official end, Solarize Quincy, a city and state program offering discounted solar electricity (PV) systems, continues to transform the city's landscape.

The program resulted in contracts for 110 solar PV systems installed on the roofs of Quincy residences and businesses, for a combined total size of more than 600 kilowatts (KW). Under the agreement between Solarize Quincy and its selected installer, that figure more than met the threshold for a 5 KW solar PV system to be donated to a Quincy nonprofit by the installer, SolarFlair of Ashland.

MAYOR TOM KOCH (third from right) with Solarize Quincy Team, including Ross Edwards, David Reich, Brian Hession of SolarFlair, Rebecca McWilliams, Shelly Dein, and Kara Chisolm.

Eleven nonprofits applied for the free system, of which six passed an initial property screening by SolarFlair. On May 24, a lottery conducted in the presence of Mayor Thomas Koch and several Solarize Quincy volunteers, chose NeighborWorks of Southern Mass., a housing counseling agency that also develops and operates special needs and affordable housing, as the tentative winner pending an intensive site evaluation, which was recently completed. Later this year, SolarFlair will install the 5 kilowatt system on the roof of the NeighborWorks office building, at 422 Washington St.

It won't be the first solar PV system on a NeighborWorks property. Of the 19 multifamily residential buildings that the agency owns within city limits, two already sport solar arrays, including a 63.9 kilowatt system that NeighborWorks had installed on another property. Of their other buildings, 13 have been deemed suitable for solar panels, and NeighborWorks plans to put solar on every one as funds become available, according to Executive Director Robert Corley, who cited the cost savings that come with owning solar.

"It's very difficult to operate under traditional assumptions for electricity rates," Corley said. "Utilities these days are exceeding the expected increases."

Corley said he also likes the fact that the donated panels will be visible to Ask Barbara Graceffa:

'Secretary Of The Interior'

I love Hawaiian shirts (I wear them all year long!). How can I use these designs/patterns in my home? Johnathan

Every home needs a little whimsy – with an emphasis on little. Unless you are decorating a summer home, I would suggest you just stick to small doses in a room or two.

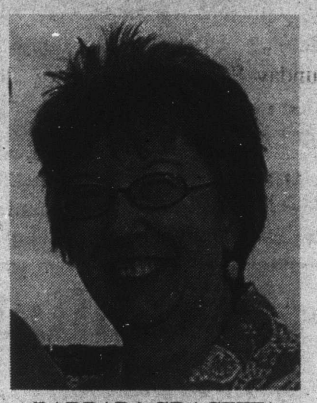

For example, place Hawaiian fabric pillows in your living room. In the bedroom, a tropical patchwork quilt will brighten the room. For the bathroom, purchase an Hawaiian print shower curtain or hang an Hawaiian shirt on the wall with a bamboo rod.

PS. You must be a kindred spirit with my husband who owns a couple dozen Hawaiian shirts!

I've just had my kitchen cabinets painted a light gray and have black appliances. What colors can I use for a valance over the one window? What colors can I choose for wall paint? Mrs. D

Since gray and black are both neutrals, the sky is the limit. If the room only has one window, choose something on the bright side such as a green or peach or a light to medium yellow.

NB: Yellows are the hardest color to get right. If you find a color you like on the strip of multi paint colors, I always suggest you choose the hue one or two below that first choice. Yellows that are too bright can hurt your eyes.

Raiders Blank Boston Latin, 17-0

BY JOE REARDON

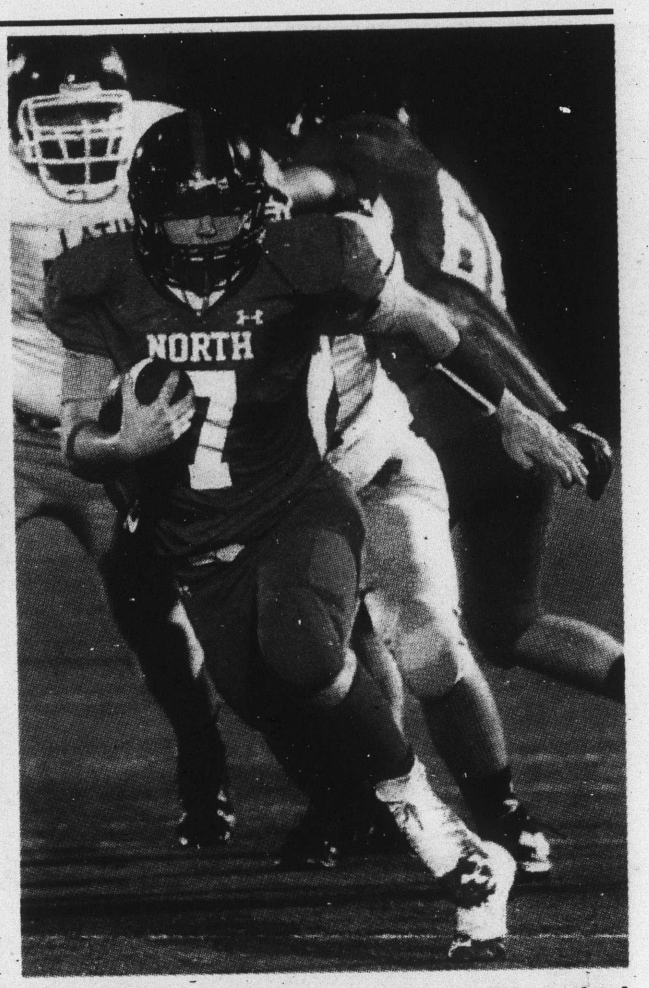

North Quincy's roster isn't stacked with seniors so there's little doubt that head coach Mark Nutley and his coaching staff will have to rely on their talented underclassmen contingent to make big, momentum-changing plays if the Red Raiders want to have a fall to relish.

That's exactly what transpired against nonleague opponent Boston Latin in the Red Raiders' home opener.

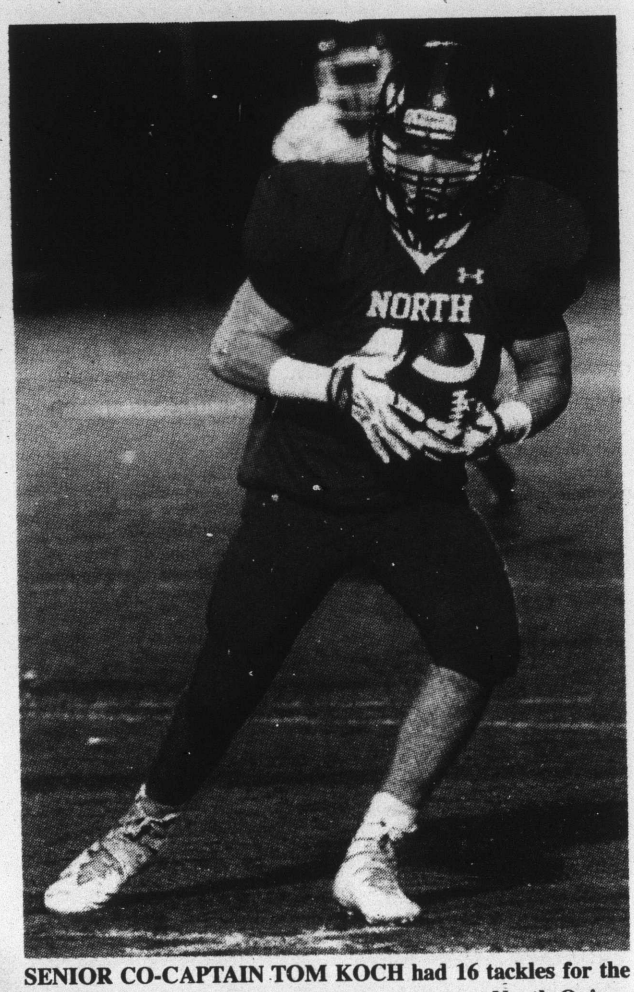

A week after a tough 19-8 loss in the season-opener, North Quincy turned the tides with a satisfying 17-0 win over the Wolfpack. The stellar sophomore play was at full full steam as the victory at Veterans' Memorial Stadium evened the team's record at 1-1.

Sophomore quarterback Tim Layden was sharp when he had to be, completing eight passes for 153 yards

SOPHOMORE QUARTERBACK TIM LAYDEN completed eight passes for 153 yards and a touchdown in North Quincy's 17-0 win over Boston Latin Sept. 16.

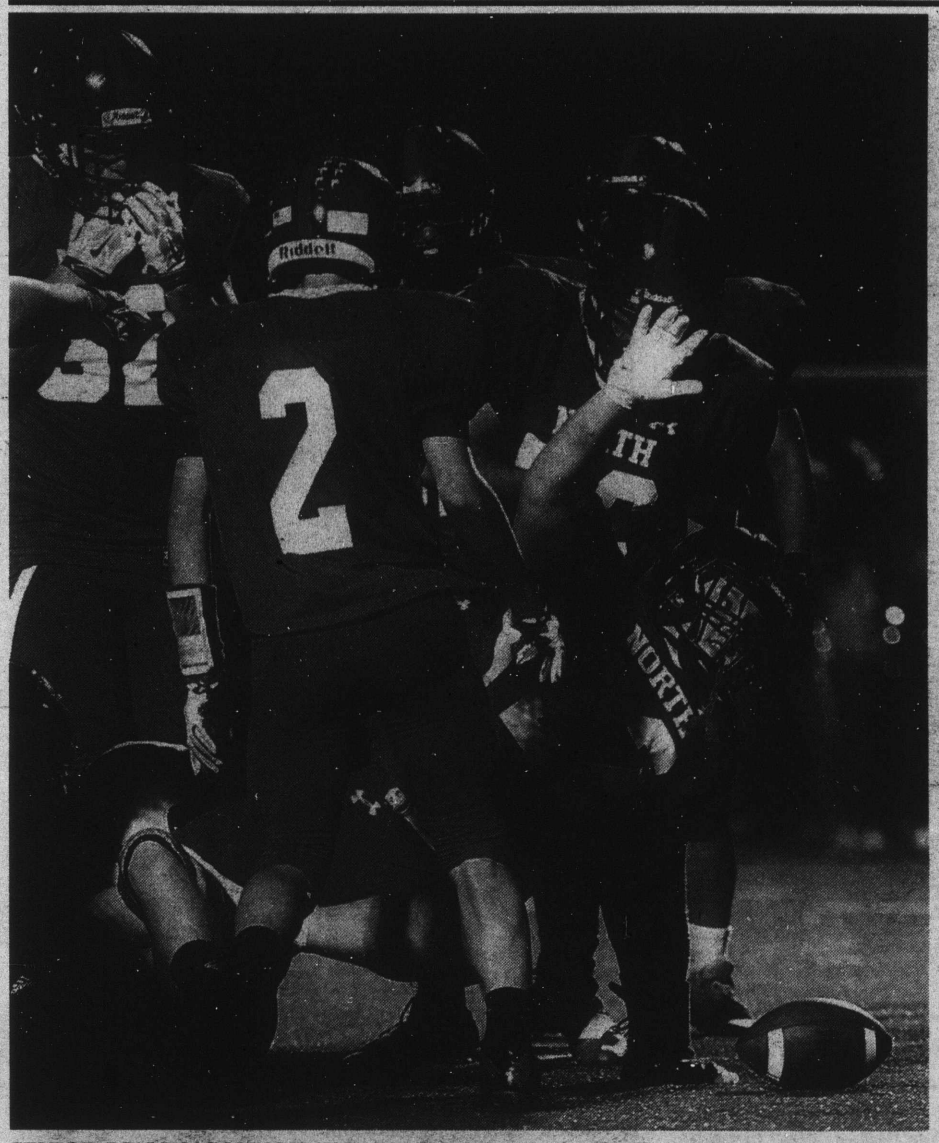

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN TOM KOCH had 16 tackles for the Red Raiders and caught a blocked punt to put North Quincy in Wolfpack territory. The Raiders scored on their possession as Tim Layden connected with Chris Donaghey on a 33-yard touchdown completion.

and a touchdown, while fellow sophomore Win Tran rushed for 64 yards. Defensively, Tom Koch had 16 tackles for North Quincy.

"We were a little nervous going into the season because we're so young," said Nutley. "But they responded. It was a huge win. "We'll take it.

They played tough last week and it was nice to get it this week." Nutley said. "The offense and defense both played well. We started off a little slow offensively, but the defense kept us in the game. They're playing tough. It was a great effort tonight - offense, defense, special teams. Everything.

"A lot of sophomores out there - quarterback, running back, receiver," Nutley said. "It was nice to see them step up in a big way today."

The player of the game, though, was sophomore Nathan Sleiman who continued his torrid play in the defensive backfield with three interceptions, giving him four total in the first two games. The North Quincy defense left an impression with the Wolfpack as it forced three turnovers overall.

North Quincy's defense squashed the Wolfpacks' scoring drives in the first half, stalling two of them at the Red Raiders' 17 and 8 yard line. Boston Latin quarterback Griffin Li completed 5-of-6 passes for 48 yards during the drive, the biggest coming when he hit Michael Litto with a 14-yard strike for a first down at the North Quincy 1. The North Quincy defense held tough and Boston Latin couldn't push it in on four tries. Co-captain Ryan Manning sacked Li for a loss of seven to end the Wolfpack surge.

Mark Monahan got to Li later in the quarter and hauled him down for an eight-yard loss and the ensuing punt was blocked and recovered by Tom Koch at the Boston Latin 33. North Quincy got on the board two plays later when Layden connected with Chris Donaghey down the left sideline for a 33-yard score. Kieran O'Driscoll added the point-after kick and the Red Raiders were up 7-0 with 2:26 left in the hallf.

"Offensively, we finished drives," said Nutley. "Last week we didn't finish drives and we got a little frustrated. This week we put them in the end zone like we needed to."

North Quincy continued to make the plays on defense, this time on a fumble recovery by Donaghey to give North Quincy a first down at its own 37 with 57.6 seconds remaining until the break. Layden had a big series, rushing for 19 yards and hitting Sleiman with a 30-yard pass with the clock winding down. O'Driscoll drilled a 23-yard field goal as time ran out for a 10-0 North Quincy advantage.

Sleiman's second interception gave the Red Raiders prime field position at the Boston Latin 11 yard line and they took full advantage two plays later when Liam O'Connor broke through up the middle for a 9-yard run and a 17-0 lead with 2:33 left in the third.

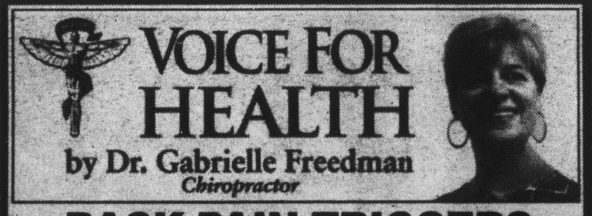

The Wolfpack had no answers in the fourth quarter, going three and out on their first possession and Sleiman picking up his third interception to give North Quincy the ball back with 1:37 remaining to clinch it.

North Quincy travels to Peabody next week for a matchup of Northeast Vo-Tech. It's a team Nutley will acquaint himself with during the week.

"I don't know anything about them to be honest. We'll sit down and watch the film. There were some things we did wrong. We couldn't move the ball in the first half. We've got to run the ball consistently. I don't think we can rely on 45 passes."

SOPHOMORE KICKER Kiernan O'Driscoll drilled a 23-yard field goal and added two extra points as the North Quincy Red Raiders blanked Boston Latin 17-0 Sept. 16 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

BACK-PAIN TRIGGERS

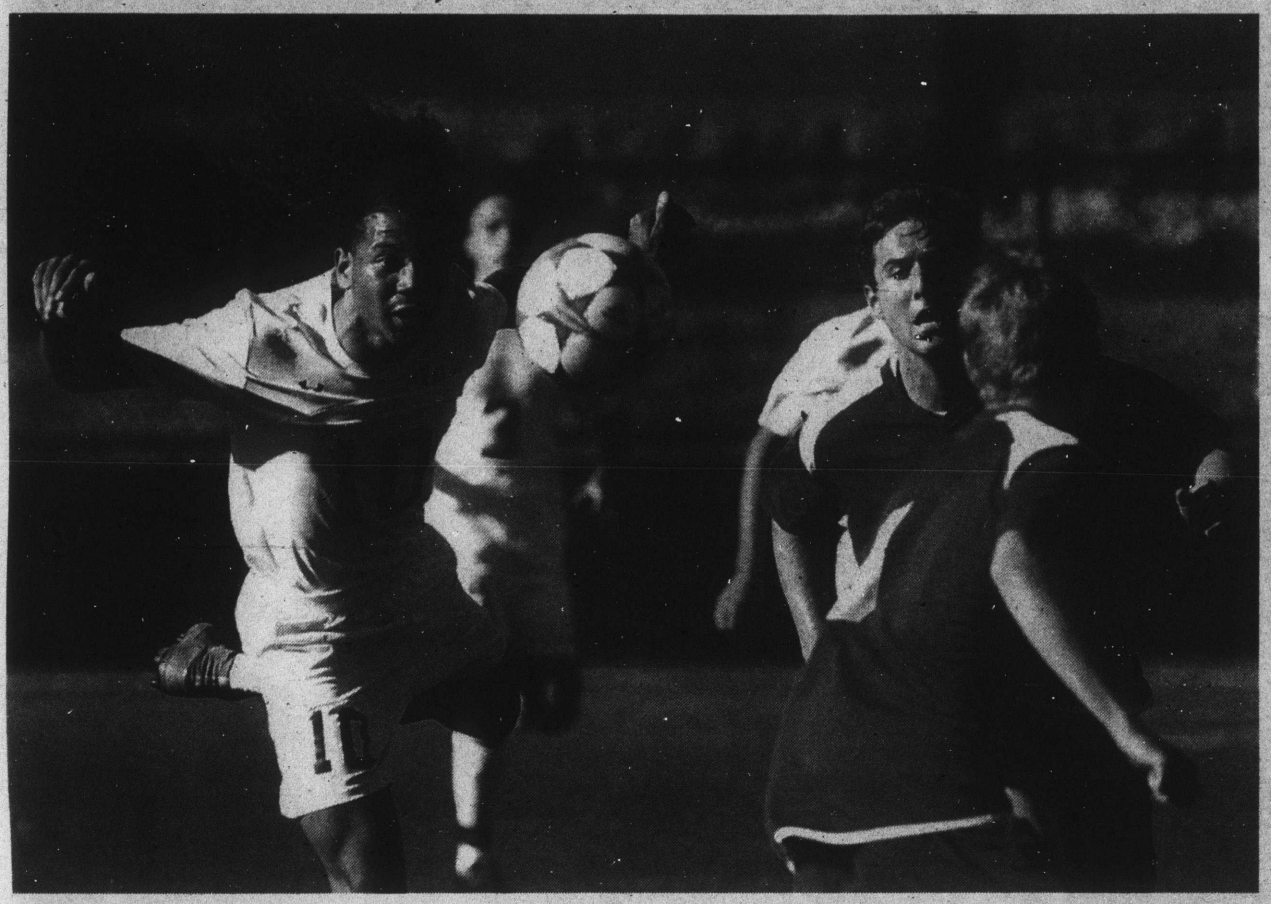

While there is a great deal of research concerning what puts a person at higher risk for back pain (i.e., being overweight and sedentary), less is known about what exactly triggers an episode of back pain. To find out, researchers recently surveyed 1,000 people who had visited 300 different clinics for the treatment of low back pain. The study participants were asked if they could identify possible triggers of their back pain that occurred within a two-hour period before their back pain had begun. To the surprise of no one, researchers found that carrying or lifting heavy loads often preceded incidents of back pain. It also turned out, however, that being fatigued or distracted also led to back-injuring accidents.

If back pain is one of your problems, the goal at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC is to help you attain optimal health quickly and safely. We provide you with a variety of tests and services aimed at achieving that goal. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are on the cutting edge of today's chiropractic technology, which allows us to care for you efficiently and effectively. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and start feeling better. Enjoy life! We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. The study mentioned above found that daily exercise helps reduce the frequency of back-pain flare-ups.

Quincy Volleyball Improves To 3-0

Presidents Sweep Pembroke

SOPHOMORE CAMRYN BURGIO and the Quincy Presidents handed Pembroke their first loss of the season sweeping the Titans 3-0 Monday night at QHS. With the win Quincy improved to 3-0. Burgio had eight kills with a pair of blocks in the victory.

Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

By JOE REARDON

Sophomore Camryn Burgio is just one of the youngsters who has assumed a varsity spot on the Quincy High girls' volleyball team and she knows the Presidents are only going to get better and gather more momentum with every game. That's what young, inexperienced teams do when they have a roster deep with talent.

Monday night was a prime example of a squad making progress as Quincy overcame falling behind early in each game before rallying and pulling off an impressive 3-0 sweep of Patriot League opponent Pembroke in the sweltering Quincy High gymnasium.

The victory put Quincy at 3-0 as it dealt the Titans (2-1) their first loss of the young season. Burgio had a big evening in just her third varsity contest with eight kills and a pair of blocks, while teammates Danielle Parry (12 assists) and Shannon Foley (15 digs) also dominated play for the Presidents. Jessie Lei came up with five big kills in the win.

Burgio, who has made a smooth transition to the Big Show after playing JV her freshman year, has bought into the Presidents' system where communicating with her teammates on and off the court is crucial. It's rare for a young team to jell so quickly, so early. "We talk about what sets we want to run and the tempo we want to play at," said Burgio. "Communication is 90 percent of it and skills are the last 10 percent. We have to start stronger at the beginning of every game. That's not much of a weakness for us though. The season's going really well. We're picking up the tempo and we're coming together as a team and building a strong bond together."

Pembroke ran out to a 4-0 lead in the first game before points from Burgio, Hillary Valenzuela, Parry and Eryn McCarthy fueled a 5-1 run to knot the contest at 5-5. The Titans retook the lead briefly, but a series of strong points at the net by Burgio highlighted a strong 14-1 spurt for Quincy on the way to a 25-17 victory.

Foley was especially strong in the second game and knocked down a handful of well-placed points. The Presidents took the lead 11-10 on a service point from McCarthy and never trailed again on the way to a commanding 25-17 win.

The Titans hung tough with Quincy in the third game, but it was the Presidents who prevailed with McCarthy picking up a pair of service points and Lei adding points down the stretch. Burgio clinched the win with the final point as Quincy completed the sweep, 25-16.

Burgio relished the chance to play against a solid team such as Pembroke with the knowledge that the higher competition is only going to make Quincy more cohesive and tougher moving forward.

"We didn't know much about them (Pembroke) because they've only played two games," Burgio said. "They were fun to play against. They were competitive and they weren't easy games for us."

Quincy head coach Jacqui Niosi, who is now in her 11th season, has a good feeling about this fall's team after graduating 10 seniors. Last year's squad made it all the way to the Div. 1 Sectional final before falling to a strong Newton North squad. Niosi, though, isn't looking that far ahead, not when the players are still getting used to playing with each other.

"They all love playing and it's just getting used to the speed of the game and playing with different people," she said. "We're starting to pull it together I think. I thought we played pretty well today. We played good defense and we were aggressive. It was nice to see. We're getting better. We're definitely a newer team. Playing at the varsity level the speed is different. The more games we play the more we trust each other and the more confident we are. Part of that comes with being able to communicate. This is only our third game of the season. It's hard to replicate the same feeling of a game in practice. We've got four games this week so hopefully that will help."

With Hingham, Silver Lake and Scituate all slated for this week, the Presidents will be able to feed off the momentum of the victory over Pembroke and continue to work on becoming smoother on the court.

"We just want to play well," said Niosi. "When you keep it simple and concentrate on playing the best you can. We may run into a team that's better than us even if we play our best. We want to give a 100 percent effort and walk off the court knowing we couldn't have done much better."

Mass Bay Credit Union Golf Tournament Oct. 3

Mass Bay Credit Union will host its second annual golf tournament Monday, Oct. 3rd at the Wollaston Golf Club in Milton.

Ciara Forde Leads Simmons Over Rivier In Women's Soccer

Sophomore midfielder Ciara Forde of Quincy netted a pair of goals and added an assist to lead the Simmons College women's soccer team in a 7-0 rout over visiting Rivier University in the Great Northeast Athletic Conference opener recently at Daly Field in Brighton.

Forde is a 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School.

The Sharks improved to 1-2-1 overall and 1-0-0 in conference play, while the Raiders fell to 0-2-1 and 0-1-0. The match followed the college's Ribbon Cutting Ceremony to officially open the Daly Athletics Complex.

Burke Awards Six More Scholarships To UMass Students

For the present school year Quincy attorney George Burke has funded six $1,000 scholarships for Quincy students to attend the University of Massachusetts: three from Quincy High School and three from North Quincy High School.

Burke has now given $176,000 in scholarships to the University of Massachusetts. He has also given over $1 million to UMass.

The George "Trigger" Burke Hall of Fame induction will take place Friday, Sept. 30.

QNQ Cross-Country Bows To Hingham

The Hingham Harbormen simply had too many athletes to handle as they took the measure of Quincy-North Quincy winning both ends 20-43 with the boys and 27-32 with the girls.

Jimmy Cannon again went wire-to-wire for the win over the 2.8 mile Hingham campus course with a time of 15:57. But Hingham took the next 12 spots to secure victory. Ryan Polsgrove(14), Aidan Golden (17), Kevin White (23) and Nick Ouellette (25) were QNQ's other scorers. Freshman Dakota Pendleton made his debut and the former Sterling Middle School star was 41st right behind senior Brian O'Connell to become the 7th man on the squad running 20:06.

The girls took three of the top five spots with Abby Murphy first again, Kara Polsgrove 3rd, and Devin Hiltunen 5th but were missing Olivia Palazzi (illness) and Ava Lapsley (injury). Good looking freshman Mairead Kelly tried to give it a go but had to stop a mile out with a sore ankle. The result was that the Harborwomen put 32 summers ahead of Eve Anderson and QNQ wound up on the wrong side of the score.

"We're talented up front - no doubt but we're relying on some untested rookies and when we don't have them we're not going to win," said QNQ Coach Jeff Hennessy. "Abby (Murphy) was awesome as were Kara (Polsgrove) and Devin (Hiltunen). Polsgrove missed some time last spring due to a stress fracture so every day she's getting better. Devin played volleyball last spring but went to cross country camp out in Pittsfield (as did Jimmy Cannon) and continues to get better." Emily Vu, another freshman, was QNQ's final scorer.

QNQ hosted Pembroke Tuesday at Pageant Field in a meet that may decide the Patriot League Fisher Division for the girls. North Quincy, as a separate program, won it in 2013 and 2014.

Panthers 20 - Apaches 12

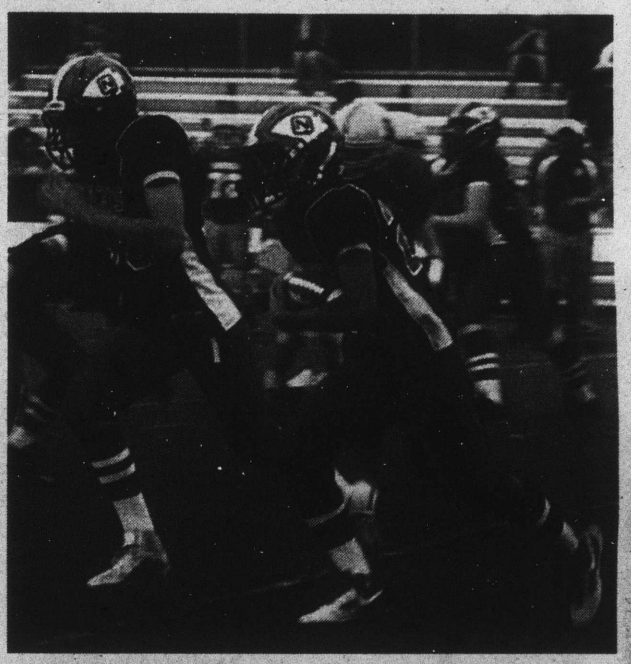

The Panthers and Apaches Freshman channeled the Spirit of some of the great gridiron battles of the 66-year rivalry. The game was tied 12-12 going into the final minutes of the contest. The Apaches scored first when RB Liam Lee scored on an 18-yard run. On the next series, Panther RB, Gabriel Rodrigues capped a long drive with a 1-yard TD run, to tie the game at 6-6. The Panthers recovered the ensuing kickoff and capitalized with a 40 yard TD run by Caleb Parsons to make it 12-6 at halftime.

Later in the second half, Apache RB Kobe Nguyen scored on a 10-yard run to tie the game 12-12. Panther RB, Parsons sealed the game with 11-yard TD run. Rodrigues rushed for the Conversion as the Panthers (1-1) defeated the Apaches 20-12 in freshman action.

The Apaches saw great performances from Max Gaudiano, Noah Baker, Nguyen, Lee, Jack Greene, Ronan Brown and Brady Craig. The Panthers victory was sparked by the efforts of Nathan Sampson, Parsons, Rodrigues, Zachary Aldoupolis, Cameron Sampson and Elijah Charles.

Sacred Heart Youth Basketball 28th Season

Registration At Quincy Catholic Academy Oct. 1

Coming off the heels of an amazing season last year in both house and travel basketball along with an inaugural summer program North Quincy's Sacred Heart Youth Basketball (SHB) will open its 28th season on Saturday, Oct. 1st.

"We are more than excited to continue to offer a very high quality basketball program to the youth of our city and can't wait to see what's in store for our kids this coming season," said SHB director Dr. Mark Jaehnig.

Arguably the largest basketball program on the South Shore and possibly the state, Sacred Heart Basketball fields teams (girls & boys) in grades K-12.

"We fielded over 100-plus teams last season across all age groups," Jaehnig said. "Our goals are simple: provide as much basketball as possible to any youth that wants to play in a well-coached and safe environment and all at a low cost. We joked last season that we broke records for gym rentals."

Sacred Heart North Quincy Basketball provides both a house and travel basketball program (grades k-12). House teams play in age appropriate divisions and travel teams play in the South Shore League, Metro West Leagues, CYO Leagues among other leagues.

SHB will be opening its season with a registration push on Saturday, Oct. 1st at the Quincy Catholic Academy from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Café, 370 Hancock St., Quincy.

"We'll have a busy October and upcoming season with basketball skills sessions planned in October followed by season starts as well as travel basketball tryouts," said Jaehnig, "and we can't wait!"

Any family interested (or if questions) can email Mike Healy at mahealy44@gmail.com or Mark Jaehnig at mcjsports7@gmail.com.

Quincy Point Restaurant To Open 50-Seat Patio

By SCOTT JACKSON

The owner of a Quincy Point restaurant has received permission to open a patio with seating for up to 50 patrons.

The Board of License Commissioners on Sept. 13 approved a request by Mark DiBona, the owner of Cagney's Restaurant at 214 Washington St., for an alteration of premises to open the new patio space.

The 1,200 square foot patio will be located in what is now a driveway space off Washington Street next to Cagney's and the breakfast place located in the same building. DiBona said he expects to spend $75,000 to convert the space into a patio and it will take about three weeks to do so.

DiBona said the success of Cagney's 25th anniversary celebration in July – which included a temporary outdoor space on Washington Street – led him to pursue the construction of a permanent patio.

"We had great feedback from the neighborhood, great feedback from patrons," DiBona said. "It worked out well for everybody."

Outdoor patios are allowed to remain open in Quincy between Patriots Day and Columbus Day, which falls on Oct. 10 this year. DiBona said he hopes to open the patio this season to get a better understanding of what changes may be needed before next year. He could ask the license board for permission open it in October after Columbus Day.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the chairman of the license board, said food service on patios must end at 10 p.m. each night – Cagney's plans to offer a limited menu outdoors – and the patio must be cleared by 11 p.m.

Cagney's will be allowed to play background music on the patio, but no live entertainment or television screens will be allowed there. Scheele said only three restaurants in the city with patio spaces have TVs, and said they could lead to patrons being too loud.

"My concern is next year we have a Sunday night Patriots game in early September at 8 o'clock at night and people are out yapping," Scheele said. "I sympathize with the neighbors on that aspect because I scream at the TV all the time when I'm watching them."

DiBona said those conditions were fair.

Scheele also asked DiBona if he had consider starting on a smaller scale – setting up a handful of tables on the Washington Street sidewalk – to see how successful outdoor seating would be for a season before deciding to renovate the 1,200 square foot space.

"I hate to see you invest $80,000 and not have people be out there," Scheele said.

DiBona said his staff would be able to handle the new patio space next to the restaurant. The sidewalk directly in front of Cagney's, he added, would not be the ideal location for outdoor seating while the proposed location would separated from the public with fencing and shrubbery.

"I'm confident we can run it well – my staff can handle it well," DiBona said. "I actually think it's less invasive where I'm proposing than on the sidewalk.

"When you're on that sidewalk, I'm trying to say this as politely as possible, there is a lot of foot traffic and it's not you and your wife walking by at 9 o'clock at night. It's not going to be the most idealistic place to sit – in front of Cagney's on the sidewalk – and have a nice glass of wine with your wife."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest voiced her support for DiBona's request at the board meeting, noting Cagney's is located in a business b zoning area.

"This is an allowed business use and this is an opportunity for this business owner to optimize their business use," Laforest said, adding that she has received no complaints about noise at other outdoor patios that have opened in her ward.

"I've permitted about five of these patios for businesses in my district… Noise has been a concern in every single board meeting. I have yet myself to receive one complaint now that all of these have been implemented."

Kerry Byrne, a marketing and hospitality consultant for the city, backed the proposal as well.

"Open air hospitality, I think, is essential to the image and perceived quality of life of any community," he said. "Livening up that corridor between Quincy Center and the South Shore, I think, makes Quincy just look better and more livable, a more vibrant place to live, which is good for anyone who lives here."

Also in favor of the proposal was John Rodephele, a Grenwold Road resident.

"I'm not usually in support of anything, but I'm in support of this because Cagney's is a good neighbor," he stated.

Paul Chenette of Chenette Plumbing, located at 204 Washington St., said he was "strongly opposed" to the plan. He was concerned about several issues including smoking on the patio and the loss of the driveway,

"It's going to be disruptive," Chenette said. "There is going to be drinking, there is going to be commotion and there is going to be smoking out there."

David Chenette, Paul's brother and a Moffat Road resident, likewise voiced his opposition to the project, as did Martin Gordon of Rock Island Road.

Conor Sullivan, an Edwards Street resident, opposed the proposal in a letter to the licensing board, saying he and his wife were concerned about noise.

"My house is set on a hill on Edwards Street and it is noisy enough with all of the traffic on Washington Street, which is below my house. The echo can be really loud at times and our bedroom is in the back of the house near Washington Street," Sullivan said in the letter, which Scheele read out loud.

"My wife and I really enjoy Cagney's, but the added outside noise would be too much."

In other business Sept. 13, the Board of License Commissioners:

Approved a special use permit for the Let's Stop Cancer Foundation for a 5K family fun run in Squantum on Oct. 23.

Approved a special use permit for Little Hearts, Inc. on Oct. 22 at The Irish Pub, 51 Billings Rd.

Approved a special use wine and malt license for the Quincy Historical Society's Sept. 29 fundraiser, which will be held at the Adams Academy at 8 Adams St.

Approved a transfer of the retail alcohol license for Old Colony Liquors at 637 Southern Artery. The license will be transferred from Fouad Yasmine to his son, Edy.

Received a notification from the state lottery commission about a Keno display at the 7-Eleven at 721 Hancock St., and did not object to its installation there.

review of the project, said the proposed stormwater drainage system would meet the city's requirements.

"We're confident the storm drainage system will work adequately on this project," he said.

The self-storage facility was one of two projects to receive approval from the Planning Board Sept. 14.

The board also approved a proposal by Steven Baylis, a Quincy Fire Department captain, to construct eight townhouse condominiums at 264R West Street.

Baylis' proposal still requires approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals. The next ZBA hearing on the matter is slated for Sept. 27.

Also on Sept. 14, the Planning Board agreed to postpone to Nov. 9 a public hearing on a FedEx distribution center proposed for what is now a Boston Scientific warehouse on Commander Shea Boulevard.

While the continuance was granted, the Planning Board did attach a comment asking the applicant to be prepared to present at the Nov. 9 meeting or withdraw the proposal without prejudice; if not, the board could reject the plan, which would prevent the applicant from re-filing for two years.

passersby on the very busy stretch of Washington Street. "We want to promote green energy," he said. "I'm very excited that the Mayor has championed this green effort. I first learned about the Solarize program in a letter from the Mayor."

Said Quincy Energy and Sustainability Director Shelly Dein, "Solarize Quincy raised awareness of how feasible solar electricity systems are for many people and businesses who might not have considered it before. More than 320 properties had site visits, of which about one-third decided to install solar through this program. Collectively, almost three quarters of a megawatt of clean electricity will be generated annually by the Solarize Quincy systems, replacing electricity that would have been generated by fossil fuels. This is saving the property owners on their electric bills, and reducing air pollution and greenhouse gases."

Although the Solarize Quincy program ended last year, the cost of solar panels has plummeted in the past decade, and continues dropping year by year. "Even if you can't get your panels through the city program anymore, solar is still a great deal for many property owners," said David Reich, board chair of Quincy Climate Action Network, which provided the bulk of the volunteer hours that made the Solarize effort possible. "It's definitely in your interest to get your property assessed for solar."

Late October Opening For Fuji At West of Chestnut

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 128-seat restaurant offering sushi and other Japanese dishes with a Cantonese influence, as well as alcoholic beverages made with freshly squeezed juices, is set to open at West of Chestnut in Quincy Center by the end of next month.

Fuji at West of Chestnut is slated to open in a 5,000 square foot retail space on the first floor of 1420 Hancock St. by late October, Tony Liang, a partner and chief operating officer of the JP Fuji Group, said at the Sept. 13 meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

The licensing board approved JP Fuji Group's request to transfer the all alcohol license held by Fuji 1546 – located at 1546 Hancock St. – to the new space inside West of Chestnut.

Liang said Fuji 1546 would close in October before the new restaurant opens a block away. The JP Fuji group plans to open a restaurant with a new concept at 1546 Hancock St. in December, he said, and could be back before the license board for that proposal next month.

The JP Fuji Group presently owns 10 area restaurants – six in Quincy, two in Cambridge and one each in Boston and Somerville. Liang said Fuji at West of Chestnut would be among the group's best.

"We tried to make this one of the best Fujis we're going to have," he said. "This is going to be our eleventh location and we take all of our experience and also our design expertise to make sure this is basically the best looking location we have."

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the chairman of the licensing board, said he was impressed with the work done by the JP Fuji Group.

"Anytime you guys have done anything in the city, it's always been absolutely beautiful," he said. "I can't say enough how impressed I am with the way you guys clean up buildings and make them absolutely beautiful up in North Quincy and down here in Quincy Center."

The operators of the restaurant have also proposed adding patio seating for up to 20 guests on the Hancock Street sidewalk, which would bring the capacity up to 148 guests. The patio requires further review, and could only be open between Patriots Day in April and Columbus Day in October under the city's regulations.

The new Fuji is the second restaurant at West of Chestnut to receive an all alcohol license from the city.

In June, the license board granted a new license to KKatie's Burger Bar. The 100-seat restaurant will open this fall in a 2,600 square foot space at 1440 Hancock St. This would be the fourth KKatie's – the restaurant has locations open in Marshfield, Plymouth and Hyannis.

The developers behind West of Chestnut – Gate Residential and Quincy Mutual – have also reached an agreement to bring Orangetheory Fitness to the site in a 3,200 square foot space, and plan to open a café/bakery as well.

The $60 million West of Chestnut project includes two six-story buildings in the 1400 block of Hancock Street in Quincy. The buildings have a combined 12,400 square feet of street-level retail space and 169 residential apartments.

Construction of the project began in April 2015. Tenants began moving into the apartments in the first building, facing Hancock Street, this May, and into the apartments at the building on the corner of Chestnut Street and Cottage Way this month.

Preparing For A Disability Interview

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

When a person becomes disabled, it can be a very stressful time in their life. There are many questions and unknowns when you have to transition out of the workforce due to medical issues.

While an employer may offer short or long-term disability, most people faced with a disability will file for benefits with Social Security.

Securing today and tomorrow

If you're facing life with a disability and don't know where to start, we encourage you to visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov/disabilityssi. You can apply for benefits on our website; it's the most convenient way. Additionally, you can contact us at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) or visit your local office if you wish to apply for disability benefits. When applying for benefits, you should be prepared to answer a number of questions including:

When your conditions became disabling;

- Dates you last worked;
- The names, addresses, phone numbers, and dates of visits to your doctors;
- The names of medications that you take and medical tests you've had; and
- Marital information.

In addition, if you plan on applying for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability payments, for people with low income who haven't paid enough in Social Security taxes to be covered, we will ask you questions about:

- Your current living arrangement, including who lives there and household expenses;
- All sources of income for you and your spouse, if applicable; and
- The amount of your resources, including bank account balances, vehicles, and other investments.

You can view our disability starter kit at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits.htm.

Remember, we are there when you might be faced with one of the hardest obstacles of your life. Social Security helps secure today and tomorrow with critical benefits for people with severe disabilities, not just during retirement. Learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Holiday Season At Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills

As the autumn Jewish holiday season approaches, Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills invites interested individuals and families in the surrounding area to join us in observing and celebrating the various holidays. High Holiday services begin with Erev Rosh Hashanah on Oct. 2, with full services on the 3rd and 4th under the direction of spiritual leader Rabbi Alfred Benjamin and Cantor Saralee Shrell-Fox. There will be separate children's services and a Community Family Service on Sept. 3, with childcare and children's activities each day.

New this year will be a High Holiday Highlight Service on Monday, Oct. 3, led by Rabbi Benjamin from 3:30-4:30 p.m. No ticket is required for this service filled with celebration, songs, key prayers, Aliyot to the Torah, and the sounding of the Shofar.

Tashlich, the symbolic casting away of sins on Rosh Hashanah, will also be on the 3rd at 5 p.m. at Turner's Pond on Central Ave., Milton, followed by a dairy pot-luck dinner at the nearby home of a member. All are invited to participate (bring your own bread).

After Yom Kippur on Sept. 23, other holidays including Sukkot will follow, with special family-oriented holiday events, such as eating in the Sukkah and parading with the Torah scrolls on Simchat Torah.

All services and activities at Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills are open to the entire Jewish community, and will be held in the synagogue sanctuary at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge St.), Milton. There is limited parking for the elderly and handicapped at the synagogue, with excess parking available at the rear of St. Elizabeth Church on nearby Randolph Ave. For security reasons, non-members interested in attending High Holiday services or other events are encouraged to call the Congregation office at 617-698-3394.

The Rabbi Jerome Weistrop Religious School, which provides small, twice-a-week classes, pre-school Story Hour, holiday family events, field trips and more, is accepting applications during the month of September. Jewish children of all grade levels are encouraged to enroll and participate in a quality Jewish education.

Families interested in the religious school or the synagogue are invited to attend our Open House on Sunday, Sept. 25, 10 a.m.-Noon, and meet Rabbi Benjamin, Education Director Nancy Mollitor, and other congregants. First-time visitors who call ahead to attend the Open House may receive complimentary seats for one High Holiday service.

Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills is an egalitarian synagogue and welcomes interfaith families. For further information, please call the office at 617-698-3394, email: office@BethShalomBlueHills.org or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

Mayor Appoints Paul Franz New Park Director

The Department led a broad renaissance of the city's park system, restoring, expanding and creating recreational spaces across the City.

Among the projects Franz managed were the full reconstruction of Adams Field and Mitchell/McCoy field, improvements to Pageant Field, the restoration of Upper Merrymount Park and new fountain installation; the reconstruction of the field at Veterans' Memorial Stadium; the creation of new passive recreational space at Faxon Park; the construction of the track facility at Faxon Field; and the reconstruction of Cavanagh Field and Joseph W. Koch field at Atlantic Middle School.

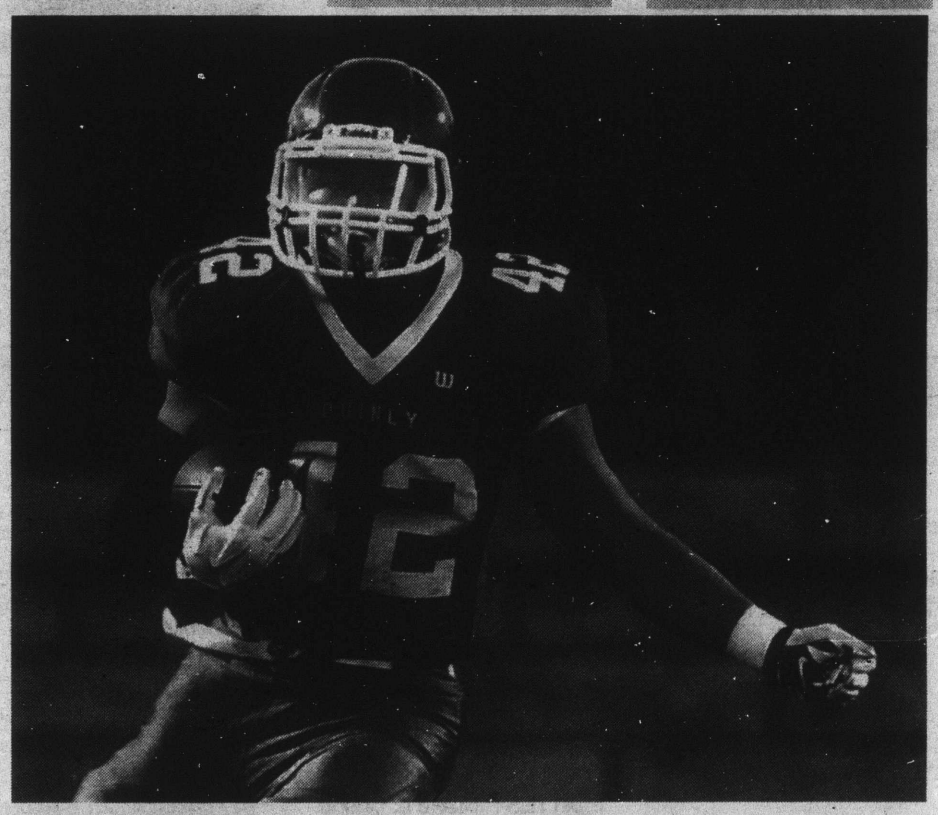

This year, Franz oversaw the completion of the new park at Quincy High School; the reconstruction of Varsity Field and the overhaul of Fore River Field – which is ongoing today.

Franz lives in Hamilton with his wife, Lori. Their son Cody is a senior at Gordon College.

The position's salary is $101,777, and a replacement for Franz's current position has not been named.

Quincy has 52 municipal park locations, 10 municipal beach areas and numerous open space areas. There are currently 35 basketball courts, 23 tennis courts, 27 little league/softball fields, eight regulation baseball diamonds, five soccer / lacrosse fields, three football fields, a skateboard park and an in-line skate-facility.

Eleven of the City's park locations are "passive" parks without recreational facilities. These parks can be used for walking, sitting or just plain relaxing. There are also two family picnic facilities offered by the city during the spring and summer months.

Blessing Of Animals Oct. 10 At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its annual Blessing of the Animals Sunday, Oct. 30. Animal companions of all kinds are welcome to attend the 10:30 a.m. worship service.

"The worship service commemorates and celebrates pets – both present and past," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor.

Everyone is encouraged to bring a photo or drawing of their deceased pets, which will placed on the altar. In addition, those with pets who are comfortable in unfamiliar surroundings are encouraged to bring their pet(s) with them to church.

"We've had dogs, cats, and guinea pigs. Two of the dogs even wore their 'Sunday best' collars," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden. "We do ask, however, that all dogs be on a leash and all other pets be in carriers."

Because this year the event will take place the day before Halloween, children, adults and pets are encouraged to attend worship dressed in their Halloween costumes.

For more information, call the church at 617-773-3319.

Sunday Morning Church On Wollaston Beach Continues

Beach Church will continue on Wollaston Beach through Sunday, Oct. 2.

A combined ministry of Christ Church Mobil Ministries and Union Congregational Church, the services are held on the beach between the Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs at 8 a.m.

This Sunday the Rev. Martha Swanson will speak about "The Trapped Clam Digger," the true story of Armand Gallant who found himself trapped on the Merrymount flats on a foggy afternoon and was saved by the traffic on Quincy Shore Drive.

Rev. Swanson will apply the lesson of this true story to her theme of listening for God's call to salvation.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin
(Never Known to Fail)

O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendour of Heaven. Blessed mother of the son of God, Immaculate Virgin assist me in this necessity, O Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. This prayer must be said for three days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. D.A. 9/22

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cosmic changes create a potential for disruptions in your travel plans. In the meantime, you might want to consider shifting your focus to another area of your life that needs attention.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for beauty-loving Bovines to enjoy something special for the senses. It will restore your spirit and return you to the workaday world ready for the next challenge.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With your planetary ruler, Mercury, going retrograde, you might want to slow down the pace in pursuing some of your projects. Rushing things could be counterproductive.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Tensions begin to ease in those once-testy relationships. This helps create a more positive aspect all around. Expect to hear news that could lead you to rethink a recent decision.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The pace of activity that had slowed last week now begins to pick up. This is good news for Leos and Leonas who have career-building plans that need to be put into operation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Venus offers encouragement to romance-seeking Virgos who are ready to get up, get out and meet more people, one of whom could be that long-sought soul mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An ongoing problem with a co-worker might need to be sent to arbitration. Get all your facts together so that you have a solid base from which to make your argument.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You are usually decisive about most matters. But you might want to defer your decision-making this week until you get more facts. Someone is holding out on you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That quiet period is ending, and a new burst of activity creates some problems at the workplace. But things are soon resolved, and everything goes back to normal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Relationships could be either helpful or hurtful as you pursue your career goals. You might have to make some difficult choices depending on what your priorities are.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might still have some doubts about a career move that could involve a lot of travel. If so, continue to check things out until you feel secure about making a decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Love rules, as Venus continues to exercise her cosmic influence on both single and attached Pisces. New developments might cause you to change your travel plans.

BORN THIS WEEK: You often think of others before you consider your own needs. You enjoy helping people and would make a fine teacher or caregiver.

Waste Program Before Council Next Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch hopes to present his proposal to make sweeping changes to the way trash and recyclables are picked up in Quincy to the City Council in October, and will launch a public education campaign ahead of the anticipated July 2017 start of the new program.

Koch said earlier this month he wanted a broad overhaul of how the city's waste is hauled away curbside. Notably, the plan would include the purchase of 96-gallon containers for recyclables and 64-gallon ones for trash, which the city would distribute to households.

The mayor, in a recent interview, said he hopes to go before the City Council next month to present various options his administration is looking at for the new waste removal program. Koch wants both the council and the public on board with the plan.

"I expect to be before the council sometime in October, and that meeting would

Schools Transitioning To New Science Standards

By TOM GORMAN

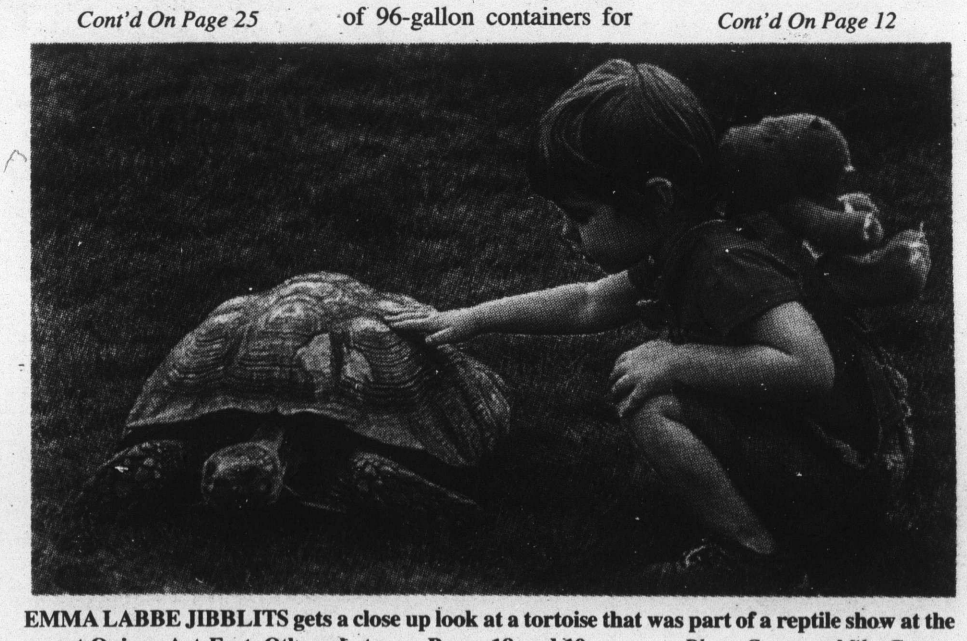

School officials are rolling out a new science, technology and engineering program this year in all grade levels based on new standards that focuses more on the natural world and a hands-on approach.

The district's Senior Director of Curriculum Madeline Roy presented an overview of the transition to the new science, technology and engineering standards to the school committee on Sept. 21. The new program is based on the state's standards that is being implemented in all grade levels this year. Central Middle School grade 8 science teacher Michelle Cunniff and Montclair School grade 5 teacher Taylor Dennehey joined Roy in the presentation.

"This is exciting and invigorating," Roy said of the new standards. "We want to expose children to future careers in science."

According to Roy, the

Three Police Promotions, Three New Officers

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Great Hall of the McIntyre Government Center was filled with police officers and family members as the three newest members of the Quincy Police Department were sworn in, and three other officers received promotions.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo swore in the three new patrol officers – Justin Ruggerio, Evan Sorgi and Erin Wells – and the three promoted officers the morning of Sept. 22.

Sorgi spent two years with the Braintree Police Department and Wells served in the Hanover Police Department for ten years. Sorgi's father, Timothy, is a lieutenant with the Quincy Police Department. Wells' father, Richard, served nine years as Milton's police chief before retiring this year and her stepmother, Pauline, is a member of the Cambridge Police Department.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said Sorgi and Wells would complete six to eight weeks of field training with Quincy officers. Ruggiero started Monday at the MBTA Transit Police Academy on Sea Street, which he will attend for six months before field training with Quincy police.

The three promoted officers include Gregory Goyette, now a captain; Matthew Tobin, now a lieutenant; and Karyn Barkas, now a sergeant.

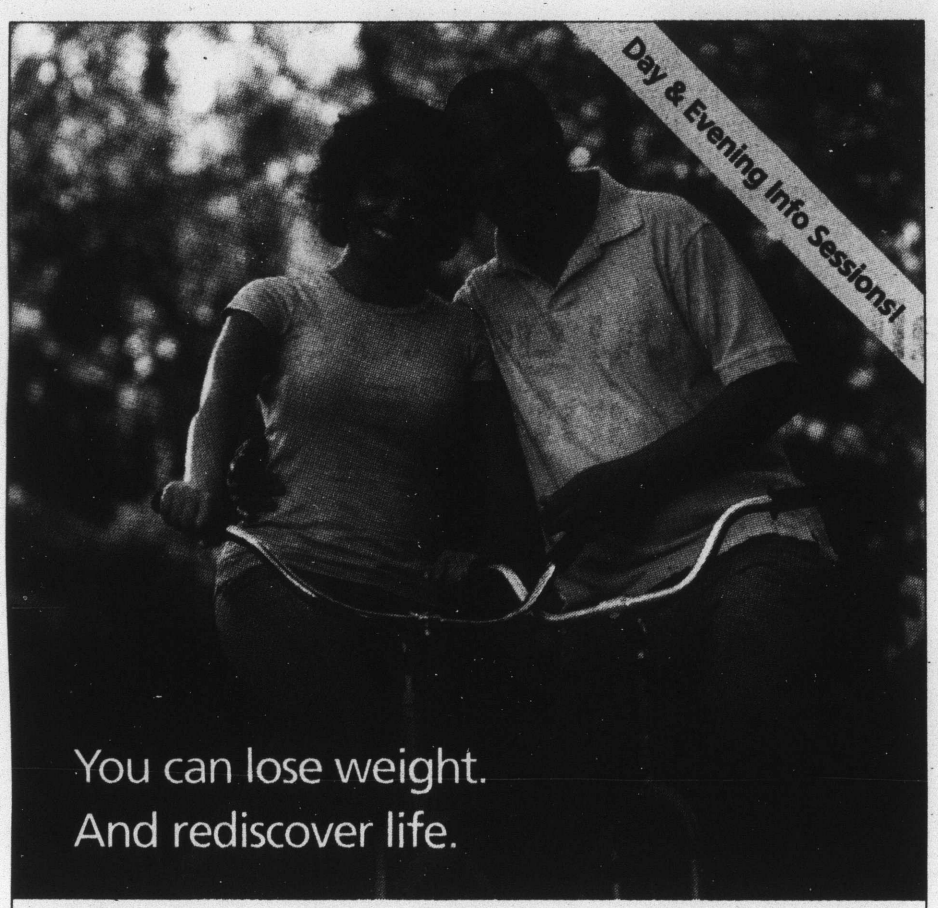

Goyette joined the Police Department in May 1997. He was promoted to sergeant in December 2004 and to lieutenant in July 2013. His father, Norman, was a lieutenant in the department.

Capt. Goyette replaces Capt. Allan Gillan who recently retired after 30 years with the department.

Tobin joined the department in August 2003 and was promoted to sergeant in November 2004.

Barkas was appointed to the department in December 1998.

Quincy Schools Testing Water

Samples Being Collected By Custodians, Public Buildings Staff

By TOM GORMAN

Quincy Public Schools will be testing drinking water for lead levels in all its 20 school buildings over the next few weeks.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro informed the school committee on Sept. 22 that testing began two days earlier and will conclude on Saturday, Oct. 22. The water samples are being collected by custodians and the public buildings staff from all water sources in the schools including fountains and food preparation areas.

Twelve schools were tested last week and seven were to be done this week. The last school will be tested on Saturday, Oct. 22.

"It's going very well," DeCristofaro said.

A letter was sent to all students, parents and staff explaining the procedure and outlining the schedule.

All testing is being conducted during the early morning hours, between 5 a.m. and 7 a.m. on school days. A few schools are being tested on Saturdays.

"There will be no interruption to the school day," said DeCristofaro.

The superintendent explained that results of the tests will be shared as soon as they become available.

Quincy is participating in a statewide program to test lead levels in schools' drinking water. About 1,000 public schools and childcare centers in the Commonwealth are being tested.

In April, Gov. Charlie Baker announced that $2 million from the Massachusetts Clean Water Trust would fund technical assistance by the state Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to school districts in testing drinking water. The water samples are being tested by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Technical Assistance Team.

Lead levels in drinking water that exceed 15 parts per billion are considered unsafe. Officials say that internal plumbing in buildings is usually to blame for high lead levels. Copper can also enter drinking water through internal pipes and copper levels will also be tested.

Last week, the Bernazzani, Montclair, Sterling Middle, Atlantic Middle, Wollaston, Atherton Hough, Parker, Amelio Della Chiesa, Beechwood Knoll, Broad Meadows Middle, Snug Harbor and Squantum schools were tested. This week, Point Webster Middle, Merrymount, Central Middle, Clifford Marshall, and Lincoln-Hancock were to be tested.

This Saturday, samples

New Sterling School Meeting Thursday

The Quincy City Council Finance Committee will meet tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. in the Sterling Middle School Auditorium to discuss approval of a $59 million appropriation for the new Sterling Middle School Project Scope and Budget Agreement.

Representatives from the Sterling Middle School Committee and the project architects will attend the meeting and answer Finance Committee members' questions on the next step in the process of building a new Sterling Middle School.

Residents and parents are invited and encouraged to attend the meeting and hear about the project.

"There is no question we need a new Sterling Middle School," said Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci. "This is a unique opportunity for us to directly improve the quality of education that our neighborhood kids receive by giving them a building with 21st century technology."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, chairman of the Finance Committee, said, "It's rare for the council to meet outside of City Hall, but we believe this is an historic meeting that is better held in the neighborhood."

Residents with questions about this or any other matter can call Croall at 617-376-1352 or email bcroall@quincyma.gov and Palmucci at 617-376-1354 or email bpalmucci@quincyma.gov.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

LIGHTNING AND RAINBOWS

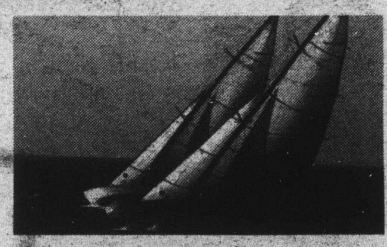

Opal, October's birthstone, is unusual in that, unlike most other gemstones, it is non-crystalline. This precious form of hardened silica gel displays flashes of color (iridescence), which is caused by the way that the regular arrangement of tiny silica spheres diffracts light. The larger the spheres are, the greater the range of colors. White opal features a white background against which the gemstone displays its captivating colors. Black opal shows a dark background. Both are usually cut in the domed "en cabochon" manner that best shows off their amazing show of light and color. It is a look that virtually no other gemstone can match, and one which fanciers of opal would be scarcely be likely to trade.

Opal is the stone given to celebrate 14th marriage anniversary. Opal has always been associated with love and passion, as well as desire. Because opals contain some water, they should never be stored in a bank or vault for long periods of time because of the dehumidifiers used in many vaults. Just when it looks as though Waylon's universe is exploding, something happens to bring it all together again, and it is, without a doubt, One Awesome Thing.

Pick up your copy of Waylon: One Awesome Thing by Sara Pennypacker in the Children's Room to read before the meeting. Any questions? Call 617-376-2411 and ask to speak with Ms. Cronin.

Scenes From Yesterday

POST OFFICE SQUARE, SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920 Squantum postcard showing the intersection of Park Avenue, East Squantum and Dorchester Streets. At the time this was known as Post Office Square. On the right was Watt's Variety Store where the Squantum Post Office was located for over 30 years. That building has been enlarged and now is the home of the DiMattia Sails Company and the Maureen Glynn Real Estate office. The building on the left was built in 1915 by John R. Nelson. He was the agent for the large Lillie B. Titus estate that had been divided into almost 1,000 house lots. Nelson's real estate office was in the lower right storefront. The second floor was a hall for meetings and was the site of the first Catholic Mass in Squantum. The hall was later converted into apartments and in 1963 a much larger apartment building replaced this one. The original cornerstone: "Nelson Building 1915" is made of Quincy granite and is on the Park Avenue side of the present building. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Yakoo, Red Raiders Foster School Spirit

Readers Forum

Sherrie Noble's recent op-ed regarding the Yakoo logo and "Red Raiders" team name was puzzling, at the least. As Steve Verhault's reply (Sept. 8) demonstrated, it was unfounded.

Thoughts I took away from Ms. Noble's missive:

I found it odd that Ms. Noble would frame her introduction in the context of national violence. Virtually none of that kind has occurred in Quincy this year, least of all that inspired by the Yakoo or term "Red Raiders."

Ms. Noble defines stereotyping and asserts that such harms human relationships and the people in them. True enough, but she fails to demonstrate any supposed damage that has been done in this instance. She proves no learned disrespect to Native Americans by students in Quincy. Quoting activists like Robert Roche doesn't quite do it for me.

Absent from Ms. Noble's argument are details from the 1993 ruling on a complaint initiated by a North Quincy student at the dawn of political correctness. After considerable investigation among students, MCAD learned that instead of demeaning their view of Native Americans, the Yakoo and "Red Raiders" name actually fostered school spirit and were therefore viewed with pride.

The MCAD ruling and Steve Verhault's quoted poll results show that allegations like Ms. Noble's and other activists often fail to prove defamatory INTENT of symbols or by their creators. I'm sure that Ms. Noble's intentions are kind and pure but in the case of the Yakoo and "Red Raiders", she loses sight of her own admonition that "That was then, this is now."

Big Tobacco 'Sweet Talking' Kids To Lifetime Of Addiction

As the school year begins, our thoughts turn to what we hope young people will learn this year. As parents, teachers and others concerned with health, let's be aware that youth are being targeted by the tobacco industry. Big Tobacco is sweet talking our kids with products that are sweet, cheap, and easy to get. Fruit and candy flavors in little cigars, chewing tobacco, hookahs, electronic cigarettes and e-liquids attract youth and contain varying amounts of nicotine that can lead to nicotine addiction.

In 2009, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration wisely banned flavored cigarettes (other than menthol) because of mounting evidence that the tobacco industry was using flavors to market to youth. Since then, the tobacco industry has been producing other tobacco products using the same flavor chemicals found in candy and soft drink products like Life Savers, Jolly Ranchers and Kool Aid. Yet they are NOT harmless. The tobacco industry is using these flavors to attract youth to products that are highly addictive because they contain nicotine.

In fact, the U.S Surgeon General found that tobacco companies use flavorings in smokeless tobacco products as part of a "graduation strategy" that encourages new users to start with flavored products with lower levels of nicotine and work their way up to more addictive products. Now the tobacco industry is circumventing the federal ban on flavored cigarettes by producing these other flavored products to establish a new route to addicting youth to nicotine.

What can you do? Talk with young people about this. Make sure they know that these tobacco products contain nicotine and are not harmless. Back-to-school season is a time when youth are learning new and important information for the first time; as concerned adults, let's make sure they learn that flavored tobacco products contain nicotine.

For more information about these products and to learn how you can take action, visit GetOutraged.org or contact me at lswenson@baystatecs.org or 857-939-4528. Big Tobacco is trying to sweet talk our kids into a lifetime of tobacco addiction.

Squantum Park Purchase Bill Will Be Filed

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy Mayor David S. McIntosh and Boston Mayor John B. Hynes have agreed to jointly sponsor a bill in the legislature through which Quincy would be able to purchase Squantum Park for $25,000.

This agreement was reached during a conference in Mayor Hynes' office in Boston City Hall, arranged by Joseph P. McDonough of Quincy, a candidate for the state senate.

The purpose of the bill is to enable Quincy to pay more than the maximum, which the city is allowed to expend for land, which is the assessed valuation plus 25 percent. The assessed valuation of Squantum Park, which includes about 11 acres, is approximately $11,000. This valuation plus 25 percent would restrict Quincy to paying a maximum of about $15,000.

The bill, as written, would bypass the Boston City Council. If passed by the legislature, the Quincy City Council would have to appropriate the necessary funds.

COUNCIL APPROVES NEW WAGE SCALES FOR CITY WORKERS

The Finance Committee of the City Council established policies to shape the new wage differential scale for city employees proposed by the job evaluation committee.

The Council also voted spot increases to six employees whose wages were considered so unfairly out of line that immediate action was deemed justified. These increases involving two carpenters, a painter, a radio technician and two machine operators, were immediately effective.

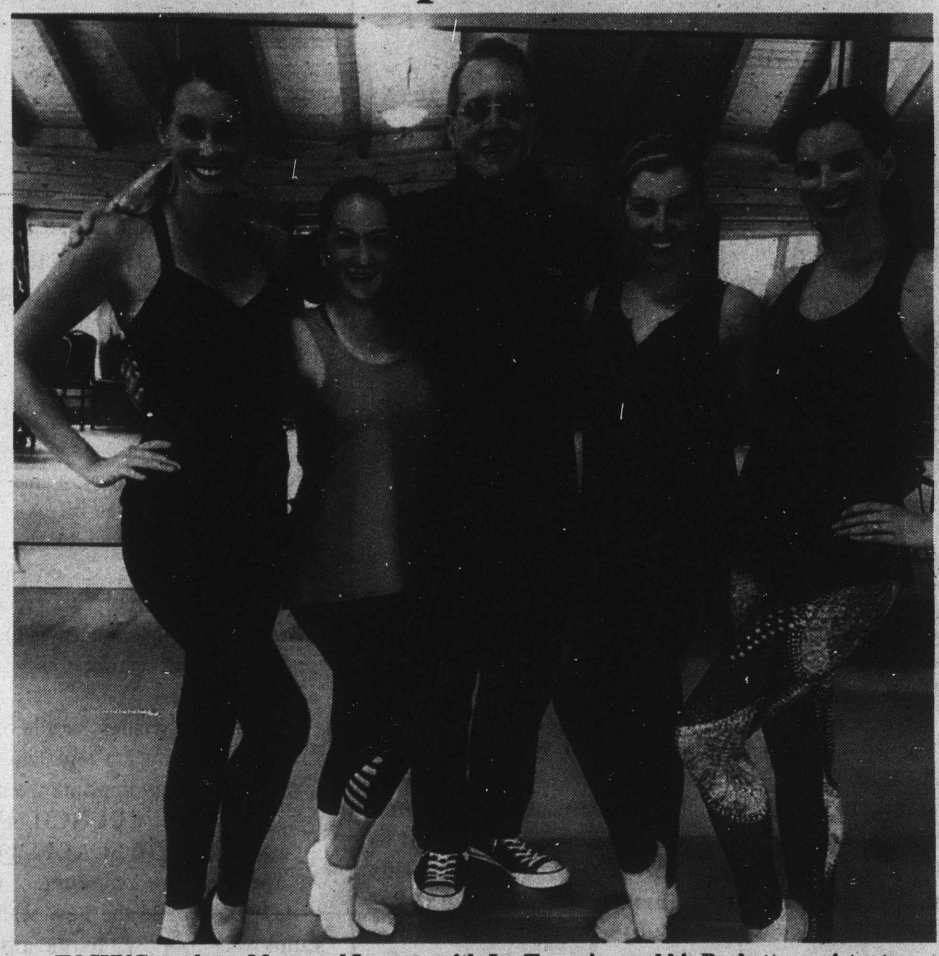

Councillor David J. Crowley protested that the appointment of the job evaluation committee by the city manager was contrary to union practices. Councillor Crowley contended that employees should have the right to set up their own grievance committee and not management.

In Sync Center of the Arts has begun their 21st season of music and dance classes. With classes and programs for age 3-teens, In Sync is focused on giving children a creative outlet and quality programs.

This past July, owner and director Teri Mangiaratti traveled to Los Angeles to give a motivational seminar to studio owners during a Hollywood Connections workshop. Mangiaratti also spent a week in Phoenix, AZ running an international conference for studio owners as a founding member of the new International Dance Entrepreneurs Association (IDEA).

In Sync Center of the Arts is one of the first studios to belong to IDEA in the US and the first in Massachusetts. Age appropriate movement, costuming and respectable business practices are all a part of the IDEA organization code of ethics. Parents can find out more at www.ideadance.org

"I am honored to be on the ground floor of the IDEA organization, both as a founding board member and a member studio" Mangiaratti said.

In Sync instructors participated in a variety of continuing education opportunities this past summer. In Sync Jazz instructors Kelli and Mary attended a Jazz Intensive weekend at the DanceLife Retreat Center in Norton, learning from the masters in the jazz field, Joe Tremaine, Jackie Sleight and Derrick Schrader. Hip Hop instructors Izzy and Stephanie attended a Hip Hop Intensive weekend at the DanceLife Retreat Center studying under Tricia Gomez and Geo Hublea, both on the cutting edge of hip hop dance.

Amy Enos, director of In Sync's Me Too Special Needs program, traveled to New Jersey to participate in the certification program "Rhythm Works" specifically focused for dancers with learning differences and special needs. Ballet Director Maggie Crowley, was in Maryland to study with the founder of "Progressing Ballet Technique" who was in US from Australia to work with ballet teachers from around the globe. The entire In Sync staff of teachers and student interns participated in a special workshop with master teacher Julie Kay Stallcup, director of Revolution Dance Center in LA. Stallcup flew all the way across the country to train the In Sync staff in new tap techniques for the elementary aged dancer right at In Sync Center of the Arts studio.

"The entire staff is so excited to share what they have learned with our students and help bring the arts to Quincy in new and exciting ways," Mangiaratti said. "It is so very important that my teachers continue to educate themselves in order to bring the latest in the dance field to our students. For us, this is what we need to stay motivated and kick off the year inspired."

In Sync welcome Frances Jancaterino onto their staff this year. Ms. Frances, as her students call her, is a well-established dance master in her field. She is a 35-year member of the Dance Teachers Club of Boston and former chairperson of their Dance Education Training Course. Ms. Frances continues to serve on the board or the Greater Brockton Dance Teachers Association along with In Sync director, Teri Mangiaratti. Frances is the former owner of The Frances Osborne School or Dance and Total Attraction. In Sync is very happy to have Ms. Frances teaching their tap classes this year.

Conevery Bolton Valencius Receives Harvard's Radcliffe Institute Fellowship

The Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study at Harvard University has selected Quincy resident and Boston College professor Conevery Bolton Valencius to be a Radcliffe Institute fellow.

Together with 54 other women and men, Valencius is in the 2016–2017 fellowship class at Harvard's institute for advanced study, where the acceptance rate to the fellowship program this year was just under four percent.

CONEVERY BOLTON VALENCIUS

As the 2016–2017 Katherine Hampson Bessell Fellow, Valencius will pursue an individual project at Radcliffe, in a community dedicated to exploration and inquiry across disciplinary boundaries. In addition to receiving the funding, time, and space for a year of focused work, the fellows—scholars, scientists, and artists—benefit from access to Harvard's libraries and from engaging Harvard undergraduates as research partners.

Valencius joins an international group of fellows coming to the Institute from Africa, Asia, Australia, Europe, and South America, as well as from across North America.

"Next year's fellowship class has an amazing reach and diversity, both topically and geographically," said Radcliffe Institute Dean Lizabeth Cohen RI '02. "They are coming from six continents to study topics ranging from black holes and depictions of the heavens in Chinese art to fossils embedded in the ocean floor and the relationship between fracking and earthquakes. These Radcliffe fellows will literally be exploring heaven and earth at Radcliffe, revealing that there is something new under the sun, after all."

At Boston College, Valencius teaches and writes on environmental history, the history of science and medicine, the U.S. Civil War, and the history of earthquakes and seismology. Students enjoy the courses she teaches, such as "Leeches to Lasers: Medicine and Health in the US" and "This Land is Your Land" on place and American history. Her most recent book, The Lost History of the New Madrid Earthquakes (2013, University of Chicago Press), investigates the powerful earthquakes that shook the middle Mississippi Valley in the early 1800s. The book highlights how the exploration of history is becoming critical to the study of seismology today.

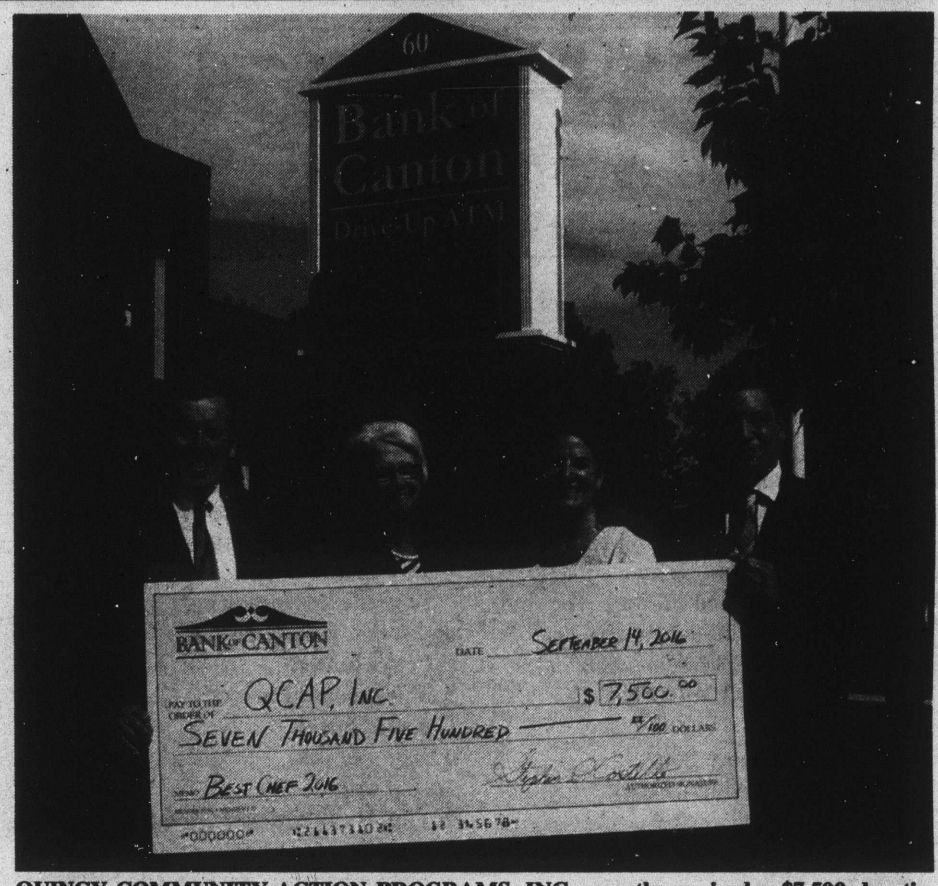

While at Radcliffe, Valencius is writing a popularly oriented book about induced seismicity and hydraulic fracturing in mid-continent or earthquakes caused by deep-level wastewater injection wells. The book will investigate how public knowledge of science interacts with scientific practice in the United States, especially in the economically and politically fraught arena of resource extraction, and will advocate for greater public engagement and awareness about scientific work in areas of civic debate.

"Complex technologies and environmental issues demand that we use many tools to explore earthquakes and energy development today. Not only to we need technical information, but also creativity, historical sleuthing, and sophisticated data analysis," says Valencius. "I'm eager to investigate these questions in the company of the multidisciplinary community at the Radcliffe, where mathematicians have insights on probability and fiction writers share stories that impart powerful truths. Learning from colleagues in other fields is the most exciting part of being a historian of science, and I'm delighted to have the opportunity to work on this project in an atmosphere of discovery."

During the year, fellows will present their work in lectures and in gallery exhibitions, many of which are open to the public and shared online. Valencius will exhibit samples of Arkansas shale—highlighting the geology, beauty, and mystery behind the process of extracting fossil fuel from the solid rock—in the Radcliffe Institute fellows group exhibition, The Art of Discovery.

The exhibition runs through Oct. 29.

More information is online: http://www.radcliffe.harvard.edu/event/2016-art-discovery-exhibition.

Ellie's White Cake With Lemon Curd

By MARIE

My granddaughter, Ellie, who is only 15 and loves to bake, made a white cake last week and served it with lemon curd.

While preparing the cake she didn't know what to do with the leftover egg yolk so she decided to make lemon curd, which was a most delicious combination to go along with the cake and frosting! The smile on her face when she watched me taste her delicious culinary invention was priceless.

RECIPE FOR WHITE CAKE

2 cups of sugar
3 cups of all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons of baking powder
1 teaspoon of salt
¾ cup canola oil
3 large egg whites
2 teaspoons of vanilla
1 and ½ cups of whole milk

Preheat oven to 350 and grease two 8 inch round pans, line bottom with parchment paper for easy removal. Mix all the dry ingredients in a large bowl and Wisk the wet ingredients in a smaller bowl. Put two together and mix until well combined and divide batter evenly into 2 pans and bake 30 minutes until toothpick comes out clean.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

1 stick of butter
8 ounces of cream cheese
3 or 4 cups of powdered sugar
2 teaspoons of vanilla
Mix the cream cheese and butter slowly and add powdered sugar until smooth.

LEMON CURD (optional)

To make this lemon curd Ellie used the egg yolks, plus 1, left over from making the cake batter.
5 tablespoons of butter
¼ cup of honey
4 large egg yoks
1/8 tsp salt
½ cup fresh squeezed lemon juice and lemon zest is optional.

Cream butter in a mixer, add honey and beat until fluffy. Add egg yolks one at a time beating well. Add salt and reduce speed to low and slowly add the lemon juice. Mix until combined.

In a saucepan fill 1/3 of the way with water and boil. Place mixing bowl on pan (or double boiler) and mix until mixture is thick for about 15 minutes.

Cool, refrigerate and enjoy.

Healthy Grain Free Cinnamon Raisin Cookies

By SUSIE

These cookies are certainly a treat and will give you a nice substitution for refined grain and sugar cookies.

High in protein, fiber, healthy fats, just enough sweetness and they really taste like oatmeal cookies. Lovely with a nice cup of tea or my favorite coffee substitute, Dandyblend herbal coffee made from dandelion root.

*Please use organic ingredients to reduce toxic load on the body.

RECIPE

1/4 cup pasture butter (you may substitute virgin coconut oil)
1/3 cup raw honey
1 egg
2 tsp cinnamon
1/2 tsp nutmeg
1 cup almond flour
2 tablespoons coconut flour
2 tablespoons chia seeds
1/2 tsp baking soda
1/2 cup raisins

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

(I use a beater for this step but you may use wooden spoon) cream together butter and honey well. Add egg and cream some more until mixture is very smooth.

Add flour slowly and incorporate well until there are no lumps along with the spices, soda and chia seeds. Add raisins last, stirring until well incorporated.

Bake on parchment paper (spooned about the size of ping pong balls) for about 12-15 minutes, Remove and flatten them a bit. Enjoy at any temperature! Freezes well also, if you happen to have any leftovers.

The Flu: Vaccinations A Crucial Step In Prevention

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

The flu is a contagious respiratory illness caused by influenza viruses that infect the nose, throat, and lungs. It can cause mild to severe illness, and on occasion can lead to death.

The timing of flu is unpredictable and can fluctuate in different parts of the country and from season to season. Most seasonal flu activity typically occurs between October and May. Flu activity most commonly peaks in the United States between December and February.

People who have the flu often feel some or all of these signs and symptoms:

- Fever or feeling feverish/chills
- Cough
- Sore throat
- Runny or stuffy nose
- Muscle or body aches
- Headaches
- Fatigue (very tired)
- Some people may have vomiting and diarrhea, though this is more common in children than adults.

Researchers believe that flu viruses spread mainly by droplets made when people with flu cough, sneeze or talk. These droplets can deposit in the mouths or noses of people who are nearby. Less often, a person might also get flu by touching a surface or object that has flu virus on it and then touching their own mouth, eyes or possibly their nose. You may be able to disseminate the flu to someone else before you know you are sick, as well as while you are sick.

Most healthy adults may be able to infect others beginning 1 day before symptoms develop and up to 5 to 7 days after becoming ill. Some people, especially young children and people with weakened immune systems, might be able to infect others for an even lengthier time. The time from when a person is exposed to flu virus to when symptoms begin is about 1 to 4 days, with an average of about 2 days.

Anyone can get the flu (even healthy people), and dangerous problems related to the flu can happen at any age, but some people are at high risk of developing serious flu-related complications if they get sick. This includes people 65 years and older, people of any age with certain chronic medical conditions (such as asthma, diabetes, or heart disease), pregnant women, and young children.

Complications of flu can include bacterial pneumonia, ear infections, sinus infections, dehydration, and worsening of chronic medical conditions, such as congestive heart failure, asthma, or diabetes.

The first and most crucial step in preventing flu is to get a flu vaccination each year. Flu vaccination is safe and has important benefits. It can reduce flu illnesses, doctors' visits, and missed work and school due to flu, as well as prevent flu-related hospitalizations.

Various flu vaccines are approved for use in different groups of people. Factors that can determine a person's suitability for vaccination, or vaccination with a particular vaccine, include a person's age, health (current and past) and any relevant allergies. Flu shots are approved for use in pregnant women and people with chronic health conditions.

There are flu shots that also are appropriate for use in people as young as 6 months of age and up. CDC recommends use of the flu shot (inactivated influenza vaccine or IIV) and the recombinant influenza vaccine (RIV). The nasal spray flu vaccine (live attenuated influenza vaccine or LAIV) should not be used during 2016-2017.

Also, the recommendations for vaccination of people with egg allergies have changed for 2016-2017.

People with egg allergies can receive any licensed, recommended age-appropriate influenza vaccine and no longer have to be monitored for 30 minutes after receiving the vaccine. People who have severe egg allergies should be vaccinated in a medical setting and be supervised by a health care provider who is able to recognize and manage severe allergic conditions.

It is crucial that everyone 6 months of age and older get a yearly flu vaccine as the first and most important step in protecting against this dangerous disease. People should begin getting vaccinated soon after flu vaccine becomes available, if possible by October, to ensure that as many people as possible are protected before flu season begins. Nevertheless, as long as flu viruses are circulating in the community, it's not too late to get vaccinated. If you are ill with flu, stay home from work or school to prevent spreading flu to others. It is very challenging to distinguish the flu from other viral or bacterial causes of respiratory illnesses on the basis of symptoms alone.

There are tests available to diagnose flu. CDC also recommends routine preventive actions such as, staying away from people who are sick, covering coughs and sneezes and frequent handwashing, to help reduce the spread of germs that cause respiratory (nose, throat, and lungs) illnesses, like influenza.

If you do become sick with the flu, antiviral drugs are prescription drugs that can be used to treat the illness. People at high risk of serious flu complications (such as children younger than 2 years, adults 65 and older, pregnant women, and people with certain medical conditions) and people who are very sick with flu (such as those hospitalized because of flu) should get antiviral drugs.

Some other people can be treated with antivirals at their health care provider's discretion.

Treating high risk people or people who are very sick with flu with antiviral drugs is imperative. Studies reveal that prompt treatment with antiviral drugs can prevent critical flu complications. Timely treatment can mean the difference between having a milder illness versus very serious illness that could result in a hospital stay.

Management with antivirals works best when begun within 48 hours of getting sick, but can still be beneficial when given later in the course of illness. Antiviral drugs are effective across all age-and risk groups, but keep in mind they are not a substitute for getting a flu vaccine. Antiviral drugs are a second line of defense to treat the flu (including seasonal flu and variant flu viruses) if you get sick.

Be wise, the short time that it takes you to get a flu shot can protect your health and the health of your loved ones.

Historical Society Fall Foliage Trip Oct. 13

The Quincy Historical Society announces a Fall Foliage trip to Ventfort Hall and The Mount in Lenox on Thursday, Oct. 13.

The trip features a tour of two historic homes from the turn of the 20th century, when the Berkshires were first dotted with mansions of the rich and famous. Ventfort Hall and Gilded Age Museum were built for the sister of J.P. Morgan in 1893. The second home, known as The Mount, was designed and built by author Edith Wharton in 1902. Both homes have been recently restored to their original appearance.

Tour goers will depart the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy, at 8 a.m. Oct. 13. At Ventfort Hall, which is on the National Register of Historic Places, there will be a tour of two meticulously and restored floors that epitomize Gilded Age luxury. On view will be antique china, crystal and silver.

There will also be an elegant plated luncheon in the mansion's 1893 dining room. The menu features turkey with cranberry sauce sandwich on whole grain bread, choice of two homebaked desserts, fresh fruit, candy and black or herbal tea from a silver service.

Following lunch the tour proceeds to The Mount. A National Historic Landmark, the home was built to Edith Wharton's specifications. Here she wrote Ethan Frome, the Age of Mirth and other works. There will be a one-hour guided tour and time to visit the beautiful terrace and gardens.

The bus will depart for Quincy at 3 p.m. and arrive at the Adams Academy at approximately 6 p.m.

Price for the trip is $75 for Historical Society members and $80 for non-members.

For more information, call the Quincy Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

Alexander Parris Topic At Granite Museum Meeting

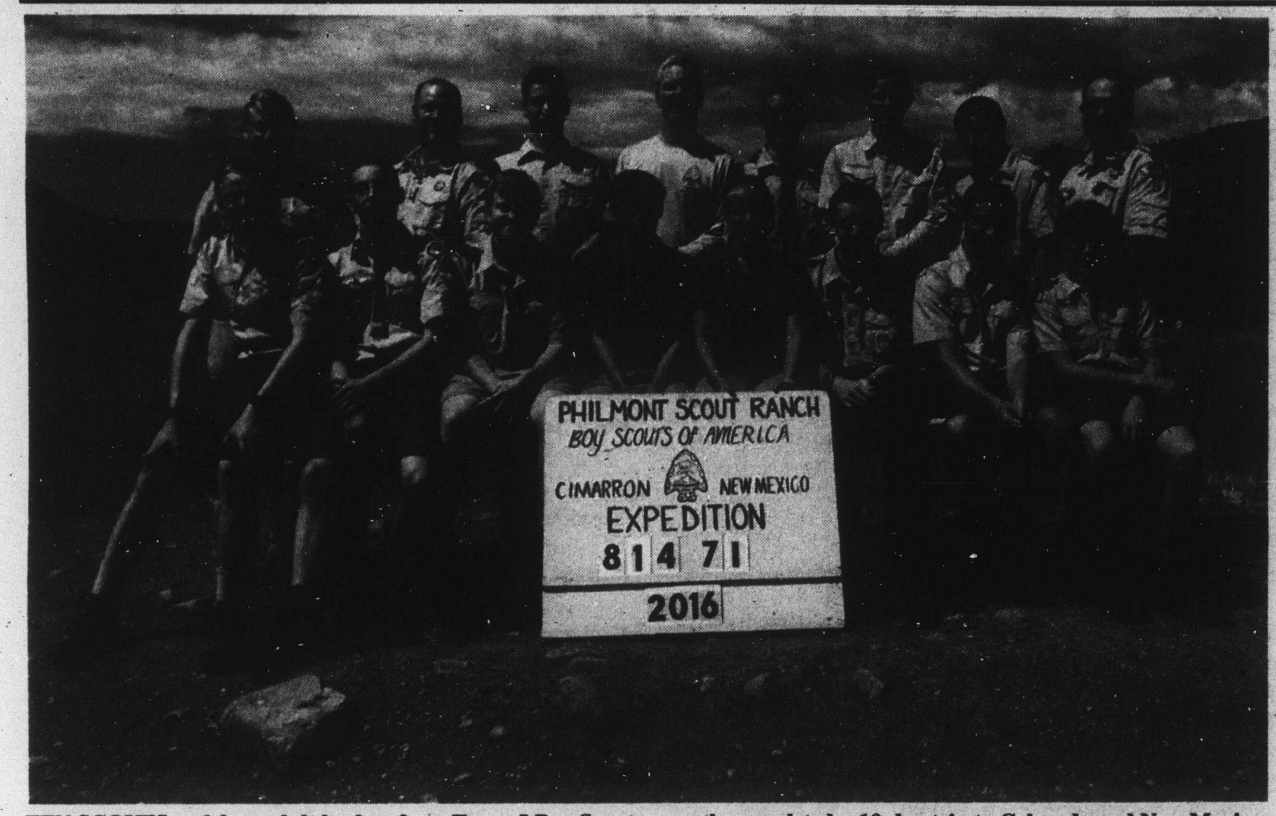

At the October Meeting of the Quincy Quarry & Granite Workers Museum an illustrated presentation about Alexander Parris, prominent American architect and engineer, will be given by Doug Bingham.

The meeting will be held Wednesday, Oct. 5th at 7 p.m. p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Alexander Parris' work transitions between federal style and later Greek revival. His influence spanned from Virginia to the tip of Maine, producing residences, churches and commercial buildings. In 1815 he moved to Boston working for Charles Bulfinch and later in Parris's career becoming Boston's leading architect of the "Boston Granite Style." Scouts, Leaders Tour Colorado, New Mexico

Ten scouts and 4 adult leaders from Troop 5 Boy Scouts recently completed a 10-day trip to Colorado and New Mexico.

In Colorado they toured the U.S. Air Force Academy, hiked around Red Rocks Amphitheatre, The Garden of the Gods National Landmark and Pikes Peak. The highlight of the trip was a 7-day, 55-mile trek in the backcountry at Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico.

Tents, food, water and clothing were carried in backpacks as the troop navigated its way through canyons, mesas, alpine meadows and peaks reaching upwards of 11,500 feet. The Troop worked with Philmont staffers to build a new hiking trail, learned how to rope cattle and endured 85 degree days and 40 degree nights. The trip was two years in the planning and was filled with a lifetime of memories.

Philmont Scout Ranch is located in the Rocky Mountains in northern New Mexico. The Ranch was donated to the Boy Scouts of America in 1938 and covers over 200 square miles. Wildlife is abundant at Philmont with black bear, elk, mule deer, buffalo, prairie dogs, etc. sighted frequently. Over 1 million trekkers have visited the Ranch since its founding. The Boy Scouts of America is one of the nation's largest and most prominent values-based youth development organizations. The BSA provides a program for young people that builds character, trains them in the responsibilities of participating citizenship, and develops personal fitness.

Troop 5 Boy Scouts is chartered out of St. Agatha Church in East Milton and is comprised primarily of boys from Milton and Quincy. The Troop camps out locally once per month with bigger trips mixed in– Philmont, Gettysburg, Valley Forge/ Philadelphia, Martha's Vineyard, St. Johns, and whitewater rafting.

The Boy Scouts are open to boys age 11 (or who have completed the fifth grade) through age 18. For more information on Troop 5 please e-mail mullen41@comcast.net.

In another matter, Stacey Barker and Dave Molloy, president and vice president respectively of the newly formed parent-led Quincy Choral Boosters, informed the committee of their organization's fundraising efforts to support choral arts in the city's public schools.

Barker said a car wash was to be held on Sept. 24 to help fund the high school choral competition at the end of the year.

Molloy said the choral arts program is important since it helps contribute to students' life skills.

"It gives them confidence and enforces teamwork," he said. "It engages body, mind and spirit and requires discipline and hard work."

Social Security Publishes Final Rule To Revise Medical Criteria For Evaluating Mental Disorders

The Social Security Administration has published final rules, effective Jan. 17, 2017, that revise medical criteria for evaluating mental disorders.

This regulation is a comprehensive revision to the criteria for evaluating disability claims involving mental disorders.

"Updating our medical criteria for the disability program is a challenging task that has been complicated by deep budgetary cuts in recent years," said Carolyn W. Colvin, the Acting Commissioner of Social Security. "We are committed to updating our regulations to reflect up-to-date standards and practices used in the health care community."

The final rule is the last step in a careful, deliberative process that engaged relevant stakeholders, including current disability beneficiaries and their family members, mental-health physicians and treatment providers, and advocacy groups for those with mental disorders. It also reflects information from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Fifth edition, the mental health profession's current standard classification of mental disorders. In addition to reflecting comments from members of the public, the rule also reflects an intellectual disability report commissioned from the National Academy of Sciences, and the expertise of disability policy experts, adjudicators, psychiatric professionals, and vocational experts who provided input at every phase of the rulemaking process.

The publication of this final rule is an important cornerstone of our effort to secure today and tomorrow for members of the public with mental illness who are some of our most vulnerable beneficiaries.

To learn more about the revised criteria visit https://www.federalregister.gov/public-inspection/current.

Granite Delivery Delays Walk Of Names Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

The completion of the new Walk of Names – featuring some 4,000 personalized engraved bricks with the city's famed ball of polished Quincy granite as its centerpiece – outside City Hall has been pushed back to later this year because of a delay in getting granite from a Canadian quarry.

Two other projects – the roadway improvements in Quincy Center and a new surface lot at the former Ross Garage site – are also set for completion before winter comes and the construction season ends.

The first part of the larger Hancock Adams Green, the Walk of Names was originally slated to be finished over the summer. That date was then bumped back to September, and now Mayor Thomas Koch said it should be finished later this year, but did not give a firm date.

The mayor, during a recent interview, said the delay was caused by a backlog at the Canadian quarry where granite for the project is sourced. The granite will be used in a number of places in the new Walk of Names, such as lining the walkways with engraved bricks, and the first shipment of it arrived last week.

"The backup has been the availability of getting the granite that's been specified for that project," Koch said. "The landscape architect specified a particular granite, which is quarried out of Canada actually. It's a beautiful piece of granite.

"So they're way behind on delivery because they're backlogged up at the quarry. We had the first shipment this week and every week we're supposed to get new shipments, so hopefully we're going to make up some time on that project."

Additionally, the mayor said his staff has been concerned the contractor for the project did not have enough workers, and the city has been holding the contractor to high standards.

"We've had meetings obviously and we have another one coming up between our engineers and the company's representative and owner, and we'll be talking to them again about our concerns that they don't have enough manpower on this to get it done," Koch said.

"The other thing, quite frankly, is we're being very, very picky on the product. They've already had to make some adjustments. They had to redo the stairs on the front of City Hall; they weren't right. I'm not accepting anything – we're paying good money, we're buying quality materials – unless we're satisfied, we're not accepting the product. So there has been some delays related to that too."

Work has also been underway on the now closed section of Hancock Street between the United First Parish Church and City Hall that will become the new Hancock Adams Green. Koch said that project, which entails the construction of new conduits for utilities, has also hit a snag because Verizon has yet to move its phone lines from an old duct to a new one.

"There are 27,000 phone lines that go under there today in a wooden duct. They all have to be moved. We're paying for the new conduit, we're putting it all in. They agreed to the setup we had – the design and so forth. That part is done," Koch said. "Now it's breaking into the manholes and pulling the wires, and that's been the struggle."

Koch said he was disappointed by the situation, but believed it would be resolved.

"I'm concerned about it and I'm disappointed, but we'll get there," the mayor said. "The law is on our side on this. Because we abandoned a road, we have to move stuff and under the law they had no easement to be in there to start with. We have the right side of the law, and then there is the pragmatic side of just dealing with the issue."

Despite the delay, Koch said the Hancock Adams Green should still be completed by the spring of 2018.

Before closing the section of Hancock Street between the two buildings and rerouting traffic in both directions around the church, the city undertook an $8 million roadway improvement project in Quincy Center. The project, largely funded by a federal earmark and overstate by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, should be finished this construction season.

Koch said the last major piece of the project is the installation of new sidewalks and curbing that will separate the Hancock Adams Green from the road. After that is done, the roads in the area can be repaved to create a smoother ride for motorists.

"You see it across the street," the mayor said, referring to the section of new sidewalk on Hancock Street south of City Hall. "They're doing the curb/sidewalk work – they're pretty much done with the drainage work – and they're doing the same on the opposite end between the church and the Munroe Building.

"Once all those are done in place, then it's the final coat of pavement on everything, which they'll bang through in a few nights because the bulk of the work is done; it's that finished product in the end. Then all the new markers will go in place, all the elevations will be fine for the drainage and it will get rid of all the roller coaster issues."

Koch said the road closures and detours would be implemented during the final repaving.

"Some of that could be done at night, and that will be done rather quickly, the final paving. I don't have a schedule on that, but absolutely there will be some closures," the mayor said.

"There is a natural boundary there though. You can shut off Dimmock Street; they can go around easy enough. This (Hancock Street in front of The Sun's office) could be shut down easily and they could go down Maple and make the loop. I'm sure that will be done in a way that's efficient for the public."

Also set for completion this construction season is a new surface parking lot in the former Ross Garage space, which will have room for more than 200 vehicles. Koch said the lot would likely be open to the general public and drivers with monthly parking passes. There would be a fee for parking there, similar to the charge at nearby Hancock Lot.

The city has targeted the former Ross Garage site and the surrounding area for future redevelopment as part of the larger plan for Quincy Center. The preliminary plan includes a single two-way road for traffic to replace the Parkingway and an unnamed street currently on site.

"We're looking at one two-lane street rather than two separate streets," Koch said. "The one closer to the tracks – the Parkingway – will probably go away and that will become part of what will be development, and the street would be in front of it between that parcel and the rear of the Hancock Street parcels.

"You'll have a two-lane road with parking with full [Americans with Disabilities Act] walking sidewalks, trees and so forth. It will be a regular street that you would see in the downtown, so it will blend nicely. It will be a great improvement."

Koch said the city would continue to honor the late Charles A. Ross, for whom the parking was dedicated, with a monument that sits in the area. Ross served as Ward 3 councillor from 1912 to 1915, councillor at-large from 1918 to 1926, and mayor from 1933 to 1935 and again from 1943 to 1949.

"He'll always be memorialized," Koch said of Ross. "We're not getting rid of that monument that's been there for a number of years, so that doesn't change…that monument will always be there as far as I know – as long as I'm around anyway."

COMPLETION OF A new "Walk of Names" in front of the glass City Hall annex and adjacent to the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) has been pushed back to later this year due to a delay in getting granite from a Canadian quarry.

Koch Hopes To Replace Lead Water Service Lines

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch wants Quincy to take advantage of a program allowing the city to receive an interest free loan to replace lead service lines that connect water mains to residences.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority in March made up to $100 million in interest free loans available to member communities to replace lead service lines. Koch on Sept. 19 submitted a request to the City Council to borrow $1.5 million in funding from the program to replace lead service lines in Quincy. The council is slated to consider the program during its next meeting on Oct. 3.

Koch, in a recent interview, said the city does not have a major issue with lead in its water, but believes the program is worth pursuing.

"There are still a number of homes in our city that may have lead service connections between the sidewalk and the house. As you know, there is a sidewalk stop for every home – the water line comes into that stop and then there is a connection from there into the house," the mayor said.

"Under normal circumstances, that connection from there into the house is the obligation of the homeowner, but this program – because we're getting a special loan program from the MWRA with the goal of trying to eliminate all of that lead that's out there – would be for us to go in and do those services in all those homes that might still have the old lead so that it's all updated.

"The lead issue is not severe in this community, but we want to eliminate it. We just want to get rid of it. This is a neat way, the MWRA

New Science Standards

new standards are based on changes in the science field and focus more on concepts, design and inquiry. The three major areas are practices, core ideas and crosscutting.

Practices refer to the way scientists investigate and build models and theories about the natural world and practices used by engineers as their build models and systems. Core ideas focus on disciplines in the areas of physical, life, earth and space and engineering and technology. Crosscutting concepts link the different domains of science.

Cunniff explained the new program will feature Quincy-specific studies. She pointed to one project where students will be studying the ecosystem of Black's Creek.

"One goal is to look at Quincy specifically regarding climate change," she said. "Some lessons will pertain just to Quincy."

Cunniff noted that Boston University graduate students are working with Quincy's middle school teachers in the classroom as part of the university's Glacier Program. Each BU student spends two days coteaching with an emphasis on global climate change specifically targeting Quincy.

Dennehey said the new program will help elementary students prepare for the middle school science, technology and engineering courses by providing the opportunity for them to formulate their own questions and understanding of the world.

"This gives students a deeper conceptual idea of science," she said. "We can shift our focus from the what to the why and how."

Roy explained that middle school students will be using interactive notebooks where all class activities will be chronicled and referred when needed.

"Everything we do in the class is in the book," said Roy. "It's the culmination of what's learned in class."

Another goal of the program is to prepare middle school students for advanced placement high school courses.

"This will create an advance pathway for grade 8 learners," said Cunniff, explaining that it would lead to more grade 9 students enrolling in advanced and honors biology and give advanced students more flexibility to enroll in 11th and 12th grade science, technology and engineering classes.

Roy noted the transition to the new standards began in 2009 when the state revised science frameworks. In July 2011, the National Resource Council released frameworks for K to 12 science education that led to the development of the Next Generation of Science Standards (NGSS).

In April 2013, public comment led to the agreement to adopt the NGSS and the following December, the state drafted its new standards that were formally adopted by the Massachusetts Board of Education last January.

Roy said Quincy began its transition last school year that led to the middle school summer alignment unit development and then full implementation this fall.

Cunniff said the goal is to be "develop scientifically and technologically literate citizens who can solve complex, multidisciplinary problems and apply analytical reasoning and innovative thinking to real-world applications needed for civic participation, college preparation and career readiness."

Cunniff also said the new program involves art, math and English since students have to write a thesis and provide accompanying artwork.

Committee members were pleased with the shift to the new standards.

"Some students fear science at an early age," said Barbara Isola. "(With this program) we're teaching students it's OK to make a mistake and they may discover something they didn't think they would discover."

Added Anne Mahoney, "This is an exciting new curriculum."

Police Investigating Purse Thefts

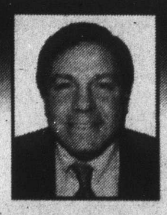

Quincy Police are warning residents to be aware of their surroundings after three reported unarmed robberies in the last 10 days in which the suspect jumps out of a vehicle and steals the victim's purse.

All have occurred in the North Quincy section of the city.

The first incident occurred Sept. 15 at approximately 6 p.m. on Farrington Street. The Asian female victim described the suspect as a tall white male, thin, with salt & pepper hair. He jumped out of a light blue or gray vehicle. The second occurred on Friday, 09/23/2016 at approx. 6:26pm on Kendall Street. The white female victim reported that a white male, 32-35 years old, with short blonde hair, approx. 5'11", 190 lbs pulled up to her and demanded her pocketbook. When the victim started running, the suspect jumped out of his vehicle and took her pocketbook. She described the vehicle as a tan or brown SUV. The most recent incident occurred on Sunday, 9/25 at approx. 9:00am on Fayette Street. The Asian female victim reported that a white male, in his 50's operating a gray SUV jumped out of his vehicle and stole her pocketbook. Luckily, none of the victims suffered serious injuries, however, two did suffer minor injuries due to being pushed to the ground or while running from the suspect.

"Please pay extra attention to your surroundings," police said. "If possible, leave your purse at home and carry only what you need. If you must carry a purse, hold it tight to your body or wear it under a jacket. Remember, you are more important than your belongings. While it can be a hassle to replace stolen items, it is more important to prevent injury than it is to save a purse!"

ZERO IN ON XEROSTOMIA

Saliva not only moistens and cleanses the mouth, but it also aids in digestion, controls bacteria, and facilitates enamel remineralization. It does so by neutralizing the acid in plaque and removing germs and food residue, thereby significantly reducing the risk of cavities and providing a mineral barrier that protects tooth surfaces. Thus, it is very important to treat "dry mouth" (medically known as "xerostomia"). Dry mouth can lead to sores in the mouth, cracked lips, and fissures in the tongue, and has been associated with tooth loss in older adults. Treatment begins by identifying the cause of dry mouth, which is a side effect of a number of medications as well as certain diseases, infections, and medical treatments.

Are you experiencing dry mouth? We provide the best oral health care possible by evaluating your needs individually. We'll explain our findings and recommendations, and together we'll choose the best treatment plan. We invite you to make an appointment with us by calling 617 479-6220. Your positive attitude towards your dental health is the key to successful dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Dry mouth can be a result of nerve damage to the head and neck area from an injury or surgery.

be to present some of the options we're looking at. I want to get buy-in from the council. I want to get buy-in from the public," Koch said.

"That doesn't mean we'll all agree in the end on something, but this is a major change for people that we ought to talk a lot about and get some input on."

"I think it's time we take a serious look at it and I'd like to see it happen," Koch added later. "I just haven't gotten to the point where we have the final plan, the package to put before the council.

"I think we're going to put some options before them. I think we're going to have a good discussion, a public discussion, about it whether it's in full council or they have a couple committee meetings on it, whether we do a couple other night meetings open to the public."

While the council may be asked to review the plan in the coming weeks, Koch said the body won't be asked to approve an appropriation for purchasing the new barrels until later on because key details for the plan – such as how many households would get the containers – have yet to be decided. The purchase of the new containers is estimated to cost $3 million, which Koch said would be offset by an increase in recycling, because the city does not pay to have recycled goods processed.

Koch said he wants the changes to the city's waste removal implemented by the start of the next fiscal year in July 2017; though that date is a moving target. Between now and then an extensive public education campaign will be undertaken, which could include forums hosted by the administration and city councillors, programming on QATV, direct mailing and outreach in the school system.

"The goal right now would be the new fiscal year next July, but that's a moving target. I do believe there has to be a lot of education on this. There has to be a full airing of it in a public forum, let people weigh in," Koch said.

"As it is today, those other things don't change – if you have a refrigerator or something, you have to call two days before and arrange for that. That won't change. But this will eliminate a lot of headaches regarding litter and rodents, I think, beyond the main issue of driving down our costs by way of driving up the recyclables.

"I think it's a win-win all around, but there is a lot of work to be done in the details. The devil is in the details."

Koch said he's already received feedback from the public about the proposal, including from those who would like to see it implemented because it could put to an end the practice of leaving bags of trash curbside.

"I've already heard from a number of individuals – many that want to see it happen because they believe it will help clean up the city from what happens when you put those little plastic bags on the curb and the birds get in it and it's blowing around," the mayor said.

"But this also helps drive the cost down to the taxpayer on disposal, because wherever this has happened the recycling goes up dramatically, which means the disposal side that we're paying for in the end goes down dramatically. Those are obviously big goals, but it will go a long way in cleaning up the city. You drive through some days and you've got litter flying everywhere. Even the old bins that people use, the newspapers, you've got a windy day and those are flying out of the bins.

"Appearance and aesthetics are important. It's going to be a savings to the taxpayer over time; the payback period is pretty solid on this investment."

Koch said city officials have had discussions with their counterparts in other communities that have already implemented uniform waste disposal, such as Braintree and Weymouth.

Among the issues Koch said needs to be worked out his how many households would be given the new containers. The city handles waste removal for residential properties with up to eight units, and officials have to decide how many containers would be distributed to multi-family residences.

"The question is a single-family gets one and one – does a two-family automatically get two and two, or does one do it for two? These are big containers, what's the ratio?" Koch explained.

"That's the due diligence we're doing now with other communities, what's the experience been, because there are cities like Lynn that have similar demographics as we do as far as housing stock and so forth that probably could be helpful to us."

The mayor said he has also heard from senior citizens who say they would prefer to use smaller containers, and officials are considering what to do in such a case.

"There are those other questions we're going through right now, like when I get from a senior 'I live by myself – I don't need those two big buckets.' We're looking at are there smaller versions of the same setup," Koch said.

"These containers kind of go with the property, so the downside of that is if a new family moves in with five people that smaller bucket won't be good enough for them. We've got to kind of work through those issues going forward."

The mayor said there is no plan at the moment for how the new containers would be distributed, though he did mention the possibility of city employees going out one day and distributing them en masse to households. What the containers would look like is also unknown.

As part of the plan, Koch said he wants the city looking at how to better enforce its rules for trash disposal – particularly for people who leave trash curbside too early or don't bring their containers in in a timely fashion.

"One of the pieces we're going to look at with this whole change in the containers is enforcement, and we're going to get a lot tougher on people," Koch said. "We have these four- and six-families all over the city. You'll have somebody move out on a Saturday and they leave everything on the sidewalk and rubbish day isn't until Thursday. That's not acceptable for people to have to look at that.

"We're going to be recommending to the City Council as part of the package some kind of an enforcement mechanism that we can use to keep the city looking good. There are people who put the rubbish out way too soon, and then there are people who don't pick the barrels up to bring them back in for way too late – a day or two later. So we're going to tighten that restriction."

One change that is unlikely to be made is a new requirement that residents recycle. Koch said such a requirement would be difficult because roughly half of the city's households rent.

"One of the challenges we face – unlike the Braintrees and Weymouths – we have a lot more rental property. It's roughly half and half – 50 percent on each side. So you have a continuous change – people moving in and moving out," Koch said. "Trying to get them to learn about parking, overnight parking, and snow and what the deal is with rubbish removal is all challenging."

Fire Dept. Rescue Truck Deployed Full-Time

First Time Since 2003

At the request of Mayor Thomas Koch, Fire Chief Joseph Barron last Friday night ordered the department's all-purpose technical rescue vehicle be placed in service full-time for the first time in more than 13 years.

The vehicle, known as Rescue 1, will be manned during all shifts, carrying specialty tools and firefighters with training in technical rescues such as car accidents, building collapses and high-angle rescues.

Mayor Koch said gradual increases in manpower, training and funding over the last several years following the Great Recession made the move possible. The truck, based out of Fire Headquarters on Quincy Avenue, is manned by two firefighters and an officer.

"Firefighting today is about so much more than protecting life and property during a fire: There isn't any kind of major incident imaginable that our firefighters would not be called upon to save lives. Rescue 1 is an important tool for the Department and an important resource for our residents during an emergency," Koch said. "I'm thankful for the work of Chief Barron and all of our firefighters over the last several years in working together to transform this from a priority to a reality."

Koch's addition this year of four firefighter positions in the city budget, in addition to a recent Department of Homeland Security grant providing funding for an additional four firefighters, will provide the flexibility to keep the truck operational 24 hours a day following several years of gradual increases in the truck's service time, Koch said.

The truck was last in service full-time in 2003 prior to budget cuts that year.

The truck responds to all major incidents citywide and all incidents requiring Emergency Medical Service within the geographical district covered by Headquarters. Among the incidents firefighters aboard the truck are trained for are confined space rescues such as trench collapses and building rescues at angles too high for a traditional ladder engine to reach.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said staff training has increased markedly over the last several years.

"The situations we face are constantly evolving, and our ability to train for those situations and respond swiftly with the right equipment is critical. Having this vehicle available on a full-time basis is just one more way to help us better respond to any situation that may arise in the City," Barron said.

City Near LDAs With Two Private Developers

buildings could commence next spring.

City officials are also in the process of designing a parking garage with room for up to 700 vehicles that would be located on the Hancock Lot.

Koch, in a recent interview, said city officials are nearing land disposition agreements with LBC Boston and Peter O'Connell on the projects each has proposed for the Hancock Lot. The projects, first unveiled in April 2015, are LBC Boston's 116-room hotel at the 1400 block of Hancock Street and O'Connell's 15-story, 122-unit residential tower near the corner of Cottage Avenue and the Dennis Ryan Parkway.

The LDAs for both projects would require approval from the City Council. Koch said the agreements would be ready for council review soon, but not in time for its next meeting Oct. 3.

"We're getting closer," the mayor responded after being asked when the LDAs would be finalized.

"It won't be the next meeting, but we're getting close."

Koch said the proposals have not changed much since they were first unveiled, but there were a number of issues the sides had to work out.

"The Peter thing – we're looking at that whole corner with eminent domain," the mayor said, referring to the corner of Cottage Avenue and the Ryan Parkway. "That will change Cottage Ave. some, so we've got to meld that in.

"Then of course we're working on the conceptual design of the garage – the garage is going to be immediately next to the O'Connell building, which creates all kinds of construction issues. It's not just whether the project can go or not, there are all these implications or complications of how you tie in and integrate the infrastructure with it.

"The LBC group – we've got the old Town Brook that still meanders under their property. That's a little bit challenging to try to figure that out because there is still a flow in it – not a dramatic flow, but still a flow. We've asked them, we want access through their site at the corner of Cottage Ave., so when the buildings come down and you build a new building, we want an opening there so there is a connection to the garage. Not just a little alleyway, but a real connection that is welcoming. So that we're working through.

"And on the other end of their property, we're looking at the road connection across from Cliveden. And we've asked them to move the building back off the sidewalk, so in front we have some nice wide sidewalk for café seating. In order to do that, they're going to have to come onto our property and do some kind of a swap.

"You mix all these things in, it's complicated, legally, how it's going to come out in the LDA. We're getting closer, but nothing's easy. Just when I think we're there, some other question pops up. We're getting very close now I think."

Koch said plans for the new garage are still in the conceptual phase; the city is working with Desman Design Management to plan the new structure.

"They're just in conceptual right now," the mayor said of those plans. "We have to go into full design. It's going to be a garage for more than 600 vehicles – somewhere between 600 and 700. Once you design a garage and start building a garage, it's crucial we get it right, both from the entry points and egress to how it bifurcates the lot and what we've got left for development."

The mayor hopes to finish the garage and two private projects at the same time.

"That's the tricky part – how can we get this so that they come together and open together," he said. "That's the goal."

The city is still working out a plan to accommodate motorists who park in the Hancock Lot during construction. Koch noted that the Messina lot has been paved over and is available for parking, and a new surface lot is set to open later this year where the Ross Garage once stood on the Parkingway.

The mayor said work on the projects would likely begin in the spring, though demolition could start sooner if the developers wanted.

"My guess is construction wouldn't be 'til the spring. That's a general comment. If they decide to start demolishing something, that's their call," Koch said. "But the goal is to get all the approvals this fall, final design and then construction this spring."

Koch said no further downtown projects are in the pipeline, but interest remains strong.

"There are other things being talked about, but nothing in the pipeline," he stated. "There is a lot of interest right now."

The mayor said that interest extends beyond Quincy Center, pointing to several residential projects built in recent years or now being constructed including Deco, Mechanic Lofts, 999 Hancock Street, Meriel Marina Bay, and Crown Colony.

"All of those projects that had been in the pipeline are ongoing, so there has already been that interest and recognition of what Quincy has to offer being on the Red Line 20 minutes from downtown, but [also] what we have to offer as a community," Koch said. "Safe. Great natural resources. Solid school system. More and more restaurants and opportunities to do things at night. That recognition has been there.

"Quite frankly, the whole Street-Works work that was done helped put the city on the map in that regard. All the marketing that was done, I think, clearly helped us to be where we are. No question about it, it helped us lay the foundation."

Koch said the interest in the city has led to increased property values, which the mayor said is a "double-edged sword" because it means homeowners' investments are worth more while also making it harder for first-time buyers and leads to higher taxes.

The mayor said there are options out there for those who may be struggling because increased property values have led to higher taxes.

"The value of that nest egg has gone up dramatically, so at that point they have some options," he said. "They can sell it. They can defer taxes. They can apply for abatements. There are those programs in place for people that fall in that category – a lot of people don't want to bother going through that process for whatever reason, and I understand that, but there are some options at that point.

"Many of the people you described are in that category of cash-poor, house-rich. There is the argument out there that that's the point when they should downsize – sell the house, make a great profit on the house and maybe get an apartment or a smaller condo, and now a family moves into the house. That whole natural cycling of the housing stock.

"That doesn't mean I'm trying to push anybody out of their houses – I don't want to misconstrue that – but they do have options at that point."

As for those looking to buy homes, Koch said the city might have to revisit its first-time homebuyers program.

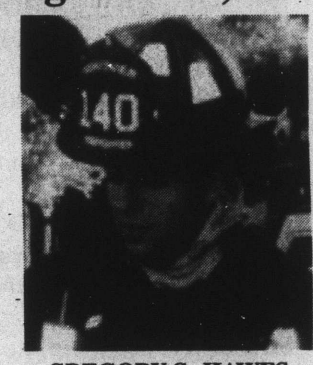

"I really feel for those families trying to break into the housing market – they want to buy a house in the community they grew up in, and it's a real, real struggle having the students loans they're carrying, the debt there, raising a family and all the bills that come with that," Koch said.

"My heart goes out to those folks at this point and I don't have an answer for that. Everybody says we need more affordable housing and so forth, and I'm not going to argue that point, but that doesn't speak to those folks that are trying to break into the market and raise a family here. We had that first-time homebuyer program here a few years ago, maybe it's time we modify that and adapt it to some of the situations we're facing now.

"Those are the kinds of things we'll be looking at with our Affordable Housing Trust money."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, Sept.19, at approximately 9:05 p.m., Officers Paul Foley and Paul Murphy were dispatched to the intersection of Water and Franklin Streets for a report of a vehicle crash.

Communications informed the responding officers that one of the operators involved was holding a knife in his hand. Officer Murphy arrived moments later and was immediately waved down by multiple witnesses who were pointing in the direction of a blue Ford Explorer in the lot of the Getty Gas Station (70 Franklin St.) as they shouted, "He's got a knife, he's got a knife."

Officer Murphy said as he approached the passenger side of the Ford Explorer, he observed the operator standing next to the open front passenger side door. Officer Murphy called out to the operator, who then turned toward the officer and moved his right hand, holding the knife in the direction of the officer. Fearing for his safety, Officer Murphy drew his firearm and ordered the male to drop the knife. The operator dropped the knife and Officer Murphy then instructed him to move away from it, but instead, the operator began pacing back and forth in an erratic manner before leaning into the front passenger side of his vehicle and reaching for something inside. At this point, Officer Foley arrived on scene.

The operator was ordered away from his vehicle repeatedly. Officer Murphy was able to glance inside the vehicle while maintaining a safe distance away from the operator and spotted a Blackjack style metal expandable baton tucked in between the front passenger seat and the center console. The officers closed in on the operator and handcuffed him.

Officer Foley then interviewed four witnesses who said that they saw the operator crash into a Mercury Marquis so they stopped to check if everyone was ok. They all said that the operator exited the driver's seat of his vehicle and approached them, stating, "Don't call the police" as he held a knife in his right hand. All four witnesses described how the operator placed them in fear for their safety as he walked around them while making forward slicing motions with the knife (toward the witnesses and within a few feet of each of them). Having probable cause that the operator had committed the crime of assault by means of a dangerous weapon, Officer Foley advised the operator of his Miranda rights, which he waived.

LT. DAN MINTON

When asked what occurred, the operator said he was traveling east on Water Street and had a green light when he was struck by a vehicle traveling north on Franklin Street. The operator claimed, "The other driver ran a red." (red light). As the operator spoke, the officers noted that his pupils were unusually constricted given the low light environment and that his body was constantly in motion (arms, legs, head and torso constantly moving back and forth).

When asked if he was experiencing any medical issues, the operator said no but did admit that he was on a prescribed medication of Ativan. He then added that he "ate" one dose of his medication at approximately 5 p.m. and said the effects last approximately "five to six hours." It should be noted that the crash occurred approximately fours hours after he took the medication.

Based on training and experience, the officer knew that Ativan is a highly addictive controlled sedative and instructions were to avoid driving or operating machinery as it may impair reaction time. When asked if he knew he was not supposed to drive a vehicle after taking Ativan, the operator said, "Ya, but I wasn't going to drive very far." Officer Foley asked the operator why he was holding a knife in his hand when he approached the witnesses after the crash and he responded, "I couldn't find a pen so I used a work knife to sharpen a pencil." This pencil was later located in his vehicle. The pencil, along with the "SOG" brand folding knife with three-inch steel blade and the Blackjack style baton were later seized as evidence.

Meanwhile, Officer Murphy interviewed the witnesses. One witness said that he was driving his car behind the operator on Liberty Street and observed him swerving all over the road in a reckless and negligent manner. He saw the operator turn right onto Water Street and accelerated to a high rate of speed toward Franklin Street. The operator sped through the intersection, going through a red light and crashed into the Mercury.

Another witness who was standing in front of the 7-Eleven store on Franklin Street saw the operator enter the intersection at a high speed "against the red light" before crashing into the Mercury. Based on all of the above information, Officer Foley charged the operator, a 35 year-old Quincy resident, with speeding, operating to endanger, red light violation, OUI drugs (Ativan), possession of a per se dangerous weapon (had control of the blackjack style baton while inside his vehicle) and five separate counts of assault by means of a dangerous weapon (knife)."

The four witnesses are also all victims. The operator of the Mercury and her passenger, along with the operator, were not injured. Nice Work!

Mayor Thomas Koch praised the Quincy Police Department for the work its officers do in the community.

"As we see what's happened nationally and quite frankly around the world, the world is changing pretty drastically. I'm an optimistic guy, but we've seen a lot of negative things, a lot more evil in the world manifesting itself in so many ways," Koch said.

"Day in and day out, you're on the front line related to anyone of those issues that could happen here in Quincy. I'm certainly mindful, truly mindful, of the work each of you do each and every day on behalf of the city of Quincy protecting the residents of our city."

The mayor called Sept. 22 a great day for all those involved because of the new hires and promotions, contrasting it to the days earlier in his tenure when he had to lay officers off because of the Great Recession.

"Today we are here to celebrate some new appointments and some promotions. It's always a great day when we do that," Koch said.

"In my early years, we were laying some people off and that is no fun at all. But we're adding to the ranks and we're promoting folks that have worked through the ranks and have provided leadership and deserve this day, and it's a great day. It's a great day for you individually, a great day for your families, it's a great day for the department."

Keenan thanked Koch for his support of the department.

"Eight years ago when he selected me as the chief, he made the commitment to the city of Quincy and law enforcement that we'd be a safe city, and he's fulfilled that commitment. Every opening that's come up, we've expanded the Police Department dramatically with extra patrol officers and supervision," the police chief said.

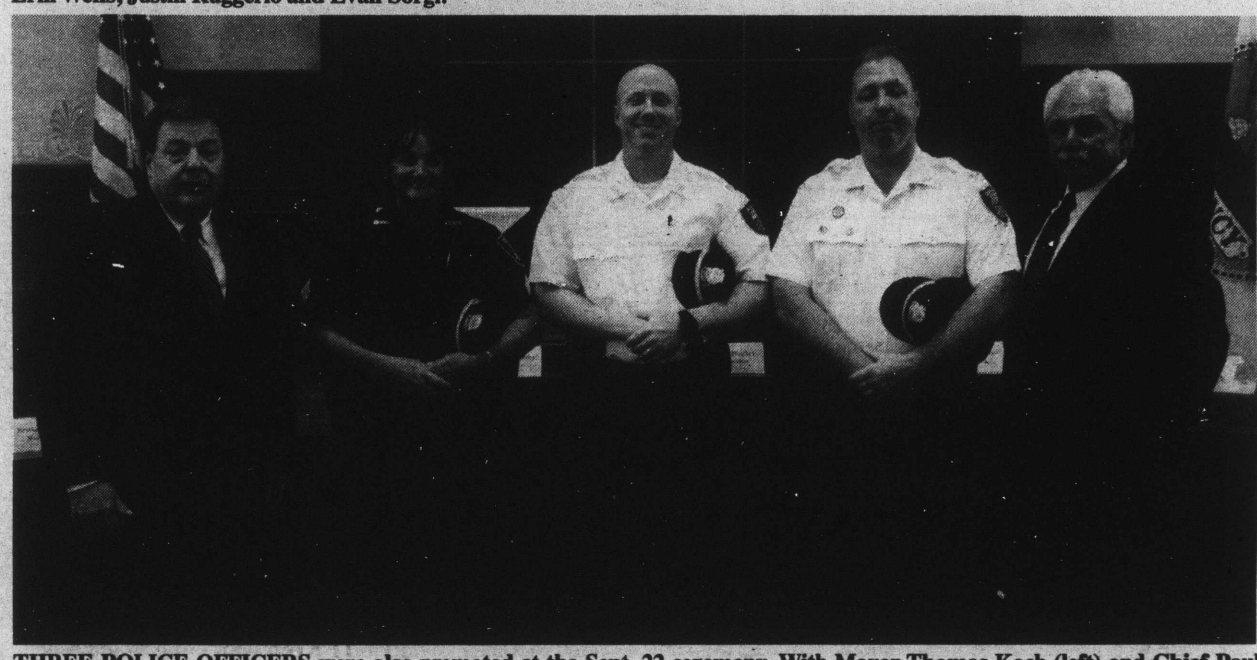

"He made the commitment and the commitment is paying off. We're one of the best cities in the commonwealth, I believe. We're a very safe city. Today I'm very thankful and pleased. These are one of the better days as the chief of police."

The Quincy Police Department now has 161 patrol officers, 30 sergeants, 14 lieutenants and four captains, Keenan said. The chief expects to hire two new officers in December or January following the retirements of two lieutenants – Timothy Sorgi and John Sullivan.

Koch said the Quincy Fire Department could hire as many as 16 or 18 firefighters later this year. The city's budget for the fiscal year that started July 1 included funding for four new firefighter positions, and the city has also received a federal grant to hire another four. The remaining new hires would be brought on to fill openings created by retirements.

Parent Academies Set

By TOM GORMAN

The Quincy Public Schools have set their schedule for a series of Parent Academies for the upcoming school year that offers workshops and informational programs for parents.

Senior Director of Curriculum Madeline Roy informed the school committee on Sept. 21 of the upcoming programs.

The first Parent Academies program, "An Evening with Maria Trozzi," is set for Thursday, Oct. 6 at the Central Middle School from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Trozzi is an assistant professor at Boston University School of Medicine and executive director of the Good Grief Program at Boston Medical Center.

According to the program guide, Trozzi will discuss the stresses families face as they deal with "the often complicated tasks of living with a child with a disability."

The presentation will include strategies to help parents understand and cope when their child is diagnosed with a disability. Trozzi will also share her nationally recognized conceptual model for working with educators that helps them "walk in the parents' shoes."

Trozzi, who authored the book, "Talking with Children About Loss," has provided crisis counseling to first responders of the Boston Marathon bombing and to communities and schools that were affected by the tragedy.

The program is hosted by the Quincy Public Schools' student support and special education departments in collaboration with the Quincy Parent Advisory Council (QPAC).

Other programs scheduled this fall are: "Dual Enrollment" on Oct. 12 at North Quincy High School and Oct 20 at Quincy High School for parents of students in dual enrollment courses. Both programs are from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

On Oct. 24, EL (English Language) Immigrant Parent Workshop will be held at the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center at 6 p.m. for immigrant parents of English learner pre-kindergarten students.

A program for parents of elementary school students, "Learning to Read, Part 1" will be held at the end of October, date and location to be announced. This program will provide parents with information of the developmental process of reading.

On Nov. 1, "Understanding Close Reading Strategies and How It Helps at Home" will be presented at the Point Webster School at 6 p.m.

Other programs will begin in January and will run through May.

In another matter, in response to the latest MCAS results from exams taken last spring, officials are gearing up to assess the scores. Superintendent of Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the committee that site assessments are being set up to "look at the MCAS results and develop action steps."

"We will look at where we've been too ambitious and not as ambitious," he said, adding that adjustments to the curriculum and programs would be carried out as warranted.

providing the seed money for us at the local level to do that. It's not an obligation we have, technically, but we believe it's one that's worthwhile that we should be involved in."

Koch said the $1.5 million would be enough to start the removal of lead service lines in Quincy, while leaving open the possibility additional funding might be needed. If necessary, those funds would come from the water enterprise fund.

The Water Department, he said, should know about many of the houses with lead service lines still in place. Residents should not be alarmed, Koch added, and most would also know if they had lead service lines and the steps to mitigate possible exposure to lead – such as letting the water run when turning on the tap.

"Most of them probably know and if you run your water for so many seconds it's usually not an issue," Koch said. "And by the way, today, I drink water out of the tap. I think I'm the only one in the house that does that – very few people drink water out of the tap anymore anyway. Most people are drinking bottled water no matter where you go, and unnecessarily so. But my point was today it's probably less of an issue than it ever was because of that.

"When the MWRA does their mailing every year, they have stuff right in that mailing talking about that and what you should do if you want to get it tested and all that stuff. It shouldn't be new to most homeowners – if you just bought a house and you're new to the house, maybe you're not aware of it, but I think most people are aware of what you do in certain cases."

Koch in August announced he would take advantage of a state initiative to test all sources of drinking water in each of the city's 19 public schools for lead and copper. The mayor at the time said he was doing so as a precaution and not because of any complaints about water quality in the schools.

Testing began Sept. 20 and will continue through Oct. 22. The testing takes place each morning before classes start and will not interfere with the schools' schedules. A complete schedule for the tests is available on the school system's website, quincypublicschools.com.

Happy 300th Birthday, Boston Light

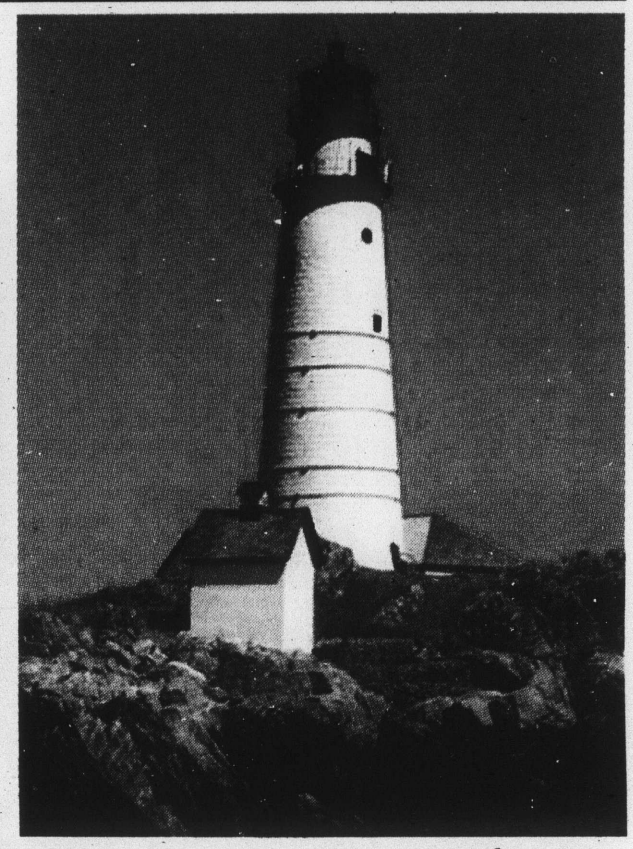

Second Oldest Working Lighthouse In Nation Marks Tercentennial

BRONZE PLAQUE notes Boston Light was designated a Registered National Historic Landmark by the U.S. Department of the Interior, National Park Service in 1964.

A SPIRAL STAIRCASE of 76 steps, plus two ladders brings visitors to a close-up view of Boston Light's second order Fresnel lens installed in 1859.

BOSTON LIGHT, located on little Brewster Island in Boston Harbor, is marking a major milestone this year: the 300th anniversary of the first lighthouse built on the island. The original lighthouse was first lit on Sept. 14, 1716. It was blown up by the British in 1776. The tower was eventually reconstructed and lit in 1783.

By MAUREEN MAZRIMAS

Boston Light on Little Brewster Island is an iconic symbol. She was the first guide to navigation in America. While automated in 1998, she is the last lighthouse in North America to be staffed by a resident keeper – Sally Snowman, the first female to officially hold that position.

A tour of Boston Light is amazing! Offered by the National Parks Service and the U.S. Coast Guard, tours will continue on Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Oct. 2 via a short boat ride which starts from the Boston Harbor Islands Welcome Center (near Long Wharf) in Boston. [Trips from Pemberton Point ended on Sept. 18.]

A spiral staircase of 76 steps, plus two ladders will bring you up close and personal to the second order Fresnel lens installed in 1859. The view is absolutely breathtaking! The beacon projects 1.8 million candle power, and can be seen for a distance of 26 miles! It is an awe-inspiring piece of machinery.

While Boston Light was the first lighthouse, she is no longer the "oldest" lighthouse. The British, who were "evacuated" from Boston on March 17, 1776 actually stayed around the outer harbor until June. Just before leaving Boston, they sent a boat ashore on Little Brewster and set a charge which destroyed the lighthouse. Four years later, Massachusetts Governor John Hancock asked the legislature to provide funding to rebuild the lighthouse. She was rebuilt in 1783, and is now the second oldest lighthouse after Sandy Hook in New Jersey. Boston Light is also the site of the nation's oldest foghorn.

Little Brewster is also home to the keeper's house, a cistern building, a bell previously used as a fog signal, and the fog horn building – and the most amazing natural beauty. Coast Guard Auxiliary and National Park Rangers are available to explain the geology, flora and fauna of the island and answer any questions regarding the light. It's a wonderful experience!

Dane, MacPherson Lead Quincy Over NQ In Girls Soccer

By BILL GRIFFIN

Much can change in a year.

Last year, Ally MacPherson lay in pain on the turf of Veterans' Memorial Stadium with a serious knee injury. Last Saturday, she played a terrific midfield as the co-captain of a Quincy soccer team which made history.

The Birthday Girl, senior Brianne Dane, used her electric quickness to score two goals and MacPherson stabilized a near flawless midfield and defense to give Quincy its first girls soccer victory over North Quincy in 28 years. That stat is according to former Red Raider girls soccer coach Paul Bregoli who stepped down from the program after 21 years earlier this year. Bregoli is now head coach of the girls varsity basketball team at North.

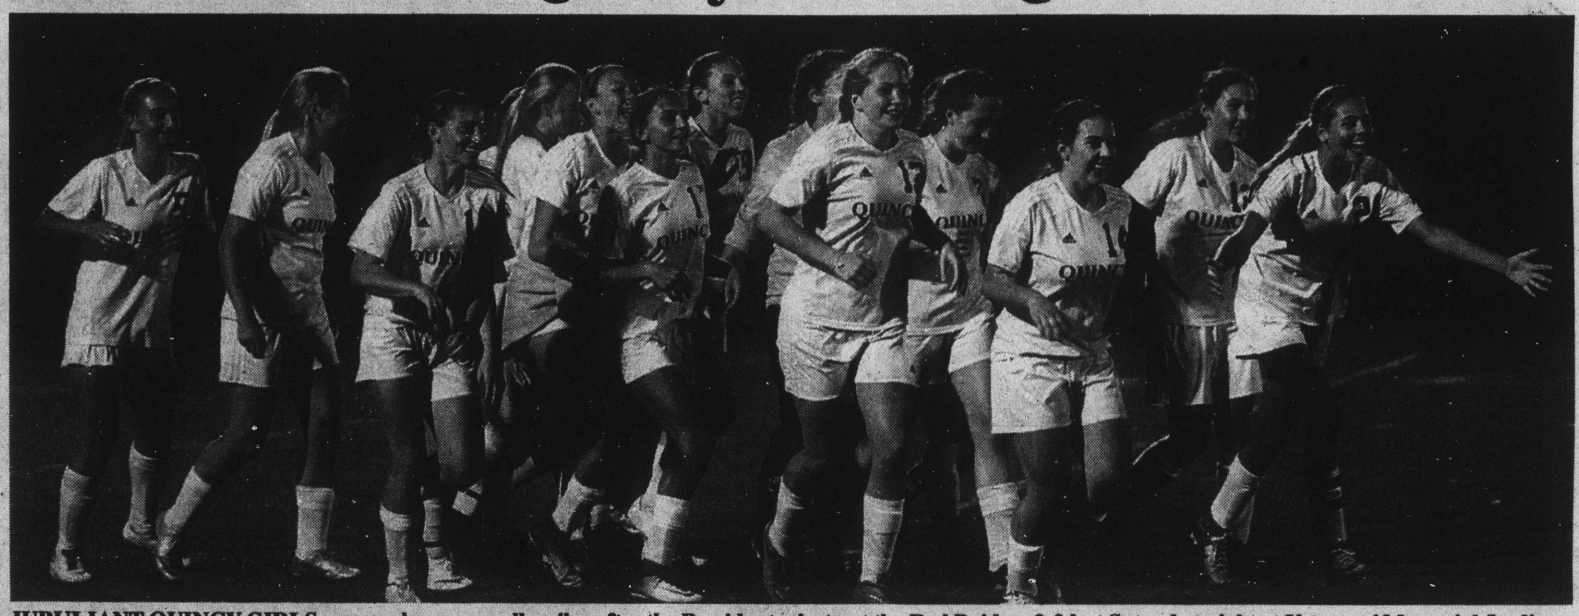

Quincy's 3-0 triumph over North was before an excellent crowd at the stadium.

MacPherson had a short and perfect response when she was told she played on the first Quincy team to beat North since 1988.

"Wow," she said with a wide grin. "That's older than me. That's almost as old as two of me. It means a lot because I'm a senior. It's a yearbook moment, something I'll tell my kids about."

To appreciate her joy, it is necessary to appreciate the road she traveled. MacPherson tore her ACL and meniscus in the fourth game of her junior year against Hingham. She had six months of endless physical therapy. She missed softball season. She is still not the same player she once was. She wears a bulky brace. She limps through stretches of the match. That booming leg which could kick a soccer ball from one end of the field to the other has not fully returned.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

COMPRESSION OF THE BODY'S LARGEST NERVE

The sciatic nerve, the single largest nerve in the body, starts in the lower back and branches out through the spinal vertebrae and down the legs. If it becomes compressed at any point, the result can be searing pain that travels from the lower back down through the buttock and leg. This condition, known as "sciatica," is common among older adults and obese and sedentary individuals. While it may be tempting for those suffering from sciatica to take to their beds, this is not advisable. Bed rest may only exacerbate the problem since inactivity weakens the muscles that support the spine. Chiropractic can help relieve pain and get the body moving by removing vertebral impingements that cause nerve irritation.

Pain from sciatica often limits one's activities. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, you'll find an experienced and helpful staff of health care professionals dedicated to serving your health care needs. We provide expert chiropractic care, from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Through comprehensive treatments we can help bring relief. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The risk of developing sciatica is higher among those who have worked in occupations that require a lot of twisting and bending of the spine, as well as among diabetics, who are more prone to suffer nerve damage.

Complete Effort Lifts Presidents Past Raiders

By BILL GRIFFIN

They had played good soccer. They had come close – so close – to beating the powers of the Patriot League early in their season, but when the first win came, the timing was fine. Just fine.

Juniors Kevin O'Shea and Mohammed Gouriche finished picture-perfect passing plays. Benito Carvahlo scored on a laser of a penalty shot. Carvahlo and his midfield mates controlled the flow of the game, and sophomore Owen Smyth anchored a stout defense with instinct and a powerful foot.

The complete effort lifted Quincy to a 3-0 win over North Quincy despite a terrific effort from Red Raiders' keeper Philip Thalheim before a large crowd at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

"We've played well all season, and I saw improvement tonight," said Quincy coach Mark Spendlove whose club went to 1-2-3 with the victory. "I think we connected a little better and moved the ball well deeper in their zone. Still it was a one-goal game at the half. I had to remind our players North was only one shot away from tying it up. With North, it is always a battle."

Quincy was on the threshold in its first five games. The Presidents earned ties with Scituate, Hingham and Duxbury, three teams who annually contend in the state tournament. Hingham had to rally late for the tie. In past years, these were four or five-goal losses for the Presidents. This is a veteran team who made the tournament last year. A win would surely come.

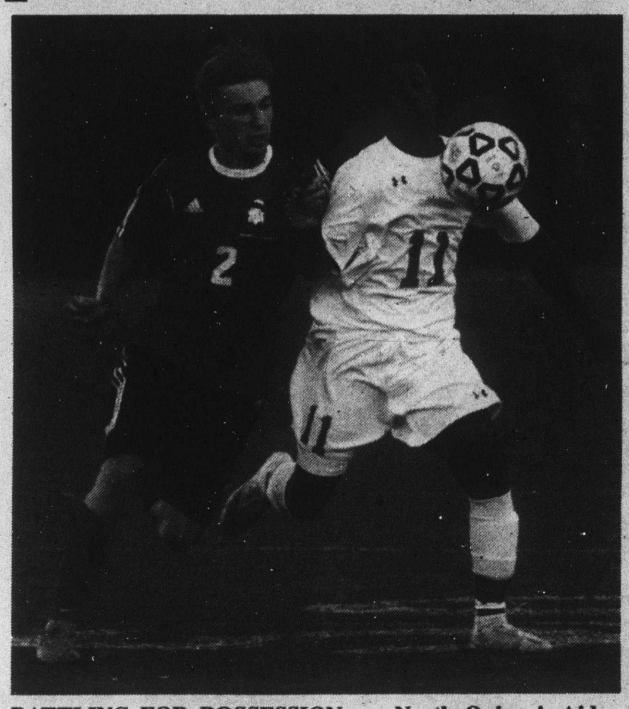

"I thought we possessed the ball better tonight. I don't think we showed all our ability, but it was a good step forward for us," said Spendlove.

North played hard. Thalheim made 12 saves, but he was a lot better than that. He made a split kick-save on a penalty shot in the first half. He not only stopped shots, he blunted threats by moving aggressively for 50-50 possessions, swatting away corner kicks, and handling through balls before they became a threat.

"This was our best effort of the year," said coach Rich Hanlon. "Thalheim is the real deal in goal. He's from Germany. He played midfield for us last year, but we needed a keeper. He's very aggressive. He's one of the best at coming out to beat the attacker to the ball."

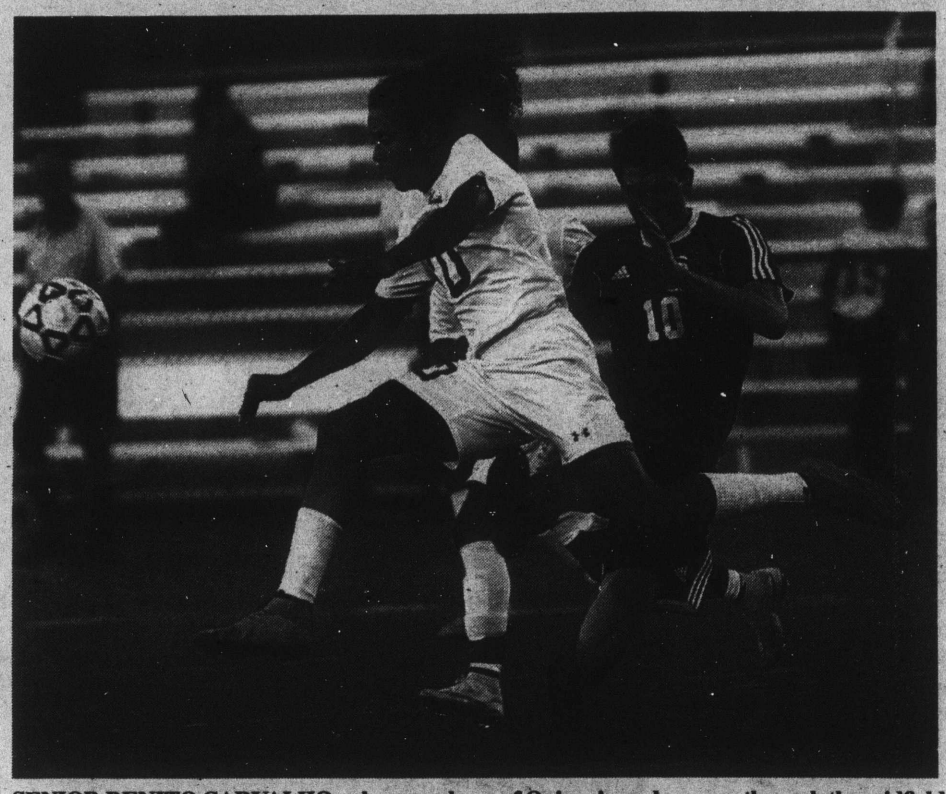

Stephen Cobble and Devlin St. Marie played excellent defensive matches for North. They not only handled threats, they moved

But she is smart. She knows how to play the game. She moves the ball to the right people. And she had herself a night of great laughter and rich satisfaction on the same field where she was injured a year ago.

"It does mean more to me because of what I went through with my knee," she said. "But the thing that means the most and motivates me is my teammates. We've played together for three or four years. We've all worked hard, we've improved, and we did this together. That's what means the most."

It was a rewarding win for third-year coach Seth Harmon who saw Quincy (1-4-1) put together 80 minutes of excellent soccer. Junior Kari Wismar chipped home a pluperfect penalty kick to take control of the match late in the first half. Dane celebrated her birthday by simply running away from everyone for two breakaway goals in the second half.

Junior Taylor Routhier was brilliant in the midfield slipping a series of spot-on through passes to Dane throughout the match. Co-captain Joelle Robinson supplied energy and intelligence in the midfield with Routhier. Freshman Tara McCleary backed up the defense, playing behind the fullback line, clearing the scoring area, and booming the ball out of trouble.

The defense of Liana Cunningham, Hannah Ford, and Lauren Saccoach protected senior Emi Guarente who earned the shutout in goal with sharp work, especially in the closing minutes when North refused to give in despite trailing by three goals.

"1988? That's a year before I was born," said Harmon. "This is the type of win every coach wants for his team. It has not been easy. We play in a difficult league with some of the best teams in the state. Add to that the stigma of not being able to beat our crosstown rival for so long, and it's been a challenge."

"Still, these kids have come to practice and worked hard every day. I'm so happy for them. Kari forced the penalty kick with a drive to the net. Her kick was perfect, high and into the far corner. Nobody was going to stop that. We want to get the ball to Brianne in open space because she is faster than 90 percent of defenders."

North (1-5-1) never stopped playing hard. Senior Ciara Viscione had a splendid night. She started on defense. She broke up a through pass from Routhier to Dane which looked like a sure goal. She blocked a free kick. She was tough and smart on the back line. When North fell behind, coach Emily Rooney moved her up front, and she created scoring chances for her teammates.

"Ciara is one those rare go-to players who can give a team whatever it needs: offense or defense. She's feisty and she plays with an edge which is something you can't teach," said Rooney.

North never stopped pressing. Kerin Coleman, Emily Butruccio, and Alison Radzik all created good chances in the final minutes.

"That's what I love about my team. They always give 100 percent no matter what the score is. I was proud of their effort, and we're looking forward to playing Quincy again," said Rooney.

It was unfair, but fitting that MacPherson could barely walk by the end of the game. She strained a quad with less than six minutes left. Both of her legs were wrapped in ice. She sat for a bit and then limped to greet her friends. She could not run the victory sprint while the crowd cheered in celebration. She stood on the sideline with arms outstretched. She waited for her teammates, and they wrapped each other in one happy embrace.

"I know that my knee will never be the same again, but this is something that I will always have," she said.

That she will.

the ball well into midfield and the attacking zone. St. Marie made the play of the game late in the first half when he seemingly appeared from empty air to boot away a hard drive which was labeled for an open corner of the net.

"They were both good defenders for us," said Hanlon. "That was a great play by St. Marie. Aiden Ring also had a strong game for us on defense."

The Presidents are their best when they pass the ball. Less than 10 minutes into the match, Clayton Rodrigues sent a bullseye cross from the left wing which O'Shea headed home. After Carvahlo blasted home a penalty kick early in the second half, he sent Gouriche in clear with a short, touch pass, and Gouriche made a one-touch finish for the 3-0 final.

"I think you saw a glimpse of our passing tonight, especially on the first and third goals," said Spendlove. "I was happy with Beinto's penalty shot. We've been after him to go for more velocity. He's been caressing the ball to the goal, trying to pick a corner. He has a strong foot, and we want him to use it."

Carvahlo was a magician in the midfield with his dribbling and short passes. Tristan McCormick, Paulo Soares and Rodrigues also were also crisp and sure moving the ball to the attack.

"I thought all the midfielders were good tonight," said Spendlove.

Smyth was a force on the fullback line. He kept the scoring area clear. He has the reflexes to stop and re-direct hard shots on goal and is able to combine them with a booming boot which can send the ball soaring from defense to offense with one, swift kick.

"Owen has a lot of talent," said Spendlove. "Melvin (Gonzalez), Connor (Porter), Ali (Mokalled), and Paulo (Soares) all played well well on defense for us as well. It was a good win to get and hopefully, we can start a run with it."

Quincy is at Plymouth North Wednesday at 4 p.m. North (0-5) is at Hanover Thursday at 6:30 p.m.

Cross-County Highlights

Pembroke used a strong pack of five runners to ignore the lead runner and concentrate on taking as many other top 10 spots as possible and took both ends of a meet at Pageant Field.

Jimmy Cannon went wire-to-wire again for his third win in as many meets. But Aidan Golden could only grab 9th place and Ryan Polsgrove, Kevin White and Nick Ouellette finished 14th, 16th and 18th for a 20-43 loss.

On the girls side, Abby Murphy continued her dominance running a personal best for the year 16:48 for the challenging 2.5 mile course. Devin Hiltunen was 8th and Kara Polsgrove ws 9th as the Titans put six runners behind Murphy. Olivia Palazzi (15th) and Mairead Kelly (16th) closed out the scoring for QNQ.

"We could have run more conservatively early-on. It might have made a difference," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We'll see these folks at the League meet. It'll definitely be a different strategy." QNQ hosts Plymouth south Wednesday, Oct. 5.

Quincy Bows To Silver Lake

Presidents At W-H Friday Night

By JOE REARDON

Just how young is the 2016 edition of the Quincy High football team that has been struggling out of the gate?

So young in fact that there were times during Friday night's tough 40-7 loss to big, strong undefeated Silver Lake when the Presidents had an unheard of seven sophomores on defense against the Lakers.

And when a squad has that many underclassmen starting it's going to take its lumps, no matter how talented they may be. It's just the nature of the game. Throw in the fact that a bug went through the team during the week to leave several players at less than 100 percent, making a monumental task that much bigger.

Quincy head coach Bill Reardon knows the team is going to take its fair share of lumps this season, but the experience is going to go a long way to develop the young talent on the Presidents' roster.

"I'm not going to be negative about it," said Reardon. "We are who we are. We're trying and we're working. We learn on the fly. We use all our timeouts so we can go over it. They see it. They get it. They make the adjustments. That's a good football team over there. They spent some time in the weight room during the offseason. There's no doubt about it. That's what we're trying to get to."

That's not to say the Presidents didn't make plays to put themselves in position to score. There were several and it's a good indication that the football landscape at Quincy High will get better with time and experience.

The biggest defensive play of the game for the Presidents came in the first quarter when J.J. Camara was in the right position and made a nice athletic move, diving to intercept a deflected pass by quarterback Alec Snell to give Quincy the ball back at the the Lakers' 23 yard line.

Four plays later, sophomore quarterback Colin Keaveny gave the Veterans Memorial Field crowd a glimpse of his rifle throwing arm when he hit receiver Shorn Hawthorne with a perfect pass down the right sideline for a 35-yard score. Mikhayla Foley made good on the point-after kick and the Presidents had a 7-0 lead 5:37 into the game.

The decision to start Keaveny came down to the fact that he was the healthiest signal caller available on game day. "The whole team has been sick all week," said Reardon. "He got healthier as the week went on."

The recovered turnover was the second for Presidents after Brian Nguyen was there to alertly pounce on a fumble on a Quincy punt after the Presidents' opening series.

Quincy's scoring drive proved to be a wakeup call for the Lakers as they registered touchdowns on their next two possession to take a 13-7 lead. The Presidents stopped a third potential score in the waning minute of the half when Jamal Williams sacked Snell for a six-yard loss on a big third-down play to keep the score at 28-7.

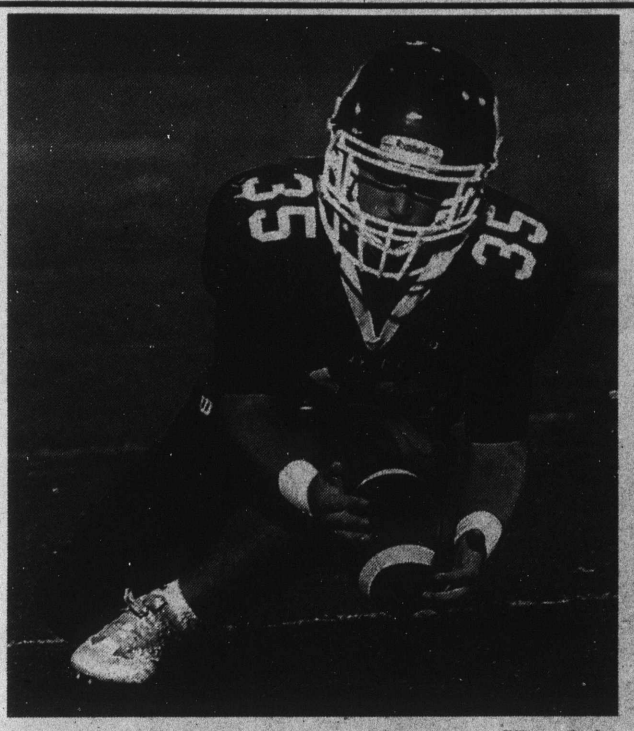

Silver Lake continued its scoring spree in the second half with touchdowns on its first two possessions to swell the lead to 40-7. Quincy did block the point-after kick on the first possession score that came when Snell hit a wide open Carson Snell with a 41-yard pass just 18 seconds into the third quarter for a 34-7 advantage.

The Presidents looked good driving the ball on the final series of the third quarter and into the fourth. Running back Dominic Laptiste, who led Quincy with 38 yards on the ground, picked up 14 rushing yards and quarterback Nicholas Maberry hooked up with Nick Cheney on a roll out for a 22-yard gain to put the ball at the Silver Lake 24. That was as close as Quincy would get as a grounding penalty and incomplete pass gave the Lakers the ball back at their 34 with 9:06 remaining.

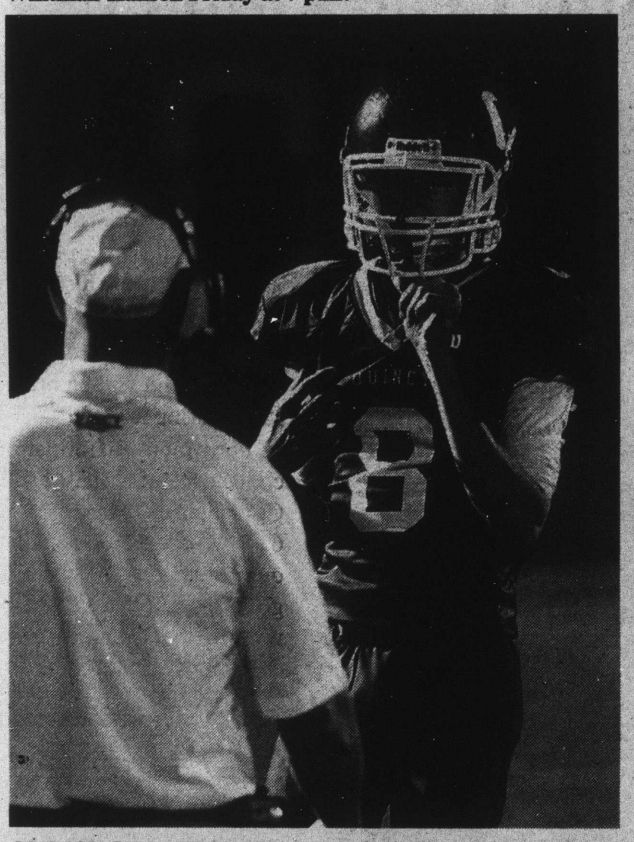

At 0-3 the schedule doesn't get any softer for the Presidents this Friday when they take on Whitman-Hanson. What's important is the team morale is good and it's able to take away positives from each game.

"It wasn't bad in the first quarter," said Reardon. "We came out with some fire. We started to create some turnovers. It's coming along, but we have a long way to go. There were seven sophomores on defense at one point. We're going to watch the film tomorrow. We're going to point out the mistakes and hit the practice field next week and get better at it. There's no cupcakes on the schedule."

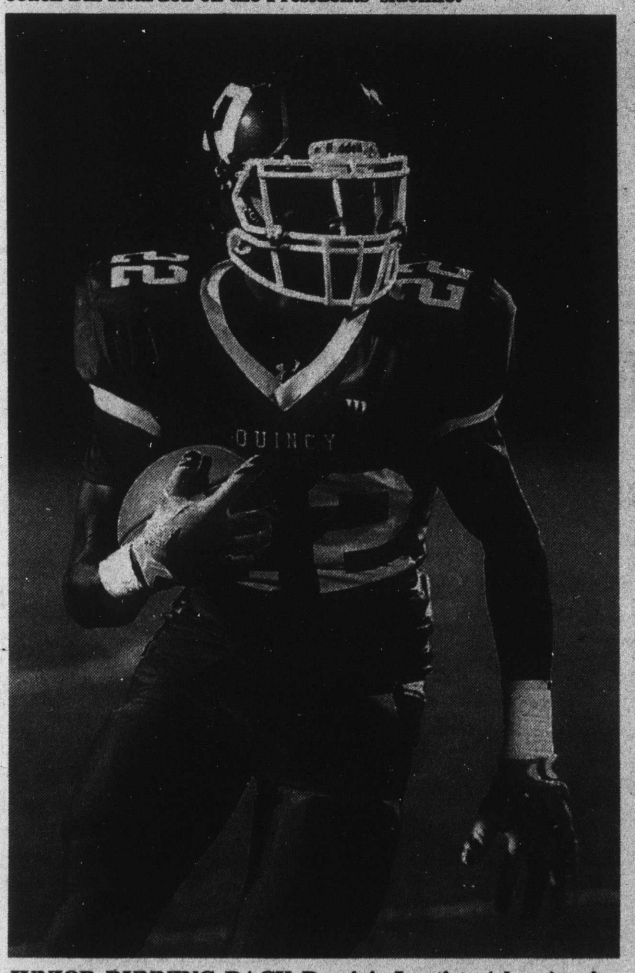

"I think they're ok. They haven't been down at least to this point. The sophomores are getting in position, but physically they're not able to compete against a team of seniors."

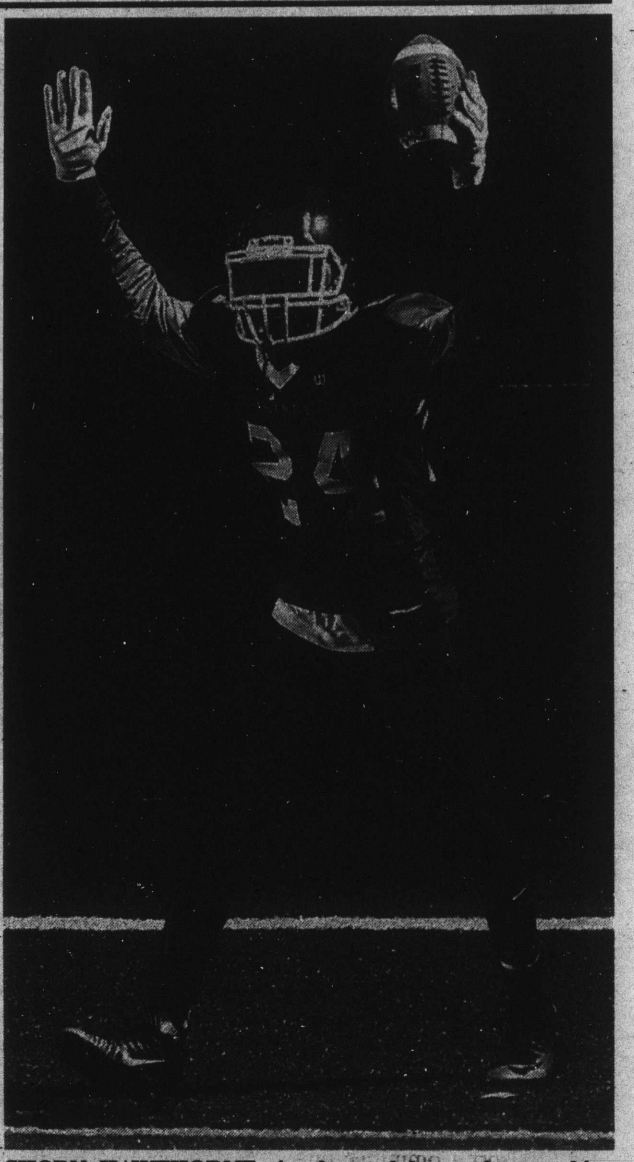

QUINCY'S J.J. CAMARA dives to intercept a Silver Lake pass Friday night. The turnover led to Quincy's only touchdown four plays later when sophomore quarterback Colin Keaveny threw a 35-yard strike to receiver Shorn Hawthorne. The Lakers defeated the Presidents 40-7. Quincy (0-3) visits Whitman-Hanson Friday at 7 p.m.

DPW Community Meeting At FR Clubhouse

The Department of Public Works is conducting sewer and stormwater drainage investigation projects in the city this fall.

The public is invited to join department and members of the City's Stormwater Advisory Committee on Thursday, Oct. 6, at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Road to learn more about the projects.

"This important work reflects Mayor Koch's commitment to improving our beaches and waterways," said DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi. "This continuing investment into our utility infrastructure is designed to both protect that investment and proactively keep down costs to our ratepayers."

Topics to be discussed at the meeting include:

- The difference between a storm system and the sewer system
- What stormwater runoff is
- Why stormwater runoff is a problem
- What are some of the solutions to stormwater pollution including rain gardens and rain barrels
- Why the sewer and stormwater drainage system is essential to economic vitality
- How the sewer and stormwater drainage systems function
- What citizens can do to help us keep these systems operating efficiently and effectively,
- The scope of the work projects.

Work is expected to continue through the early winter. During this construction period DPW officials say the public can expect:

- To see private contractors hired by the city in your area accessing city manholes,
- If you have a manhole on your property, contractors may need pedestrian access to it,
- To be contacted by the city if a contractor needs access to your property/residence,
- To see private contractors sampling drainage water from city stormwater drainage structures,
- Noise, odors, and traffic control associates with some of this work,
- Smoke testing as a way to diagnose pipe defects
- This non-toxic, non-staining white smoke can occasionally enter homes but poses no harm. Open a window, pour water down a drain and contact a representative for Flow Assessment Services who will be on the street during testing.

For more information contact Deirdre Hall, DPW Compliance Manager at 617-376-1525 or dhall@quincyma.gov. You can also go to the DPW's website at www.quincyma.gov/government/PWD, or drop by the DPW office at 55 Sea Street to pick up a variety of publications on the subject.

Hazardous Waste Drop-Off Saturday

this free service to assist residents in the proper disposal of hazardous waste and to protect the environment.

Some of the eligible items for disposal are oil based paints, thinners, strippers, oils and varnishes, all household cleaners including drain and plumbing cleaners, automotive fluids including oil and gasoline, chemical fertilizers and insecticides, polishes, ni-cad and lithium batteries, roofing tar and driveway sealants. See our ad on the back page of this week's Quincy Sun.

Of the utmost importance, said DPW officials, is all mercury containing products such as thermostats, thermometers, fluorescent tubes, CFL (swirly) light bulbs, button batteries and mercurochrome. Once released into the environment, mercury persists for long periods of time and does not degrade into harmless chemicals.

Mercury can damage the nervous system, brain, kidneys, liver and immune system. Developing brains and nervous systems of children are very sensitive to mercury.

Officials also advised the following:

When gathering products for the drop-off event leave materials in original containers and tighten all caps and lids. Sort and pack items separately in sturdy upright boxes.

NEVER MIX CHEMICALS.

Pack your car the morning of the event and drive directly to the DPW. Do not smoke while handling hazardous material and do not bring children in the car with you.

Items not accepted at the hazardous materials drop-off day are latex paint, tires, ammunition, fireworks and explosives, commercial/industrial/biological waste, prescription medicine and radioactive waste.

For the proper disposal of these materials visit the City's website www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/Trash.cfm, and scroll down to "How can I get rid of..."

Author Bill Arienti Book Launch, Signing Oct. 5

Author Bill Arienti, a retired Quincy firefighter, will hold a book launch and signing party Wednesday, Oct. 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. at Alba's, 1486 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Arienti is the author of "The Gift is in the Giving," a non-fiction book of stories that chronicle how the smallest act of kindness by one person can make a world of difference for another.

As a Quincy firefighter, Arienti has worked with other Quincy agencies and businesses to help people in need, but he said he is most impressed by the kindness and compassion of the people of Quincy. These people, without being asked, have given graciously of themselves to assure the less fortunate among us would be provided with life's daily necessities, as well as a few of its smaller luxuries.

Arienti describes his book as "an uplifting account that brings happiness to the hopeless, optimism to the downtrodden and peace to the troubled." He said with the level of anxiety that accompanies the advent of the holiday season, the book gives a fresh and heartwarming perspective that many of us have been missing for too long a time.

Airbag Recall, Dead Batteries, Buy A Volkswagen?

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

My wife and I both drive cars that have current recalls on the airbags. Her car is a 2011 Honda CR-V and my car is the 2014 Mustang GT. I believe the same company manufactured the airbags: Takata. We were notified by our dealerships that there is no inventory for the replacement bags and they would contact us when the new bag is ready for installation. Do you have any updates on this recall? Is the recall more about liability than reliability?

It is my understanding that vehicle manufacturers are repairing the older models first. As the airbag ignitors get old especially in high humidity areas coupled with high temperatures, and age, this defective combination can cause the inflators to explode and cause serious injuries or in some cases even deaths have been attributed to this recall. Regarding reliability versus liability: I would say, certainly a combination of both, some reports show that the recall may not be completed until 2019. To keep track of the recall go to www.safercar.gov

I have been following your comments about dead batteries in Subaru cars that get left unattended for short periods of time. For the first time ever I will be going to Florida for three months and will leave my car in my garage. Do I need to do anything special to insure the car restarts?

Connecting a "float" style trickle charger like the Battery Tender is a simple solution and the battery will stay fully changed and ready for you when you return. The second option is disconnecting the battery. Some cars when disconnecting the battery can activate the cars radio anti-theft system. Read the car's owner's manual to see if you will need a code when you connect the battery. The best option always is to have someone drive the car for 30 minutes or so every couple of weeks. This will help keep the battery charged and "exercise" the car a bit.

I have 2015 Chevrolet V-8 pickup truck purchased used with 20,000 miles on it. I have noticed over past couple of months that the transmission or engine vibrates a bit at 30-40 miles per hour. The dealer told me this is normal, but I'm concern about a long term problem. Any ideas?

I would start with a scan of the trucks computer system just to make sure everything is within normal limits. What I suspect the problem is that you are feeling the engine changing from eight-cylinder to four-cylinder operation. In addition to the vibration you may also notice a slight change in the exhaust sound. This is a normal condition of the active fuel management system

Recently the battery in my car died after leaving a door open overnight. My next door neighbor tried to jump start my car. The car started but now the speedometer and radio are not working. Any ideas or information on how to fix this problem?

I have seen this problem before and providing nothing was damaged (batteries connected backwards) when the battery was jumpstarted it may be able to be fixed quite easily. Similar to a computer being re-booted the car's problems can be remedied in the same fashion. Have someone disconnected the battery cables from the battery and hold them together for about a few minutes, then re-connect the battery. This procedure will sometimes exorcise the electrical gremlins. If this doesn't fix the problem, then you will need to look at the individual components and wiring for problems.

A friend of mine has a 2000 Chevrolet Suburban that he uses for odd jobs. The problem is the rear window won't go up but only sometimes. He doesn't have much money to spend on this and I'm trying to help him out. Any suggestions?

The intermittent part of the problem actually helps with the diagnosis. I suspect a broken wire to the rear gate. The wiring could have become damaged over the years of constant opening and closing of the rear gate. The other issue could be the motor itself is just starting to wear out. These little motors get rusty and will fail over time.

I currently own a 2008 Cadillac DTS. It has been a great car with no real mechanical problems. I am a senior citizen that buys American automobiles and like the room and size of the DTS. With the DTS approaching 100,000 miles the other Cadillac models were small compared to the DTS. I am now looking at the new Cadillac CT6. The car with the conventional V6 engine looks like a great replacement for the DTS. Any thoughts about the new CT6?

The Cadillac CT6 should be a good replacement for the DTS. During my limited test drive I found the 335 horsepower engine performed well and the overall ride and handling was quite good. I was also impressed with the fit and finish of interior. I the spirit of full disclosure I haven't spent my usual road test time behind the wheel of this car. It seems as if Cadillac spends their budget on big events rather than putting cars into press fleets for evaluation.

I own a 2008 Mercury Sable; it is a decent sized car with a generally nice ride. The problem is that when people ride in the back seat the car rides low. I have asked about adjusting the ride height with new springs or shocks/struts, but no one seems very interested or confident that this will fix the problem. If its new springs are the answer do I replace front and back springs?

Chances are that over the past eight years the springs have started to sag which has resulted in the low ride when the car is loaded. There is a specific ride height for every vehicle including the Sable. If you were to replace the springs it would make sense to replace the rear springs and struts as one unit. They will be a matched set and replacing them as a component will help keep labor costs down. A cheap alternative that was once popular was spring stabilizers. These are plastic spacers that are placed between the spring coils that can to some extent make up for weak springs. In my opinion a temporary fix but it may help.

I own a 2013 Cadillac XTS4 with 25,000 miles. On a recent trip from New Jersey to Rhode Island, I was in bumper to bumper traffic through New York and Connecticut. After about two hours, the A/C went from cold to warm and the blower, from high to a trickle. I went to the Cadillac dealer and they said nothing is wrong with the air conditioner. Any suggestions?

More than likely the air conditioner evaporator (the coil nearest the cabin) froze up, this can happen if the air conditioner is slightly low on refrigerant and the humidity levels are very high. This is a fairly common condition that can happen with both vehicle air conditioners and even home units. At this point if you find yourself in the same situation and the A/C stops cooling, shut off the A/C wait five minutes or so, if it operates normally again have your dealer check the state-of-charge for the climate control system.

I have a 2009 Lexus RX350 and my question is why would one of the covers blow off the battery?

This is typical when a charging system allows the battery to overcharge. The charging system voltage should read about 13.2 to 14.8 volts. If the charging voltage is high there will be an excess or hydrogen gas and the cover can pop off due to pressure over in more serious cases a slight spark causes the hydrogen to ignite. I would have the charging system and the battery tested and most likely replaced.

With all of Volkswagens issues would you buy a Volkswagen? I'm looking for a small four-door car and the Jetta still looks good.

I did buy a Volkswagen, right before the cheating scandal and it is a fun to drive little car that has performed well. I recently thoroughly evaluated the 2016 Jetta with the 1.8 liter four-cylinder engine. It was peppy, handled well, returned 36 miles per gallon on the highway and was comfortable for four adults.

AAA: U.S. Drivers Waste $2.1 Billion Annually On Premium Gasoline

According to new AAA research, American drivers wasted more than $2.1 billion dollars in the last year by using premium-grade gasoline in vehicles designed to run on regular fuel.

With 16.5 million U.S. drivers having used premium fuel despite the vehicle manufacturer's recommendation in the last 12 months, AAA conducted a comprehensive fuel evaluation to determine what, if any, benefit the practice offers to consumers. After using industry-standard test protocols designed to evaluate vehicle performance, fuel economy and emissions, AAA found no benefit to using premium gasoline in a vehicle that only requires regular-grade fuel.

"Drivers see the 'premium' name at the pump and may assume the fuel is better for their vehicle," said John Paul, AAA Northeast Senior Manager of Traffic Safety. "AAA cautions drivers that premium gasoline is higher octane, not higher quality, and urges drivers to follow the owner's manual recommendations for their vehicle's fuel."

In partnership with the Automobile Club of Southern California's Automotive Research Center, AAA tested 87-octane (regular) and 93-octane (premium) gasoline in vehicles equipped with a V-8, V-6 or I4 engine designed to operate on regular-grade fuel.

To evaluate the effects of using a higher-octane fuel when it's not required by the manufacturer, each vehicle was tested on a dynamometer, which is essentially a treadmill for cars that is designed to measure horsepower, fuel economy and tailpipe emissions when using both fuel types and variety of driving conditions. The laboratory testing found no significant increases in any tested category, indicating the practice of using premium gasoline when it's not required for the vehicle offers no advantage.

"AAA's tests reveal that there is no benefit to using premium gasoline in a vehicle that requires regular fuel," Paul said. "Premium gasoline is specifically formulated to be compatible with specific types of engine designs and most vehicles cannot take advantage of the higher octane rating."

To understand the magnitude of the issue, AAA surveyed U.S. drivers to understand what type of fuel their vehicles require and the frequency at which they upgrade to premium fuel. Results reveal:

• Seventy percent of U.S. drivers currently own a vehicle that requires regular gasoline, while 16 percent drive vehicles that require premium fuel. The remaining 14 percent own a vehicle that requires mid-grade gasoline (10 percent) or uses an alternative energy source (4 percent).

• In the last 12 months, 16.5 million U.S. drivers unnecessarily used premium-grade gasoline in their vehicle at least once. On average, those that upgraded to premium gasoline did so at least once per month.

• In the last 12 months, U.S. drivers unnecessarily used premium gasoline in their vehicle more than 270 million times.

"When it comes to gasoline, 'premium' does not mean 'better' if your vehicle doesn't require it," Paul said. "Drivers looking to upgrade to a higher quality fuel for their vehicle should save their money and select a TOP TIER™ gasoline, not a higher-octane one."

Previous AAA research found that fuel quality varies significantly among gasoline retailers and that using a gasoline that meets TOP TIER standards can result in 19 times fewer engine deposits, increase vehicle performance and improve fuel economy. To protect vehicle investments, AAA urges drivers to use the appropriate gasoline as determined by their car's manufacturer (regular or premium) that meets TOP TIER standards for engine cleanliness and performance.

To calculate the total annual cost of using premium gasoline when not required by the vehicle manufacturer, AAA conducted a comprehensive analysis that included a U.S. consumer survey, Federal Highway Administration data, per-gallon costs of premium gasoline and regular gasoline and the average number of fill-ups annually. All testing was conducted at the Automotive Club of Southern California's Automotive Research Center in Los Angeles, California, using an industry-standard chassis dynamometer, emissions test equipment and Environmental Protection Agency driving cycles.

All gasoline used for testing was EPA Tier III certification fuel with ten percent ethanol content in both regular and premium grades.

Certified test fuel was used to remove variability in fuel quality and additives. For this study, AAA did not evaluate the effects of using regular fuel in an engine that requires premium gasoline.

For additional information about premium fuel, including the full test report and fact sheet, visit NewsRoom.AAA.com.

Gerald E. 'Jerry' Bertrand, 69

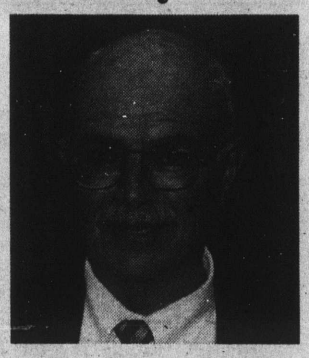

Gerald E. "Jerry" Bertrand, age 69, of Scituate, formerly of Weymouth and Boston, died peacefully, Saturday, Sept. 24, 2016 at the South Shore Rehabilitation and Skilled Care Center in Rockland.

He was born and raised in Quincy and was a graduate of North Quincy High School, Class of 1964 and Bridgewater State College, Class of 1968. He had lived in Scituate for 10 years, previously living in Weymouth and Boston.

Jerry was a dedicated and popular Social Studies teacher at the Gates Intermediate School in Scituate from 1968 to 2006. In the early 1970's and for many years, Jerry was treasurer of the Scituate Teacher's Association and was committed to making their yearly scholarship drive a success.

Outside of the classroom and well beyond the requirements of his teaching job, Jerry organized countless ski trips, rock climbing expeditions, and New York weekends. He also chaperoned student visits to Quebec and London.

Jerry had a real passion for American history and shared it with his students. He created an interesting and dynamic atmosphere in his classroom at Gates with souvenirs from his travels to Europe and within the U.S. In fact, his ceiling was covered with colorful flags from the various countries of the United Nations. The U.N., the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the World Trade Center were focal points of the many N.Y.C. field trips Jerry organized and chaperoned. On these weekends, Jerry was also able to introduce his students to the New York theatre he so loved.

GERALD E. BERTRAND

He collected theater bills and posters from plays in Boston, New York, and London, American Indian jewelry from summer road trips to Colorado, Utah, and New Mexico, and sports memorabilia from his favorite teams.

Jerry was well-known for his courteous manner, his sense of humor, his perfect penmanship, and his impeccable grammar and spelling. For many years he held a part-time job manning the transcription desk at The Boston Globe, typing and editing stories as the reporters called them in.

Former students will remember the chairs in perfect rows, the snack drawer, the surprise "notebook checks," and most importantly, a true gentleman's love of teaching.

Beloved son of the late Kenneth F. Bertrand and the late Eleanor L. (Bussolini) Bertrand-Wolfgang and her late husband Frank.

Devoted brother of Kenneth J. Bertrand and his wife Kerry of Quincy. Loving uncle of Luke and Caroline.

Jerry is also survived by many nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy on Friday, Sept. 30th at 11 a.m. Relatives and friends are invited to attend.

Visiting Hours at the funeral home on Thursday 4 – 8 p.m. At the request of the family, interment services will be private.

For those who wish, donations in Jerry's memory may be made to the charity of your choice.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin
(Never Known to Fail)

O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendour of Heaven. Blessed mother of the son of God, Immaculate Virgin assist me in this necessity, O Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. This prayer must be said for three days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. L.V.D. 9/29

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone from your past could arrive with welcome news concerning your future. Meanwhile, avoid taking sides in a workplace confrontation until you have more facts to go on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A decision about a relationship could have longer-lasting consequences than you might imagine, so be sure of your facts before you act. A trusted friend can help.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A strained relationship could be restored with more personal contact between the two of you. Letting others act as your go-between only adds to the ongoing estrangement.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) New facts could mean taking a new path toward a goal you've been hoping to reach. However, be sure all your questions are answered before you undertake to shift directions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good week for all you fine Felines to turn your attention to some important considerations, such as your health, your job situation and the status of important relationships.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Avoid making a quick decision about a matter that needs more study. Keep your mind open for possibilities, even if they don't seem plausible -- at least not yet.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might welcome the emphasis on openness in relationships that mark this period. But it's a good idea to avoid sharing personal secrets with people you hardly know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There are still some questions that need to be asked and answered before you can feel confident enough to make a potentially life-changing decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some lingering effects from a now largely resolved workplace confrontation could make things difficult for you. Act on this before it becomes serious.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You feel you're finally in control of your own life after months of making compromises and concessions you never felt comfortable with. Congratulations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) No sooner do you decide to pass on one job offer than another suddenly turns up. This one might not have everything you're looking for, but it's worth checking out.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Congratulations. With Jupiter's strong influence dominating this week, don't be surprised to get some good news about a troubling financial matter.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are usually kind and loving. But you can be highly critical of those who don't measure up to your high standards.

The local group that has spent the last six years organizing Flags for Veterans Island – a traffic island in Fort Square adorned with hundreds of American flags in the lead up to Memorial Day and Veterans Day – was recently honored by the City Council for its work.

The council honored the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, during its meeting on Sept. 19.

Councillor Noel DiBona, who is the squadron's junior vice commander and the chairman of the council's veterans committee, presented the commendation to the group. When the squadron began decorating the island in 2010 it had ten flags, DiBona noted; 400 flags will fly there this year in honor of living and deceased service members and veterans.

"It is a sight to see," DiBona said.

Additionally, the island now includes a walkway with nearly 400 engraved bricks that have been installed this year, along with memorial benches.

"In recognition and appreciation of the six-year anniversary of the Flags for Veterans Island, we applaud you for your efforts in recognizing the city's veterans with the beautiful and moving patriotic tribute," DiBona said, reading from the citation presented to the group.

"This tribute to all who served, still serve and paid the ultimate sacrifice from all branches of the military is truly awe inspiring. We thank you for your service to our country and commend you for the dedication to our fellow veterans."

DiBona also thanked Mayor Thomas Koch for his support of Flags for Veterans Island.

Paul Moody, commander of SAL Squadron 294 and the coordinator of the Flags for Veterans Island, thanked the DiBona and the council for the commendation.

"There's not much more I can say that you haven't already said," Moody stated. "Thank you."

Council President Kirsten Hughes, who chaired the council's veterans committee before DiBona, said it was an honor to serve local veterans and groups like the Sons of the American Legion. She encouraged younger veterans to join those groups and carry on the work they do.

"I know the posts are in a funny time where it's difficult to find new members. I know the younger folks coming back are not as active in their posts and at this time I'd just like to encourage those returning veterans or younger veterans to come in, to join their posts, to join the veterans groups, because this group you see behind you is just an example of some wonderful men," Hughes said.

"But time moves on and they need younger blood to get in there and really do the work, do the flags. I'm grateful to Councillor DiBona and other folks who have joined at the post who are able to carry that mantle for the next 20, the next 30 years as these gentlemen and women have done."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, a member of the SAL squadron, said he has taken his daughter, Violet, to the island for ceremonies there the past two years. Palmucci said the island helps teach the idea of service and sacrifice to younger people.

"It allows us to start that conversation about service and about what it means and the symbolism of the flags and the service of the folks that each one of the flags at that island represents," Palmucci said.

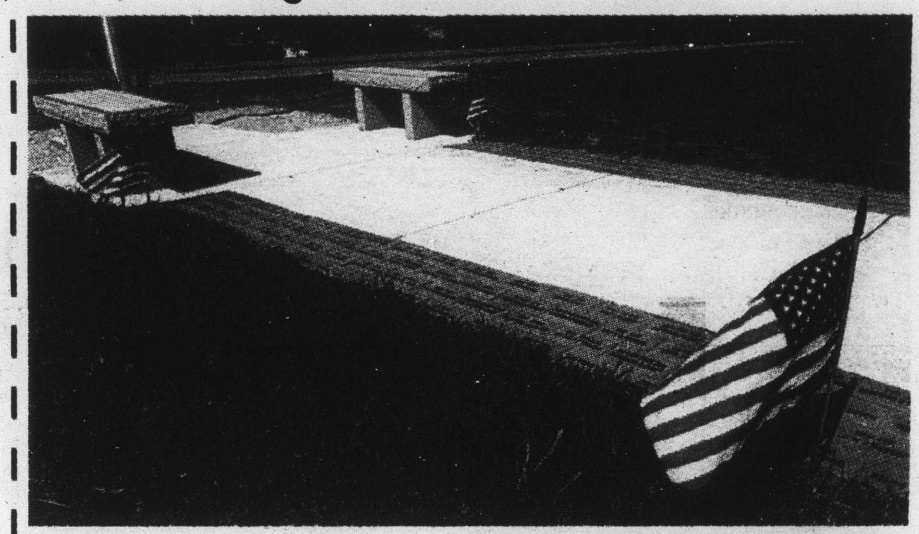

"It's not only a fine tribute to the folks who are represented there, but it's also putting forward that notion of service and sacrifice to younger people, which is so important in helping shape our community and our country moving forward.

"Thank you again, all of you, for the work that you do in making this such a great success and such a wonderful, wonderful thing to have in our city."

$1.5M For Replacing Lead Lines

Interest-Free Loan To Fund Work On 141 Privately-Owned Lines

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy plans to replace 141 lead service lines connecting water mains to homes next year at a cost of up to $1.5 million.

The City Council on Monday approved Quincy's participation in a Massachusetts Water Resources Authority program that will provide an interest-free loan to cover the cost of removing the lead service lines, which are privately owned.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi said the loan would be paid back over 10 years and would cost each ratepayer in the city $1.58 on their quarterly water bills during that span – a little more than $6 per year and $60 total over the next decade.

Raymondi told the council work to remove those lead service lines could begin in April and would take about four months to complete. DPW records indicate 141 homes still have lead service lines that carry water from the city's mains to the residences, Raymondi

City Aims To Acquire Vacant Lot

Owner Of Independence Ave. Parcel Owes Over $800K In Unpaid Taxes

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch hopes to acquire a vacant Independence Avenue parcel on the Braintree border that has accrued more than $800,000 in unpaid property taxes since the 1980s.

Koch on Monday submitted a request to the City Council to accept a deed for the parcel of land at 245 Independence Ave. from the owner of the property – identified in the city assessor's database as Frederick Conroy of Lexington-based Security Fund Trust – in lieu of a tax-title foreclosure.

The request was refered to the ordinance committee, which will review the proposal at a future date.

Paul Hines, a former assistant city solicitor who is now the commissioner of public buildings, said the site was at one time home to a gas station on the Braintree side and a garage on the Quincy side. The gas tanks on the Braintree side leaked, and some of the soil on the Quincy side has been contaminated, he stated.

Hines said more than $800,000 in back taxes are

City To Honor Vietnam Veterans

In keeping nationwide events commemorating the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War, Quincy would like to honor the men and women of our City, living and deceased, who served in that war and their families.

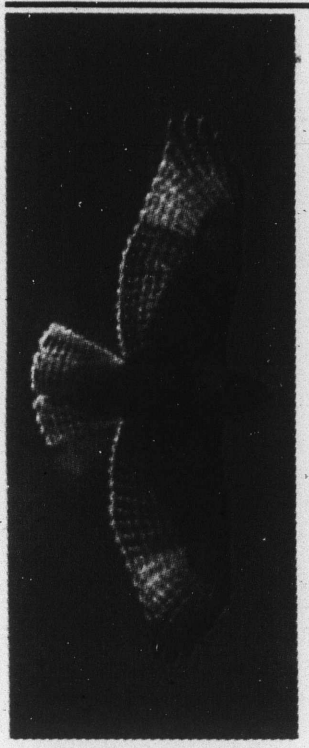

Over more than a decade of war, through one of the most challenging missions we have ever faced, these men and women served with honor, valor and distinction and defined an entire generation of Americans. This recognition for these men and women and their families, the City, through the Quincy Veterans Services Office will consist of the presentation of a Certificate of Honor and Appreciation, along with a special "Challenge Coin."

To accomplish this, the Quincy Veterans Services Office is asking that Vietnam veterans and/or their families call the office at 617-376-1192 and leave their names and branch of service and then be present for the Veterans Day Observance. Early Voting For State Election Starts Oct. 24

Oct. 19th Last Day To Register To Vote For Nov. 8th Election

The City of Quincy will join municipalities throughout the state for the first ever early voting for the State Election.

All registered voters will be able to vote before Election Day which this year is Tuesday, Nov. 8,

Early voting will begin on Monday, Oct. 24th and continue through Friday, Nov. 4th.

Prior to the enactment of this new law, the only way a registered voter was allowed to vote prior to Election Day was through absentee voting. Although absentee voting will still be available for registered voters who qualify, only those who will be absent from their city or town on Election Day, or have a disability that prevents them from going to the polls, or have a religious belief preventing the same, are legally allowed to vote by absentee ballot, noted Quincy City Clerk Nicole Crispo.

Unlike absentee voting, early voting is for every registered voter, Crispo said. Registered voters do not need an excuse or reason to vote early.

Regardless of whether a voter wants to take advantage of early voting, vote absentee or vote on Election Day, the first step is making sure you are registered. To check to see if you are registered to vote, and to find information on how to register to vote, you may visit the Secretary of the Commonwealth's website: www.sec.state.ma.us/ele.

If you need to register to vote, you may do it online by visiting: www.RegisterToVoteMA.com. All you need is a license or an I.D. issued by the Registry of Motor Vehicles to apply online.

To be eligible to vote in the Nov. 8th State Election, you must register to vote or make any necessary changes to your voter registration by Wednesday, Oct. 19th.

Early voting can be done in person or by mail. In Quincy, early voting can be done in person at Quincy City Hall (glass annex building), 1305 Hancock St. during the following dates and times:

- Monday and Wednesday 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.
- Tuesday, Thursday and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For public convenience, Quincy has also decided to offer weekend hours on Saturday, Oct. 29, at North Quincy High School from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Also, registered voters have the option to request an early voting ballot through the mail. Simply fill out an application and mail it to Quincy City Hall, Election Department, 1305 Hancock St. Applications are available on the Secretary of the Commonwealth's website: http://www.sec.state.ma.us/ele.

"Please note, however, once a voter has cast an early voting ballot, the voter may no longer vote at the polls on Election Day," Crispo said.

"For the first time in Massachusetts, the first choice all voters will make is which day to vote. Early voting will make the most fundamental right of our citizens more convenient than ever to exercise.

"We encourage all of our citizens to exercise that right and take advantage of the opportunity to vote on their schedules," Crispo added.

DPW Community Meeting Thursday At FR Clubhouse

The Department of Public Works is conducting sewer and stormwater drainage investigation projects in the city this fall.

The public is invited to join department and members of the City's Stormwater Advisory Committee tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd. to learn more about the projects.

"This important work reflects Mayor Koch's commitment to improving our beaches and waterways," said DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi. "This continuing investment into our utility infrastructure is designed to both protect that investment and proactively keep down costs to our ratepayers."

Topics to be discussed at the meeting include:

- The difference between a storm system and the sewer system
- What stormwater runoff is
- Why stormwater runoff is a problem
- What are some of the solutions to stormwater pollution including rain gardens and rain barrels
- Why the sewer and stormwater drainage system is essential to economic vitality
- How the sewer and stormwater drainage systems function
- What citizens can do to help us keep these systems operating efficiently and effectively,
- The scope of the work projects.

Work is expected to continue through the early winter. During this construction period DPW officials say the public can expect:

- To see private contractors hired by the city in your area accessing city manholes,
- If you have a manhole on your property, contractors may need pedestrian access to it,
- To be contacted by the city if a contractor needs access to your property/residence,
- To see private contractors sampling drainage water from city stormwater drainage structures,
- Noise, odors, and traffic control associates with some of this work,
- Smoke testing as a way to diagnose pipe defects
- This non-toxic, non-staining white smoke can occasionally enter homes but poses no harm. Open a window, pour water down a drain and contact a representative for Flow Assessment Services who will be on the street during testing.

For more information contact Deirdre Hall, DPW Compliance Manager at 617-376-1525 or dhall@quincyma.gov. Residents can also go to the DPW's website at www.quincyma.gov/government/PWD, or drop by the DPW office at 55 Sea St. to pick up a variety of publications on the subject.

Coping With Early Memory Loss Topic Oct. 18

As part of the initiative to make Quincy a Dementia Friendly Community, Jennifer Hoadley from the Alzheimer's Association will be at the Kennedy Center Tuesday Oct. 18th from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. to discuss "Coping With Early Memory Loss."

This session will be helpful to those experiencing mild memory challenges or have received an early stage diagnosis. Learn about diagnosis, treatment and effective coping techniques.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Wollaston School Harvest Festival Set For Oct. 15

The Wollaston School Harvest Festival will be held Saturday, Oct 15 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the school's 205 Beale St. location.

The Harvest Festival is a fun-filled Quincy family tradition featuring food, games, raffles, crafts, a silent auction, and entertainment.

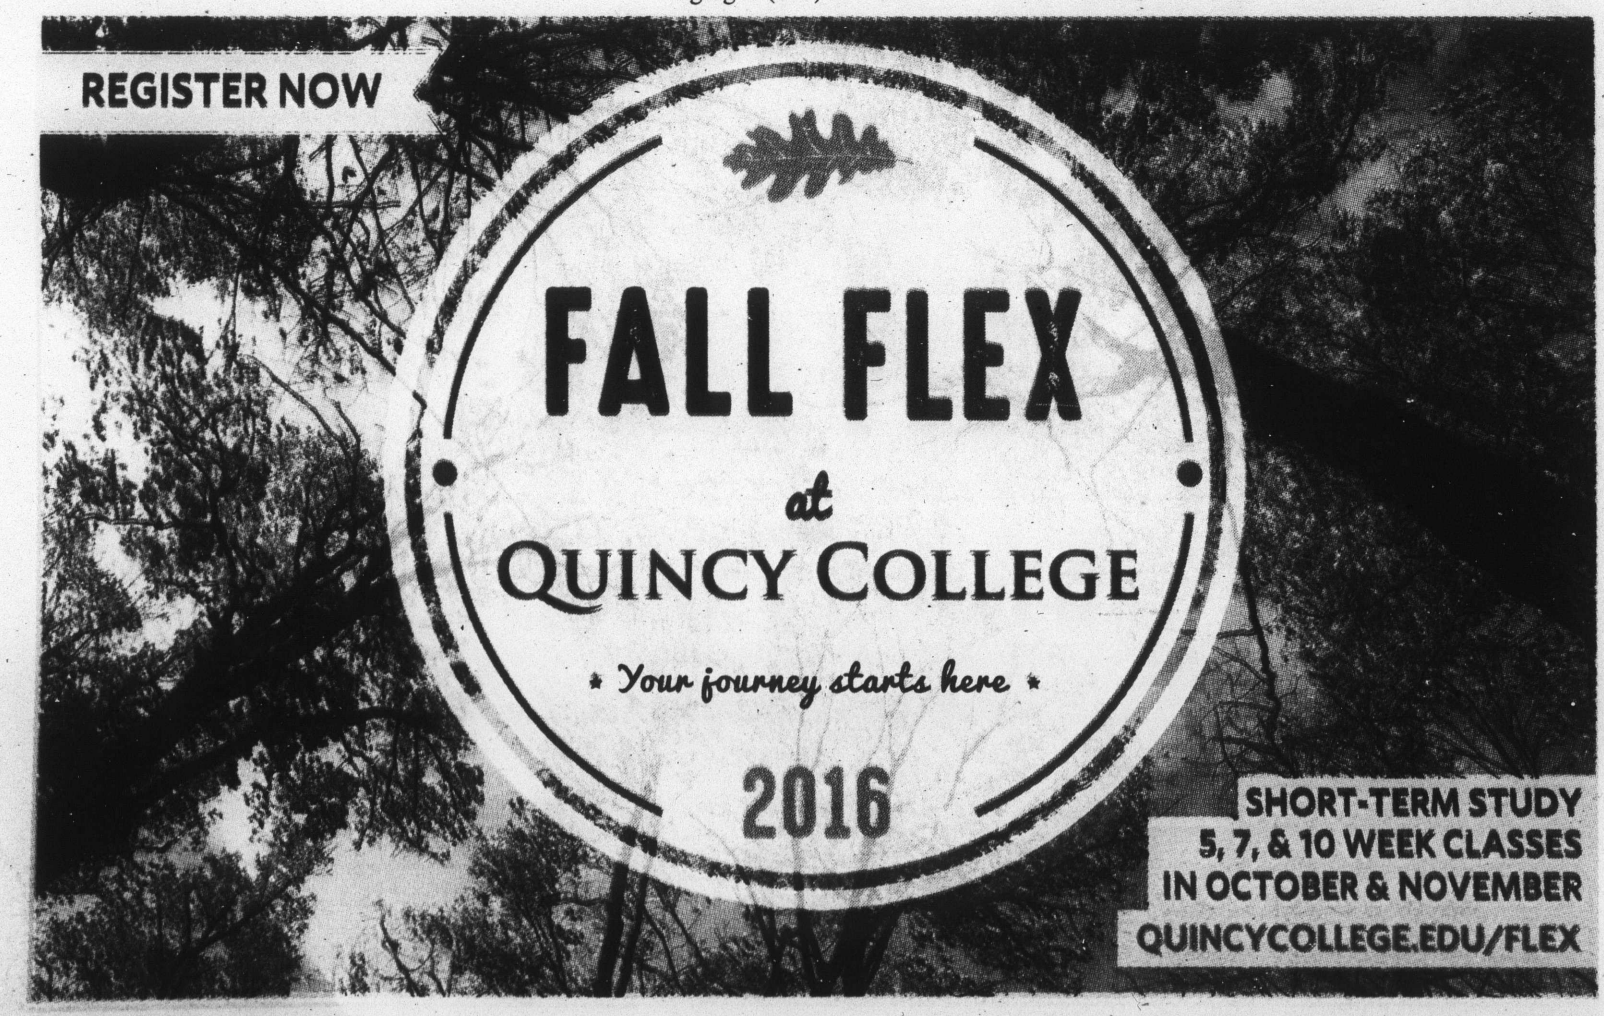

All proceeds from the Harvest Festival will benefit the Wollaston Elementary School. Funds will be used to enrich academic programs, purchase classroom supplies, software, and library books, and fund field trips and in-school assemblies.

The silent auction is expected to be the largest ever, where bidders can win sports memorabilia, rounds of golf, and goods and services from local businesses including restaurants, spas, hotels, and retailers. In addition, the event will feature a range of great raffle prizes, including a 50/50 raffle.

The Harvest Festival is sponsored by the parents and staff of the Wollaston School, in conjunction with many local businesses and community leaders.

Funding Approved For New Sterling Middle School

$59M Project; MA To Reimburse City About $28M

By TOM GORMAN

Construction of a new Sterling Middle School took a major step toward reality after the city councilors in their role as the finance committee unanimously approved funding for the $59 million project.

About two dozen residents attended the committee's special meeting on Sept. 29 where officials of Ai3 Architects and Quincy's municipal finance director Mark Cavanagh outlined the funding elements and timeline of the project. The meeting was held in the existing, 89-year-old Sterling Middle School that will be replaced by a new, modern facility in September, 2019. The city council approved the project Monday night.

"We are creating a facility that will support 21st century education and innovative technology in the classroom," said Ward 4 Councilor Brian Palmucci, who represents the school's neighborhood.

The total cost of the project is $59 million and the state will reimburse the city about $28 million through a Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA)

Merrymount School Named Blue Ribbon Winner

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Merrymount Elementary School was recently recognized by the U.S. Department of Education for progress made in narrowing the achievement gaps between different student groups.

The Department of Education on Sept. 28 named Merrymount a National Blue Ribbon School for 2016. Located at 4 Agawam Road, the Merrymount Elementary School is home to approximately 350 students in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Principal Ann Pegg on Monday said she was very excited federal officials selected the school for the national award. Pegg has worked at Merrymount Elementary School for 21 years – the first nine as the assistant principal and a fifth grade math and science teacher, and the last dozen as principal.

"It's really such an honor." Pegg said. "It took a lot of hard work, collaboration and team work."

Pegg said the school focuses on promoting students' success, enabling teachers and working with the community. Teachers and administrators, she said, come together to "determine the needs of the school community" and "really enjoy working together."

The Merrymount Elementary School was invited to apply for the Blue Ribbon award, and Pegg said she worked with assistant principal John Rogan – who she called a wonderful educator – and numerous teachers and staff to put together the application.

"There were a good number of people who worked on it," Pegg said.

The Merrymount Elementary School was one of three Massachusetts schools to receive the honor this year, joining the Daniel

BLUE REIGNS

While aquamarine has long enjoyed popularity as the March birthstone, increased worldwide preference for the color blue has elevated this blue beryl beyond its association as a birthstone. The lovely pale sea-blue gemstone is now sold year-round to those wanting a premium gemstone with great color and quality. This includes brides-to-be, who are increasingly desirous of a shimmering aquamarine to grace their engagement rings. In fact, aquamarine is probably the third most popular colored gemstone for bridal jewelry, behind sapphire and morganite. With the newfound availability of aquamarine from parts of Africa, there is now a more steady supply of aquamarine to satisfy increased demand for this gorgeous gemstone in the foreseeable future.

Like seawater, aquamarine can be light-blue, dark-blue, blue-green and green-blue. The more saturated the color, the higher the value, although almost all aquamarine is typically a lighter blue tone. Many people actually prefer the more crystal-clear lighter gemstones over the richer, deeper colors. For more information, please call Rogers Jewelry at 617-773-3636. Down The Homestretch

We elect a new president in less than six weeks.

The race for the White House – which for some candidates started more than a year and a half ago – will finally be over, 33 days from today. We will head to the polls Tuesday, Nov. 8 and cast a ballot for the next commander in-chief. The winner will become the 45th president-elect and be sworn into office Jan. 20.

CLINTON

TRUMP

Nov. 8th will certainly be an historic night. We could elect the first woman President (Democrat Hillary Rodham Clinton) or a businessman billionaire who has never held elective office (Republican Donald Trump.)

I'm one of these undecided voters who hasn't made up my mind yet who I will vote for Nov. 8.

The person I supported in the Presidential Primaries earlier this year is not on the November ballot.

I'm not shy to note that I have been leaning towards Trump but I am becoming more reluctant to support him. I will give him credit for raising some issues that some candidates appeared to shy away from in the early going – namely immigration reform and how the U.S. does business with other countries.

And I watched the debate last week with an open mind that he could and would sound more "Presidential." But like the pretty "out of your league" girl who won't go to the dance with you no matter how many times you ask, I ended up disappointed by his performance. And frankly some of the things he has said in the past – and during that debate – don't come close to solving any of this country's real problems.

Hillary Clinton – who many think "won" the first debate – made some key points, including Trump's tax returns. His refusal to release them begs the question why. Being under a routine audit doesn't cut it. She may be right that he isn't as rich as he says nor as charitable as he tells us.

She's not without her integrity problems, either. She's still on the hook when it comes to the email scandal and how Benghazi was handled in my mind. And I do wonder how her fiscal policies could impact taxpayers and the nation's economy.

But of all of the quotes I read last week surrounding the Presidential election, the one that most irked me wasn't uttered by either Trump or Clinton.

It was lobbed by outgoing President Barack Obama.

Appearing on the Steve Harvey morning radio program the day after the debate, Obama warned about voters who decide to stay home or cast ballots for the other two candidates in the Presidential race: Libertarian Gary Johnson and Green Party candidate Jill Stein.

JOHNSON

Here's what the current President had to say about that:

"If you don't vote, that's a vote for Trump. If you vote for a third-party candidate who's got no chance to win, that's a vote for Trump."

Obviously Obama, a Democrat, is pulling for Hillary, the Democratic Presidential nominee.

And in one respect, Obama's legacy as a two-term President is probably riding on the outcome of the Nov. 8th election. A Trump victory would pretty much tell the world that much – not all – but much – of this nation does not agree with the path Obama has placed America on since he was first sworn in nearly eight years ago.

Back to that quote.

The right to vote is one of the most precious rights we have in this country. It's not supposed to be about voting for the person who may be the favorite. Johnson and Stein have very little chance of winning the White House. But does that mean you shouldn't vote for them? If you don't want Trump and you don't want Clinton, does that mean you stay home on Election Day and not cast a ballot?

Perhaps Johnson and/or Stein stand for something that you happen to agree with. And the thought of Trump or Clinton running the country for the next four years worries you.

A citizen should be able to hold their head high, cast a ballot for one of the other two candidates, and feel confident that they did their civic duty.

Obama is right that voters should cast ballots. But he's wrong to suggest you shouldn't support a candidate who may not have a chance to win.

If that were the case, we should just wait for the final poll to be released before Election Day and vote for the candidate who appears to have the advantage. Would you rather support the candidate who you think would do a better job leading the country or just cast a ballot for the perceived front-runner just so that you can say "I voted for the new President."

Most political polls show the Trump-Clinton race close in those key "battleground states." If the race turns out to be a squeaker, then whoever loses Nov. 8 will undoubtedly blame the third-party candidates for coming up short. But really the impetus for running away from Trump and Clinton started with the candidates themselves. They have only themselves to blame for turning vast voters off.

If you want to talk about "throwing away votes" you can make the case that voting non-Democratic is a wasted effort in this state. Consider that in the last 20 Presidential elections, Massachusetts has gone Democratic 16 times. Only Republicans Ronald Reagan (1980 and 1984) and Dwight Eisenhower (1952 and 1956) won the Bay State in those Presidential Elections from 1936 through 2012. All the rest were Democrats.

Nov. 8th could be a long night as ballots are counted throughout the country, especially in the western half of the country. But if you're looking for an early sign for the outcome, then look no further than Massachusetts.

If Donald Trump wins here, it could mean he's on his way to capturing the necessary 270 electoral votes to win the White House.

We're heading down the homestretch, folks.

Pay attention to all the candidates and make up your mind as to who gets your vote.

And be sure to vote.

We won't have another chance for four more years.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1948 postcard reproduction of the Wollaston Theatre on Beale Street in Wollaston Center. Built in 1926, it opened as a vaudeville and silent-picture theater named the New Wollaston. The original Wollaston Theatre had operated on a small stage in the old Masonic Temple building to the right. About 1930, the new Wollaston – with 1,259 seats – was upgraded to show talking movies. The featured movie on the marquee: Back to Bataan, starred John Wayne and Anthony Quinn in a 1945 film about American-led guerillas in The Philippines after General MacArthur's withdrawal in 1942. A few years later after this picture was taken the marquee shown here was replaced with an angular one without the vertical portion. The "Wolly" as it was affectionately known to generations of Quincy moviegoers was the last neighborhood theater in Quincy when it was closed in 2003 for insurmountable repairs. After several failed attempts to save it, the theater was demolished this past summer. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

House Passes Veterans Day Observance Act

The United States House of Representatives has unanimously passed the bipartisan Veterans Day Moment of Silence Act under unanimous consent.

S. 1004 directs the President to issue an annual proclamation calling for the United States to observe two minutes of silence on Veterans Day. Congressman Stephen F. Lynch (D-Boston) introduced the House version of this legislation. H.R. 995 passed the House in July of 2015.

The Veterans Day Moment of Silence Act calls for two minutes of silence every Veterans Day to recognize and reflect on the service and sacrifice of all veterans, past and present. The set time of 2:11 p.m. EST allows for all 50 states and Puerto Rico to take part simultaneously.

"Our country has a responsibility to the men and women in our armed forces to honor their courageous service and sacrifice. By coming together as a nation with a moment of silence each Veterans Day, we send a powerful message of our appreciation for all veterans have done for our country," Cong. Lynch said.

"Thank you to Senators Kirk and Durbin for moving this legislation in the Senate and to the bipartisan cosponsors in the House for their support. Taking time to give thanks to members of our military is something we all can agree on."

The Veterans Day Moment of Silence Act was the inspiration of the Bendetson family: Daniel, Michael, and their father, Dr. Peter Bendetson, of Weston, MA.

Cong. Lynch first introduced the Veterans Day Moment of Silence Act in 2013. S. 1004, which was introduced by U.S. Senators Mark Kirk (R-Illinois) and Dick Durbin (D-Illinois), will next go to the President for his signature to become law.

Blueberry-Lemon Scones

By MARIE

What is tastier than anything baked with fresh blueberries ? - and with the addition of savory lemon- even tastier!!

Today's recipe is for a blueberry- lemon scone baked fresh from the oven of a friend of my niece Ann. The addition of vanilla yogurt makes these scones superb!!

BLUEBERRY- LEMON SCONES

2 cups of flour
1/3 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
One 8 ounce container of vanilla yogurt
1 egg beaten
1 stick of softened butter
1 tablespoon lemon peel
1 cup fresh blueberries, washed

Glaze
¾ cup confectioners sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon lemon peel
3 to 6 tablespoons of water

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grease a baking sheet. Combine all dry ingredients.

Mix together butter, yogurt, beaten egg and teaspoon of lemon peel and add to dry ingredients. Mix until well blended. Fold in blueberries.

Drop by tablespoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 to 18 minutes.

Combine ¾ cup confectioners sugar, 1 tablespoon on lemon juice and ½ teaspoon of lemon peel to make the glaze. Add water as needed to make glaze. Spread glaze on scones while still warm.

Optional:

For a more uniform scone you can divide the dough in half. On lightly floured board, shape each half into a 6-inch round. Cut into wedges and then bake and glaze.

'Creamy' Cauliflower Soup

By SUSIE

Here is a yummy and healthy recipe for a creamy soup without the cream.

Cashew cream is used rather than cream for a heart healthy, anti inflammatory and easy to digest substitute.

Cauliflower is chock full of important nutrients, and is part of the cruciferous vegetable family, which have been found to reduce the chances of certain types of cancers.

CREAMY CAULIFLOWER SOUP (without the cream)

- 1 large head cauliflower, in pieces
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 teaspoon sea salt
- 1 large onion, diced
- 5 cups chicken stock
- 2 cloves garlic
- ½ cup raw cashews that have been soaked in boiling water for 30 minutes
- Fresh chopped parsley

Instructions

1. Place cauliflower that has been tossed in olive oil and salt on a baking sheet. (I cover mine with parchment paper.)

Junior Girl Scouts Earn Business Owner Badge

Junior Girl Scouts of Troop 85042 earned their business owner badge over the summer with the help of a local dog groomer and Citizen's Bank.

Paul Muccio, AVP Business Banking Officer from Citizens Bank, met with the girls to explain the process a business has to go through to apply for a loan. He also explained to the girls reasons businesses might not qualify for a loan. The girls also learned about other services the bank offers to small businesses and the community.

Local dog groomer Cindy Egan came to a Girl Scout meeting and talked to the girls about how she began her business, how she sets her prices and what she does for each animal she grooms. The girls also got to watch Cindy groom a dog.

What Is A Hiatal Hernia?

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

A hernia happens when internal tissue or part of an organ pushes through a weakness in the body part's "wall" that normally holds it in.

The organs in the belly are held in the abdominal cavity by the abdominal wall and are also retained in place by the diaphragm. The diaphragm is a dome-shaped muscular layer that separates the abdominal cavity's organs from the heart and lungs in the chest cavity.

RUTH JONES

The diaphragm is the part of the body that is affected by a hiatal or hiatus hernia. This muscle shifts up and down for breathing. There are no open holes in the diaphragm, but significant structures and vessels run through it. The largest one of these is the esophagus, which runs down from the back of the mouth to the stomach, connecting the two, and is critical for propelling food downward. Just above the stomach, the diaphragm customarily, tightly encases the esophagus to keep abdominal organs and tissues in their place and stays attached to the esophagus when it narrows down after food passes through into the stomach.

This tapering of the esophagus helps to keep the contents of the stomach from coming back up the chest area. A hiatal hernia is where part of the upper stomach pushes through the diaphragm at this ordinarily snug point. Part of the stomach can "herniate" at this "hiatus" if the opening is weakened. Hence the name, Hiatal Hernia.

Experts do not fully comprehend all of the causes of the weaknesses that result in hiatal hernias. A hiatal hernia is thought to be instigated by pressure pushing up on the diaphragm. There may be inherited genetic factors that increase the risk of this pressure. The weakening has been associated with a number of risk factors making it more probable.

Hiatal hernias are more common among obese people over age 50. Other risk factors include upward strain because of weightlifting, straining to push out a stool when emptying the bowel or persistent coughing or vomiting. These circumstances temporarily intensify the pressure inside the abdominal cavity.

A hiatal hernia is more prevalent in pregnant women because the abdominal organs are simply pushed upward during pregnancy. A defect in the diaphragm present at birth is another cause, but these hiatal hernias are rare. Injury affecting the diaphragm can also lead to a hiatal hernia, such as trauma from falls or traffic accidents. Infrequently, some esophageal surgeries carry the increased risk of precipitating a hiatal hernia.

The stomach bulging up as a hiatal hernia often gives no symptoms. It is often discovered coincidentally in people who have an exam for another reason.

These hernias are divided into two categories:

• Sliding hiatal hernias are the most common and usually small. In a sliding hiatal hernia, the stomach and the section of the esophagus that joins the stomach slide up into the chest through the hiatus. This is the more common type of hernia. These hernias move up and down, rather than having a stomach portion that remains fixed and bulged out of place.

• Paraesophageal hernia is less common, but is more cause for concern. About 1 in 10 hiatal hernias remain out of place pushed up through the diaphragm. The esophagus and stomach stay in their normal locations, but part of the stomach squeezes through the hiatus, landing it next to the esophagus. Although you can have this type of hernia without any symptoms, the danger is that the stomach can become "strangled," or have its blood supply shut off.

Both types are often asymptomatic. If symptoms from a hiatal hernia are present generally they are the result of acid moving up from the stomach, causing heartburn, a burning sensation around the lower chest area. Heartburn tends to exacerbate in relation to different foods and drinks or occurs when lying down and bending over, especially when done shortly after eating. It can generate an unpleasant taste in the back of the throat, as well as bloating and belching.

If heartburn symptoms in particular become a habitual problem, people may be diagnosed with a condition called acid reflux. Acid reflux is when a person continues to experience heartburn at least twice a week. If acid reflux happens too frequently and for an excessive amount of time, the condition can evolve into gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD).

The risk of a hiatal hernia associated with obesity, implies that confronting the issue of being overweight, could prevent it, or at least assist in controlling symptoms. Other identified causes and risk factors may not be preventable, however in all cases when there are symptoms can be managed. For any hiatal hernia, diet modification can help.

Items that may need reducing include:

- Alcohol
- Caffeine
- Chocolate
- Tomatoes
- Acidic foods and drinks
- Fatty or spicy foods

Additionally, the timing of eating and drinking can be an important element because mealtimes influence when acid can regurgitate back up into the esophagus. It is vital for those diagnosed with a hiatal hernia to have meals 3 hours or more before lying down. Subsequently, they should always remain sitting upright while eating.

If a hiatal hernia is triggering a problem with acid reflux, doctors may prescribe a drug to reduce stomach acid and heartburn symptoms. Treatments to relieve symptoms are also available over the counter without prescription:

• Antacids are liquids or chewy tablets that diminish the acidity of the stomach contents.

• Alginate products make a foamy gel at the top of the stomach contents, providing a barrier to acidic contents.

• Doctors can prescribe stronger medications for persistent difficulties.

People who develop long-term, severe reflux problems may consider an operation if lifestyle and medical treatments do not work. If part of the stomach squeezes through the diaphragm into such a bulge that it loses healthy blood supply, surgery may become a necessary option.

Hiatal hernia surgery can often be performed as a laparoscopic, or "minimally invasive," procedure. If you have been diagnosed with a hiatal hernia and you develop severe pain in the chest or abdomen, become nauseated, are vomiting, or are unable to have a bowel movement or pass gas, you may have a strangulated hernia or an obstruction, which are medical emergencies. Call your doctor immediately.

Three South Shore Mayors Team Up To Fight Hunger

• Sullivan, Koch, Hedlund Help Assemble Meal Orders At Interfaith Food Pantry

• ISS Also Collecting Halloween Costumes

The mayors of Braintree, Quincy and Weymouth recently rolled up their sleeves and fed their constituents in need. They spent the morning serving clients at Interfaith Social Services food pantry.

Interfaith operates one of the largest emergency food programs in Greater Boston, serving over 500,000 meals to South Shore residents every year. The mayors assembled meal orders, sorted food and distributed it to clients who visited the food pantry.

"We are so grateful that Mayors (Robert) Hedlund, (Thomas) Koch and (Joseph) Sullivan are helping us raise awareness about hunger here on the South Shore," said Rick Doane executive director of Interfaith Social Services. "This time of year so many families turn to Interfaith for assistance, we can only serve them with help from the community. Donations of food and volunteer time make it possible for us to feed the thousands of children and families who depend on our programs."

Since 1947 Interfaith Social Services has been a safety net for South Shore families. In addition to their food pantry, Interfaith operates a mental health counseling center, homelessness prevention program and budget counseling services. Many of the clients served by Interfaith's programs are residents of Weymouth, Quincy and Braintree.

"I think it is important that we come together and serve others, and to show compassion for all," said Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch. "Today is a great day to remember that we are all a part of one human family and have an obligation to help those in need whenever we can, even if through small gestures. The volunteers and staff at Interfaith Social Services do God's work each and every day by providing the comfort and nourishment to those who need it most."

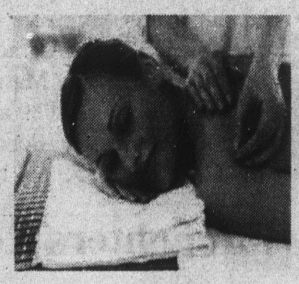

Anyone interested in serving as volunteer at Interfaith Social Services is encouraged to contact Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28 or via email pdaniels@interfaithsocialservices.org.

Interfaith's Food Pantry is also currently collecting new and gently used Halloween costumes for distribution to the children served by their emergency food program. Over 300 children are already registered. Interfaith needs the community's help to outfit these children.

Costumes can be dropped off at Interfaith's offices: 105 Adams St. in Quincy, Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Tuesdays 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

O'Malley Nominated District Court Judge

Governor Charlie Baker has nominated Daniel W. O'Malley, a former District Court judge and Quincy native, to serve as a judge in the Massachusetts District Court.

Baker also nominated Edward H. Sharkansky, a Brockton attorney, to serve as a district court judge.

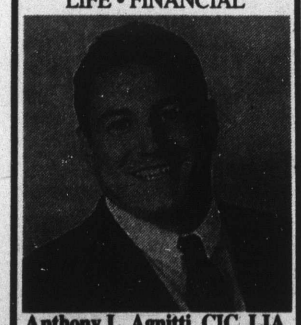

"I am confident attorneys O'Malley and Sharkansky will bring outstanding judgement and common sense to the bench and serve the Commonwealth's citizens well with their decades of experience in the District Court," Baker said. "Mr. O'Malley will draw not only from his years of private criminal practice, but also from his six years of prior service on the District Court, while Mr. Sharkansky's background as a prosecutor and defense counsel will provide balance and perspective making him an asset to the Commonwealth. I am pleased to recommend both to the Governor's Council for their consideration."

Applicants for judicial openings are reviewed by the Statewide Judicial Nominating Commission and recommended to the Governor. All judicial nominations are subject to the advice and consent of the Governor's Council.

O'Malley, who has 30 years of legal experience, returned to private practice in 2004 after six years on the District Court. A graduate of University of Massachusetts Boston in 1980 and Suffolk University School of Law in 1985, he has spent more than a decade in different law offices focusing on criminal, personal injury, and real estate law. In 1998, Governor Paul Cellucci appointed O'Malley to the District Court, where he presided over criminal and civil sessions in courts throughout Eastern Massachusetts, including seven months as acting First Justice of the Fall River District Court. During his tenure on the bench, he presided over mental health hearings at Bridgewater State Hospital and Taunton State Hospital.

Attorney O'Malley grew up in Quincy and currently resides in Milton where he and his wife raised their six children.

ENC President Stepping Down

Dr. Corlis McGee Will Conclude 12 Years At End Of Academic Year

Dr. Corlis McGee will step down as president of Eastern Nazarene College – a Christian liberal arts college located in Wollaston – at the end of the 2016-2017 academic year.

At a campus community meeting last week, McGee told faculty and staff that she will conclude 12 years as president of ENC at the end of this academic year in order to return to her first love, teaching. McGee has accepted a position as professor of economics at her alma mater, Trevecca Nazarene University, where she previously taught for 13 years and served as chair of the Department of Business and Economics.

"Nearly 40 years ago, I began my academic leadership in the classroom, shaping students for service to the church and the world, and I will have the privilege of returning to the classroom for this next chapter," said McGee, who said her decision was also motivated by a desire to be closer to her family in Tennessee. "I loved my years in the classroom and I have loved my time at ENC."

McGee joined Eastern Nazarene College as president in 2005, becoming the first female president of a U.S. Nazarene college. Under her leadership, ENC developed a comprehensive master plan to guide the college's future growth. The college also made significant changes to its curriculum, completed major renovations of several campus dorms and buildings, and increased significantly the amount of scholarships and other financial aid awarded to students.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of ENC's story and pray God's continued blessing upon the next chapter of her history," she said. "Serving as president has afforded me the opportunity to develop relationships with students, staff, faculty, and pastors and lay leaders of the Northeast region. It has also enabled me to meet leaders from across the South Shore, the state and literally around the world. Moving into this new season of ministry will create space for me to deepen my commitment to mentoring the next generation of leaders."

Prior to joining ENC, McGee served for six years as rector of European Nazarene College in Buesingen, Germany. Previously, she served as dean of graduate studies at Point Loma Nazarene University, and vice president for academic affairs and dean at MidAmerica Nazarene University, where she started the Master of Business Administration program and chaired the division of business administration.

McGee holds a BS in Business Administration from Trevecca Nazarene University, an MBA from the University of Tennessee and a Doctor of Arts in Economics from Middle Tennessee State University.

"We are so grateful to Dr. McGee for her leadership and stewardship of Eastern Nazarene College," said Russell Long, chairman of the college's board of trustees. "Her vision of creating a vibrant, 21st century Christian liberal arts college committed to preparing the next generation of servant leaders will impact ENC and its students for generations to come."

Long said the college leadership will soon initiate a formal search process to select McGee's successor.

grant. The remaining balance of the project's cost will be paid by the city. The MSBA approved the Sterling Middle School building project in July.

Cavanagh explained that the city would "issue debt for what we are responsible for," that being about $28 million. The funding would come from city issued bonds, both short and long term. He noted that the project's cost would only be .35 percent of the city's budget.

"The Sterling school project will be less than half of one percent of the city budget," Cavanagh said.

Following two years of short-term bond issuances, the city will float a 30-year bond in 2020. Cavanaugh said there are other long-term bonds being paid off that will free up monies for the Sterling project.

Dunlap said that the MSBA approved a 73.22 percent reimbursement rate for Quincy that "is very high compared to other cities and towns in the Commonwealth." He explained the MSBA has approved $39 million for eligible costs.

According to Dunlap, the state authority would not cover $16.7 million of ineligible costs including a new auditorium, furniture, technology and asbestos removal. He said the ineligible costs are the result of the MSBA capping the total cost of reimbursement at 8 percent based on the square footage of a new school building project.

The new 95,155 square-foot, three-story middle school is to be built behind the existing facility on Granite Street, more towards Roberts Street. It will accommodate up to 430 students in grades five through eight. Grade 5 will have a separate entrance. Officials said the new school would qualify as a "green" building due to its environmentally friendly design.

Officials said there would be no disruption to classes while the new school is being built.

Once the new school is open, the existing facility will be torn down. Officials said anything of historical value would be removed before demolition. Dunlap said about 90 percent of the construction debris would be recycled.

The construction timeline calls for crews to arrive in April or May where temporary fencing will be installed around the site. When school is out for the summer in June, construction activity will begin. The project is expected to take about 18 months to complete.

During the construction period, Dunlap said neighbors would be kept informed of the progress.

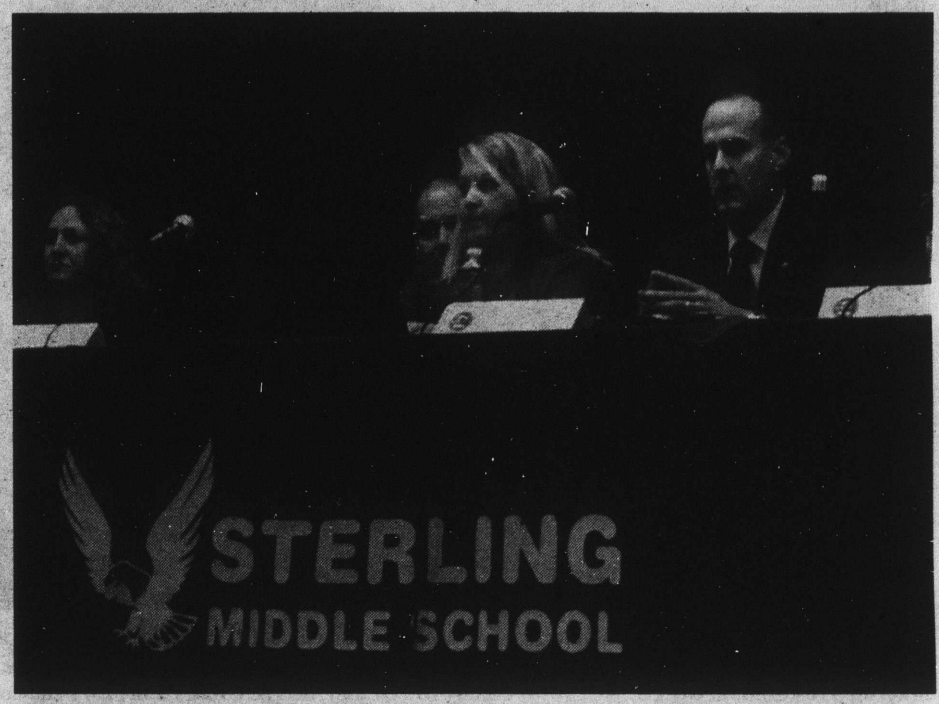

Officials noted that the Sterling project is the third school building project within the past six years following the construction of the new Quincy High School and Central Middle School.

Centre Street resident Gregory Tonucci questioned why the existing school can't be rebuilt.

Some city councilors explained that the building has many deficiencies.

CITY COUNCIL FINANCE Committee Chairman and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall (right) addresses the special meeting of the finance committee on funding the new Sterling Middle School.

"It's nearing the end of its useful life," said Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

Councillor-at-Large Noel DiBona said feasibility studies found that it would cost more to repair the existing school than to build a new one.

"We went through these studies prior to coming to this (decision to a build a new school)," he said. "It's too old to upgrade. It's not handicapped accessible and it has no elevator."

Dunlap said the existing Sterling school was not built with quality materials.

"This was not an expensive building when it was constructed," he said, noting such inexpensive attributes faux marble.

"Clearly there were some budget challenges when this was built," Dunlap said.

Councillor-at-Large Joseph Finn said the discussion to replace the school started 15 years ago when he first sat on the city council.

"Fifteen years later, the reality is happening," he said. "The community has been patient."

Finance Committee Chairman and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall expressed appreciation to the community and city officials for supporting the new school and added that having a quality educational system is important to attracting and keeping young new families in Quincy.

"Investing in education is imperative when you're trying to attract and retain Millennials," he said.

Palmucci noted that older residents who attended Sterling some 50 years ago have told him they can't believe the school is still functioning.

"A lot of people in our community have gone through this building," he said. "It's time for a new one."

Halloween Costume Donations Will Benefit Low-Income Families

For the past seven years, From the Pumpkin Patch (FTPP) has given away thousands of new and gently used Halloween costumes to children from low-income families.

Local organizations and businesses volunteer to serve as collection sites, and then send them to FTPP.

Just prior to Halloween, From the Pumpkin Patch invites children to an event where they pick out a FREE costume to wear on Halloween. In addition to the costumes it collects, the charity also requests donations of "accessories" such as magic wands, masks, costume shoes, crowns, hats, swords, and costume jewelry.

This year, Quincy law firm, Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, P.C., and The Quincy Sun have joined forces as volunteer collection sites for the costume donations. To date they have already collected dozens of costumes at their offices: Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro at 300 Crown Colony Drive, and The Quincy Sun at 1372 Hancock St. in Quincy.

YOUNGSTER AND MOM are all smiles after receiving a donated Monkey Halloween costume last year that was donated to From The Pumpkin Patch.

"All of us here have gotten into the spirit, probably because we have such fond memories of using our imaginations as kids to come up with the best costume every year," said Barbadoro. "Today a costume costs upwards of $35, and we want to do everything that we can to give that experience to children whose families do not have the extra money to purchase a new costume."

The collection runs through Oct. 21st.

To donate your gently used or new costumes and accessories (including adult sizes, as some of the children who will wear them may require larger sizes) at Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, enter 300 Crown Colony Drive and take the lobby elevator to the fifth floor. The law firm will have a collection receptacle clearly labeled, just inside the office entrance.

The Sun also will have a collection receptacle available during standard business hours.

The program is open to females aged 18 and up, 16 if with a parent/guardian. Attendance is required both nights because this is a progressive learning program.

There is no exam and no one is required to do anything that they do not feel comfortable with. The first night involves learning strikes, blocks and blows and the second night provides an opportunity to test your skills against an "attacker."

Butler Elementary School in Belmont and the Morris Elementary School in Lenox.

Nationwide, 329 schools were recognized by the Department of Education – 279 public schools and 50 private ones.

"National Blue Ribbon Schools are proof that we can prepare every child for college and meaningful careers," Education Secretary John B. King Jr. said in a statement.

"Your schools are on the cutting edge, pioneering innovative educational practices – professional learning communities, project-based learning, social and emotional learning, positive behavior systems – making you shining examples for your communities, your state and the nation."

The Merrymount Elementary School was named an exemplary achievement gap closing school, which the DoE said makes it among Massachusetts' highest performing schools in closing achievement gaps between a school's subgroups and all students over the past five years.

The Department of Education will recognize the Merrymount Elementary School and this year's other recipients during an awards ceremony on Nov. 7 and 8 in Washington, D.C.

The Department of Education has recognized 8,000 schools as Blue Ribbon Schools during the past 34 years. Two other Quincy schools have been named Blue Ribbon Schools in the past - Broad Meadows Middle School, which was recognized in 1990-91, and the Snug Harbor Community School, which was honored for 1993-94.

Raises For Firefighters, Library Workers OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night approved salary increases for firefighters and employees of the Thomas Crane Public Library after unions representing both reached new contracts with the city.

The council, in a pair of unanimous votes, approved a transfer of $442,171 to the Quincy Fire Department's budget for personal services, and $67,717 to the library personal services budget. The transfers are from a reserve for appropriation line in the city's fiscal year 2017 budget; funds had been set aside in the budget for raises because new contracts with unions representing municipal employees were being negotiated at the time.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said Tuesday the new contracts with firefighters and library workers include the same salary increases as those with other bargaining units that have previously come to agreements with the city. The contracts include a 1 percent raise for fiscal year 2016; a 2 percent raise in fiscal year 2017, 2018 and 2019; and a 3 percent raise in fiscal year 2020.

Also on Monday, the council unanimously approved a transfer of $35,000 from the Quincy Police Department's contractual account to match a $140,000 federal port security grant.

Lt. Bob Gillan, the head of the QPD Marine Unit, said the money would be used to outfit the Guardian – one of the department's boats – with new engines. Quincy received the Guardian from the Coast Guard in 2003 and replaced the

'Traditions Of Christmas' Christmas Parade Theme

Entry Submitted By Quincy's Lorraine Rooney

Lorraine T. Rooney of Henry Street in Quincy has submitted the winning entry for the theme for this year's Quincy Christmas Parade.

Rooney, who has lived in Quincy for 85 years and has watched the annual Christmas Parade for as long as she can remember, submitted the theme "Traditions of Christmas." The winning theme was selected by the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.

As the winner of the parade theme contest, Rooney will have the honor of riding in an open top antique automobile the length of Hancock Street in the 64th annual parade on Sunday, Nov. 27th. Rooney, who has submitted entries for many years, had her theme selected from among 38 entries from two states and multiple South Shore communities.

The parade theme is an important component to the groups and organizations that design floats and to the school children who take part in the Christmas Festival poster contest. The selection of the theme is the official kick off preparing for the traditional three days of events which include Friday night tree lighting and a Saturday arrival of Santa by parachuting to Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

Rooney has her own Christmas parade tradition. For years, she has gathered with family young and old and watched the parade as it passes by Ferndale Road, the home of her son and after Santa passes by they all adjourn to her son's house where she says, "my daughter-in-law feeds us all." She is not certain at this time who will take the parade ride with her. The theme winners will also receive a commemorative plaque at the events annual award ceremony immediately following the parade.

Now that the theme has been selected the parade committee is now accepting applications from groups, schools, and organizations who would like to participate in the parade by building a float. Floats are judged and cash prizes are awarded in several categories at the conclusion of the parade. Commercial floats may also be entered in the parade; however, they are not considered for the cash awards and an entry fee is charged.

For information on group or commercial applications or to request an entry package contact the parade committee at 617-376-1394.

The number of floats accepted is limited and early entry is encouraged.

Quincy Native Represents Utility Workers At Democratic Convention

Quincy native Craig Pinkham, president of the Utility Workers Union of America (UWUA) Local 369, which represents more than 3,000 energy professionals throughout Massachusetts, recently represented the Local at the Democratic National Convention held in Philadelphia.

CRAIG PINKHAM

Pinkham, a resident of Dorchester, oversees one of the largest labor unions in the state. He said he was pleased to see the Democratic National Convention so strongly represented by labor, and to see them adopt a platform that supports the efforts of labor across the country.

"This will be an important election where a number of issues will be decided," Pinkham said, adding, "We are pleased to see the efforts of labor respected and valued at a national gathering such as this and we know the party is hard at work to see that pro-labor candidates across the country are elected this fall."

Pinkham is in his first full term as President of the 3,000-member union; he first became Acting President of UWUA Local 369 following the resignation of Dan Hurley, who left to take a position with UWUA's national organization.

Pinkham's tenure with the union dates to 2001. He graduated from Suffolk University with a Bachelor's Degree in business administration. His initial work with the union began with an internship at Boston Edison during his college days, where he worked in the billing department and was a Customer service Associate for UWUA Local 369.

Following his work in the billing department, he transferred to be an underground line worker in 2003, working out of the Massachusetts Avenue, Dorchester facility. From there he went into the Emergency Center of NStar.

In addition to being president of Local 369, he serves on the National Utility Workers Union of America Executive Board, and is Treasurer on the Board of Directors for Members Plus Credit Union. In May 2013, he was inducted into the Suffolk University Hall of Fame alongside his 2000 Baseball team. He still enjoys playing hockey and softball on the Local 369 club teams.

Pinkham lives in the Neponset section of Dorchester. He and his wife Deirdre, a Boston police officer, are parents to four daughters: Emma, Nola, Aine, and Fiona.

$1.5M For Replacing Lead Lines

said, though that number could change as the program moves forward. It's expected to cost between $7,000 and $10,000 to replace each service line.

There are a total of 23,788 service lines in the city.

The 141 homes the DPW has identified as having lead service lines are spread throughout Quincy – 14 in Ward 1, 15 in Ward 2, 39 in Ward 3, 41 in Ward 4, 20 in Ward 5 and 12 in Ward 6. A list and map of the homes has been posted on the city's website, quincyma.gov, and Raymondi said the 141 homeowners were notified about the city's intention to remove the lead service lines in letters that went out Sept. 23; included in that mailing was a form the homeowners have to fill out to grant access to their properties.

Raymondi said Quincy's water, which it purchases from the MWRA, is of high quality and illustrated that point by bringing with him awards the department has won in recent years for its water quality. There is no lead in Quincy's water mains, nor in the pipes and tunnels the MWRA uses to transport water from the Quabbin and Wachusett Reservoirs.

"Quincy's water is fabulous," Raymondi said. "The water at Quabbin and Wachusett is quality – it's pristine."

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency deems water with lead concentrations of more than 15 parts per billion unsafe. Raymondi said the city tests for the heavy metal – including in the homes with lead service lines – and no samples have exceeded that limit.

The commissioner said lead service lines were not banned until 1986. He said the city has removed other lead service lines previously when replacing water mains because of concerns the replacement of the mains and subsequent roadwork could cause a release of unsafe concentrations of lead, though there is no state or federal requirement to do so.

In the future, Raymondi said the city may look to replace other service lines that contain lead, such as those with so-called goosenecks – lead that is used to join to other pieces of pipe together. The DPW is still trying to determine how many service lines have the gooseneck connections.

The City Council approved borrowing up to $1.5 million from the MWRA for the removal of the 141 lead service lines in an 8-1 vote.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain called the initiative to remove the lead service lines an "awesome project," and said the city was fortunate to be able to take advantage of the program in the wake of the water crisis in Flint, Michigan.

"Everyone here will recognize that in the advent of such events as in Flint, Michigan, we're obviously fortunate to be in a place where we can invest dollars we have and that we have available into the infrastructure of the city so that it can be safe and we can protect our drinking water supply, which is fundamental to life," Cain said.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci cast the dissenting vote. He said he supported paying for the replacement of service lines in cases where the owner could not afford to do so, but not for those who can afford it.

"If folks can afford to pay for this themselves and have their service replaced, then I don't know why we should spread the cost to 23,000 other ratepayers to pay for them," Palmucci said. "It should be available to folks who need it who otherwise wouldn't be replacing the lead service line."

Raymondi said the city has already paid to remove lead service lines when replacing water mains, and would continue to do so in the future if the MWRA program was not approved.

"In time, we're going to replace every lead service line in the city anyhow," he said. "This…moves it forward quicker in the public interest."

Councillor Joseph Finn said it would have been unfair to the 141 homeowners to tie their eligibility to income levels when lead service lines had been replaced regardless of income previously.

"[If] suddenly I'm being means tested for something that a whole host of other people may have received previously, I'm not sure I'm going to be to happy about that," Finn said, if he were one of the 141 homeowners.

The MWRA in March made $100 million in interest-free loans available to member communities to remove the privately owned lead service lines. Newton is the only other community to apply for the program so far.

City Aims To Acquire Vacant Lot

owed on the property, which has an assessed value of $227,200, according to the assessor's records.

"It's really an eyesore and it's somewhat of a public health risk to have the toxic soils remaining there," Hines said. "We're really trying to get it cleaned up, clean the gateway, get it back on the tax rolls, and get a potential superfund site off the books in the city of Quincy."

Hines said the owner has agreed to cleanup the site to remove contaminants before turning the property over to Quincy. More than $5 million in state and federal funds have been used to remediate a parcel on Intervale Street the city took previously through the tax title process, he stated, and officials hope to avoid a repeat of that situation by having the current owner cleanup 245 Independence Ave.

If the property were turned over to Quincy, Hines said it could then be developed by the city or sold to a private developer.

A developer has received permission to construct a multi-family condominium project on the Braintree side of the property, though an abutter on the Quincy side has filed an appeal. Hines said a condition of the permit for the Braintree project required the owner to upgrade a pair of private ways on the Quincy side – Bennet Lane and Oak Grove Terrace – to the city of Quincy's standards.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, whose district includes 245 Independence Ave., said he would recuse himself from the council's consideration of the matter. Palmucci said he has been involved in the project over the last five years and has met with involved parties, including the developer, and his recusal would allow him continue to advocate for his constituents living near the site.

National Fencing Champion Nick Andrade Honored

By SCOTT JACKSON

A North Quincy High School junior who brought home a gold medal this summer at the USA Fencing National Championship received a commendation from the City Council.

In July, Nick Andrade won the top prize in the Division 1A Men's Foil event at the national championships in Dallas. In the championship match – against a collegiate fencer from the University of Notre Dame – Andrade came back from three points down to claim the gold.

Councillor Joseph Finn presented the commendation to Andrade at the Sept. 12 meeting. Finn said the council has honored many athletes and teams over the years, but doesn't always get a chance to recognize a national champion.

"The tradition of this body has always been to honor excellence and achievement, especially in athletics. In my time since being here, we've honored everything from mite hockey teams through professional boxers for their skill and the craft they've exercised," Finn said.

"But it's not every night that we get to honor in this chamber a national champion, and yet tonight that's exactly what we're doing."

Finn recognized Andrade for more than his achievement in the arena. Andrade's father, Paul, an artist and instructor at Suffolk University, was killed in a September 2015 motorcycle crash at the age of 49.

"He underwent a tragedy that all of us dread and few of us experience. I think in many respects that no one would have blamed him if he turned in on himself perhaps in someway, but that wasn't Nick's response," Finn said.

"What Nick's response was instead was to choose excellence – to rise above it – and that's exactly what he did. He chose to excel and in making such a choice what he did brought great honor to his name, to his family, and from our perspective I think very importantly, to his city as well.

"Nick, we are very, very proud to honor Quincy's national champion in fencing."

Nick Andrade did not speak at the council meeting. His grandfather, Tony Andrade, thanked the councillors for the commendation.

"On behalf of the family, we'd just like to say thank you," he said. "We're very proud of him."

O'Donnell Promotes Protection Against Real Estate Fraud

Registry Of Deeds Offers Free Consumer Notification Service

Continuing his efforts to protect homeowners against dishonest individuals, Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds residents about the availability of a free on-line Consumer Notification Service offered by the Registry to protect Norfolk County property owners against fraud.

"The F.B.I. has reported that property and mortgage fraud is one of the fastest growing white collar crimes in the United States," O'Donnell said. "Multiple jurisdictions across the country have reported individuals recording fraudulent documents and making it appear like they own another person's home or property.

"While we have been fortunate that this problem has not revealed itself here in Norfolk County, I want to make sure my office is proactively and vigorously protecting consumers," he said.

Any owner of real property in the 28 communities comprising Norfolk County can sign-up for the Consumer Notification Service free of charge by doing the following: Go to the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, and click on the Consumer Notification Service Get Consumer Alerts button to complete the initial registration. From there, follow the remaining sign-up instructions.

Once you have signed up for the service, each subscriber will be able to input two names, individual or business, and the corresponding city or town in Norfolk County for monitoring. They can monitor their real estate for such activities as changes in deeds, mortgages, non-mortgage liens, Homesteads or other land documents that might be recorded against the property.

If a document is recorded against one of the names inputted for monitoring, the subscriber will be alerted via email, usually within 24 hours. The person can check the Registry's online land research records at www.norfolkresearch.org as an option. If a subscriber believes a fraudulent land record has been recorded against their property, they should then immediately contact the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101. The subscriber will also be given a list of public safety referrals by the Registry.

"As your Norfolk County Register of Deeds, I take very seriously the Registry's responsibility to provide secure, accurate and accessible land records for all Norfolk County communities," O'Donnell said. "I also want to be proactive in ensuring that there is no fraudulent activity related to land document recordings. By offering the Consumer Notification Service, the Registry is able to provide a level of protection to the program's subscribers against unscrupulous individuals who would attempt to commit real estate fraud. We are delighted already to have more than 450 residents sign-up for the free service."

Five Trubiano Brothers Who Served In WWII Honored At Dedication

Corner Of Lancaster And Fowler Streets Dedicated In Their Honor At Ceremony

By TOM GORMAN

The corner of Lancaster and Fowler streets in Quincy Point was dedicated to five neighborhood brothers who served in World War II.

About 80 members of their extended family were joined by veterans and local officials during a light rain on Saturday to unveil a plaque honoring the Trubiano brothers who grew up on Lancaster Street. All five – Edward, Robert, Francis, George and Anthony - gave up their jobs at the Fore River shipyard to join the Armed Forces during the height of WWII. They returned safely home after the war and are now deceased.

"Remember, freedom is not free," Past National American Legion Commander Jake Comer, a neighbor of the Trubiano family, told the gathering. "These men did not have to go (into the service). They could have got an exemption by working at the shipyard. But, they went and did their duty and did their job for the American people."

Anthony Trubiano's son, Michael, and Francis Trubiano's widow, Betty and son, Lou were among the family in attendance.

Michael Trubiano explained how his grandparents emigrated from Italy in the early 1900s and settled in Quincy Point to raise generations of their family.

"This was a very close family who grew up right here on Lancaster Street and Edward Street," he said.

He expressed appreciation for the tribute to his father and uncles.

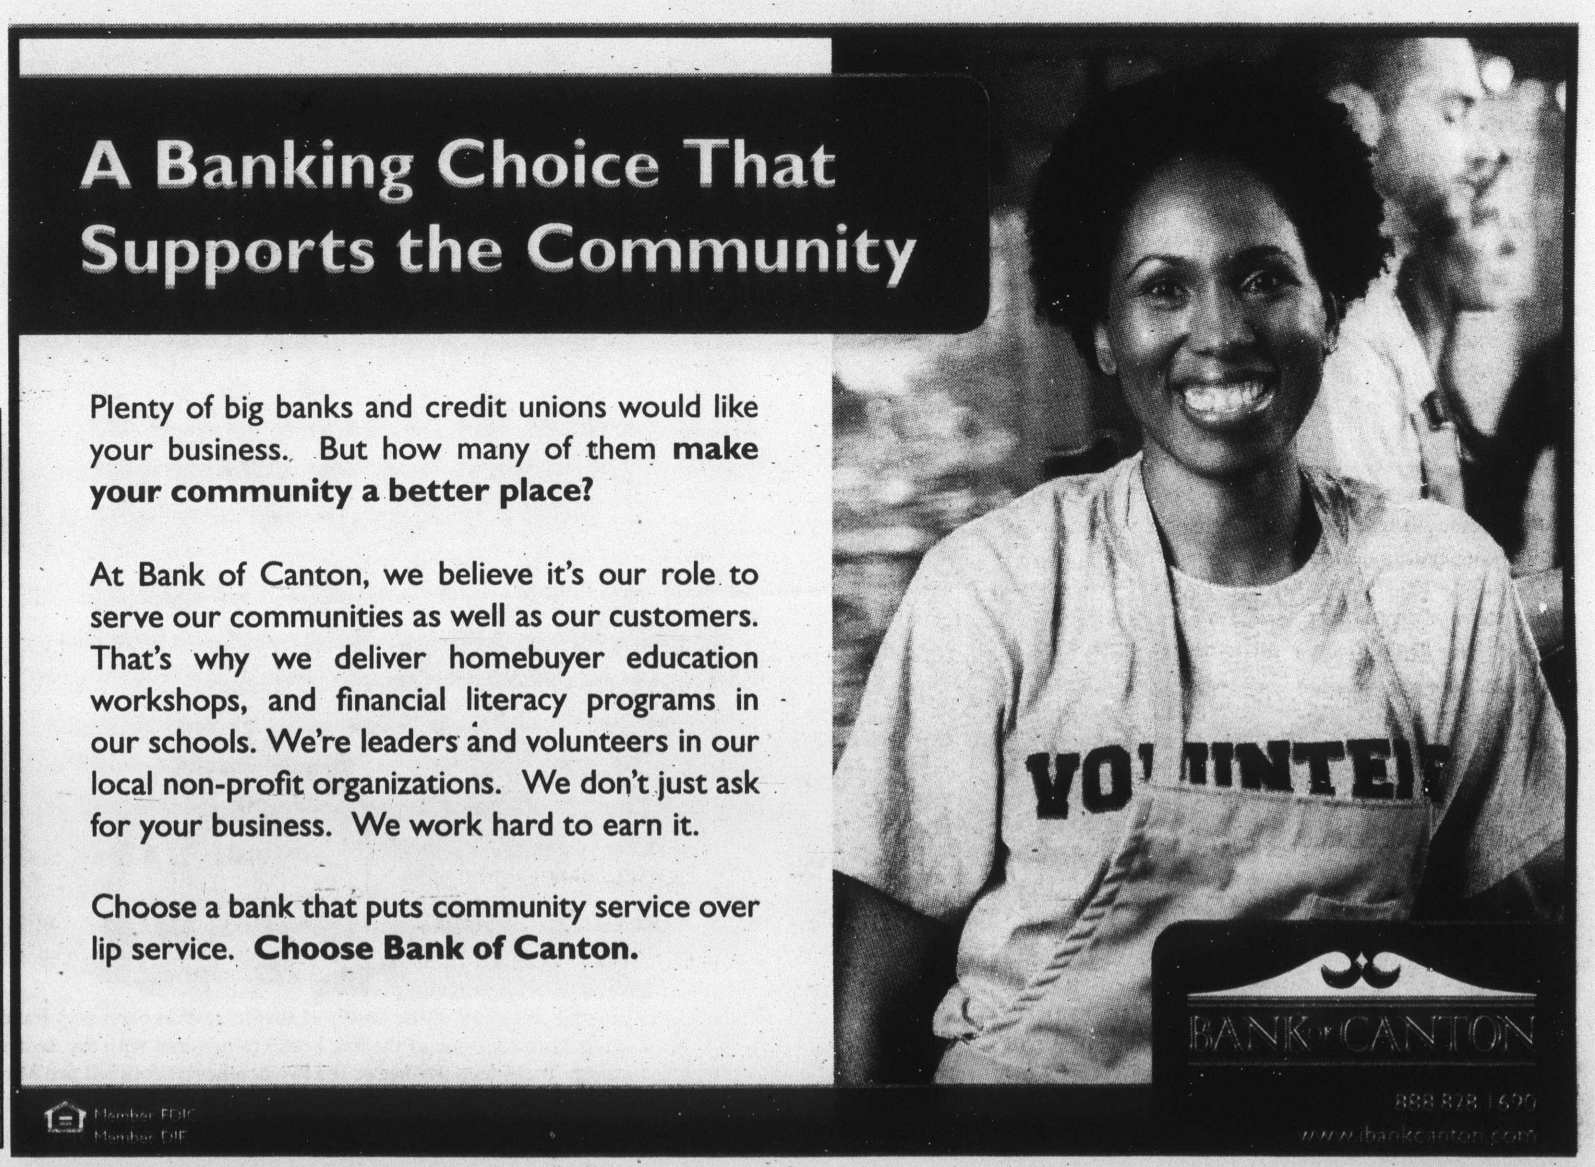

"We acknowledge the courageous service of the five Trubiano brothers that volunteered their services to this country," said Trubiano. "I'm sure they are looking down here today being very thankful."

Mayor Thomas Koch, the son of a WWII veteran, noted what a great city Quincy is and that the basis of a good society and community is a "good, solid family."

"Is there a greater example of that than the Trubiano family?" he said. "They (brothers) not only served their nation in wartime, did their duty, but came back and really built the country and built our community. We honor not only the five brothers that served, but the succeeding generations of Trubianos for all you've done to make this great city the community that we love."

MORE THAN 80 members of the Trubiano family as well as many friends and some city officials attended Saturday's dedication for five Trubiano brothers who left Quincy to serve during World War II. State Rep. and House Majority Leader Ron Mariano lived in the same house as the Trubianos on Lancaster Street when he was younger. He noted how the families in the neighborhood created a social club to help other immigrants adjust to the "new land."

The five brothers all graduated from Quincy High School and voluntarily left their jobs at the shipyard to join the service.

Robert was a Marine from March 1944 to Aug. 1946 who provided security at a Marine base in South Carolina.

Francis, also a Marine, served with the Marine Corps aviation unit in the South Pacific from Sept. 1943 to May 1946.

George served from Feb. 1943 to Nov. 1945 with the Army's 733rd Field Artillery Third Army and was a member of Gen. Patton's "Ghost Army" in England. He was wounded in action when the truck he was riding in struck a land mine.

North Quincy Drops 43-18 Decision To Hanover

Red Raiders Visit Pembroke Friday Night

Hanover will give many teams a difficult night of football over the next six weeks.

The undefeated Indians put up 36 points in the first half and withstood a strong finishing kick from North Quincy to drop the Red Raiders, 43-18 in a Patriot League Fisher Division contest at a rainy and windy Veterans' Memorial Stadium Friday night.

"That's an impressive team," said North coach Mark Nutley. "They're big and strong up front on both sides of the ball. They were able to move us off the line of scrimmage, especially in the first half."

Senior tailback Brad Rogers gained 178 yards and scored four touchdowns for the winners. His fourth TD of the game made the score 42-6 early in the third period.

"He's a great back. He breaks tackles, and he has good speed. He had over 20 touchdowns last year, and he looks like he'll do it again," said Nutley.

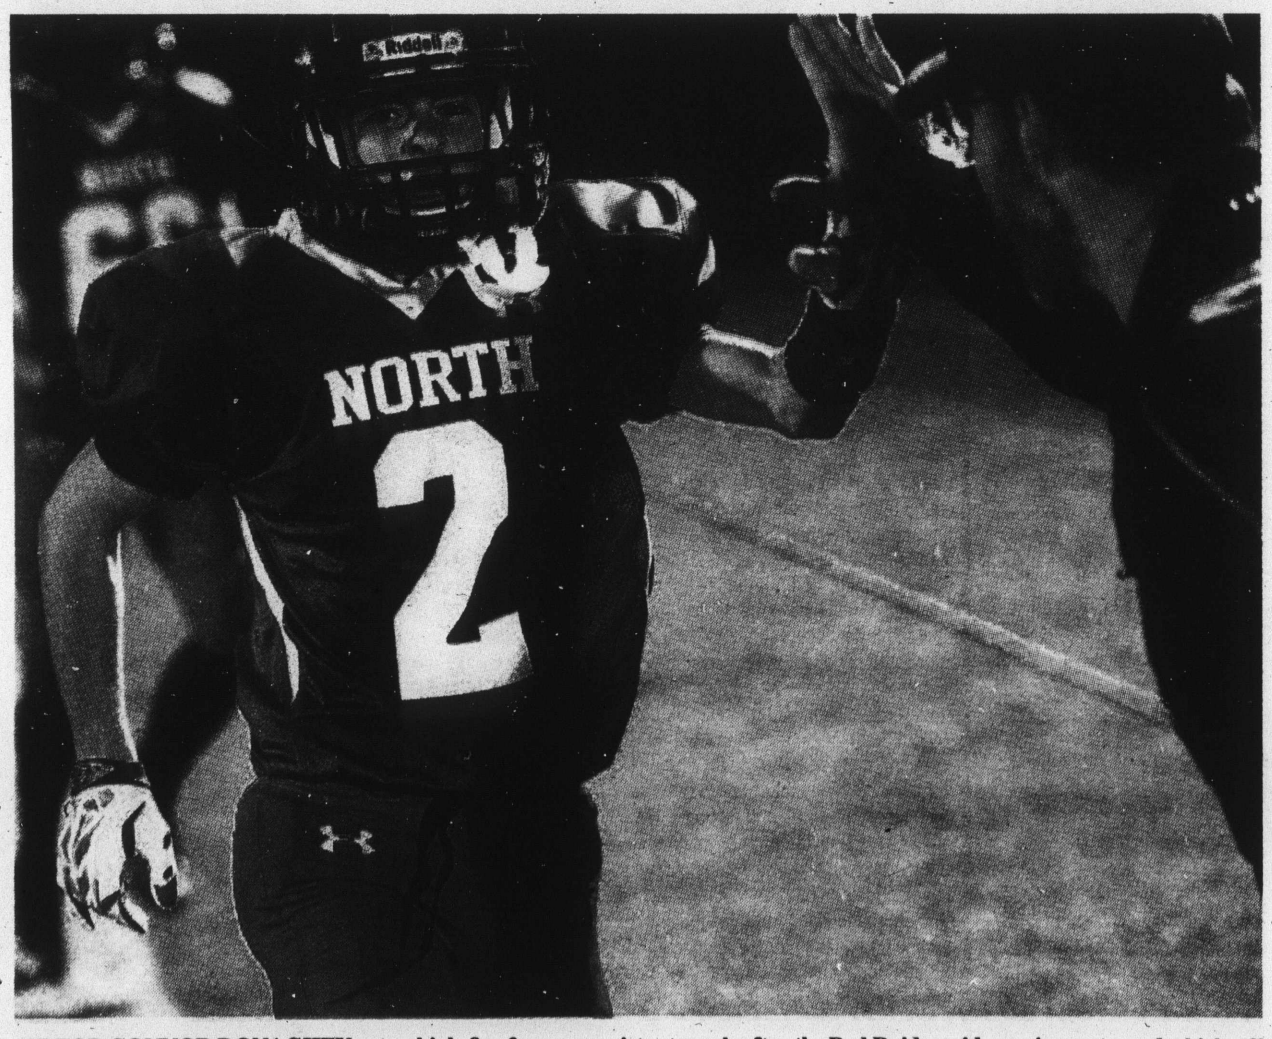

The highlight of the first half for the Red Raiders was a perfectly-executed 90-yard kickoff return for a TD by junior Connor Donaghey which tied the score at 6-6 in the first period. He fielded the ball near the middle of the field, cut right through a big crease and flew down the right sideline behind a wall of blockers led by Kelvin Devarie, Devin Ganno, Jeff Sullivan, Jacob Roos and Ryan Manning.

Donaghey won the sprint for the end zone for the score and his second return touchdown of the season. He had an 83-yarder against Silver Lake. North (1-3) has worked the return game well through its first four games. Brandon Chen had a 55-yard return off a squib kick which set up North's score in its 14-8 loss to Northeast Vocational in the third game of the season.

"We spend a lot of time on special teams and it paid off tonight. We blocked the return well, and Connor has excellent speed," said Nutley.

After Rogers' fourth TD early in the third period, North turned around the game. The defense stiffened and allowed only 13 yards rushing and one first down for the rest of the half. The Red Raiders rushed for 139

Confidence Key For Presidents' Improvement

Visit Hingham Friday Night

By JOE REARDON

Ebbs and flows over the course of a season are inevitable with even the best teams. So as a young squad struggling to find its way, Quincy is going to experience the ups and downs more than most veteran clubs.

Head coach Bill Reardon had seen progress in the first three games of the young season, but that wasn't the case Friday night at Whitman-Hanson in a Patriot League matchup.

It proved disastrous for Quincy. Missed tackles, players not being in the right position and some true talent by the Panthers resulted in a 41-0 shellacking and a long night in the rain for the Presidents.

The loss dropped Quincy to 0-4 on the season and gives Reardon the daunting challenge of having to recharge a young, struggling roster that is experiencing a confidence crisis.

There were plenty of physical mistakes made by Quincy's offense and defense, but it was the mental gaffes that most annoyed Reardon. He came out of the showdown on Dennis M. O'Brien Field with more questions than answers.

"We spent the whole week going over assignments - you're going to do this, you're going to do that - and when they get on the field they don't do what they've been told to do," he said. "It's very frustrating for me. As long as we're getting better I'd be happy with losing, but we didn't get better tonight. There's work to be done."

Trouble began for the Presidents immediately when a fumble on the opening kickoff had Quincy starting out at its own 15-yard line. A Nicholas Maberry pass was tipped by a Panther defender and into the hands of linebacker Bob McCormack at the Quincy 42. Brendan Frawley burst up the middle for the 6-yard scoring run to complete the four-play, 42-yard drive.

A three-and-out possession by Quincy led to the Panthers' second score when its elusive sophomore quarterback Ethan Phelps broke from two missed tackles to scamper 14-yards to make it 14-0. Frawley was practically unstoppable during the drive with three rushes for 39 yards.

Reardon admitted he didn't see the lopsided loss coming. Quincy practiced well during the week and he expected a better game from the Presidents on both sides of the ball. "We had a good week of practice," said Reardon. "Compared to weeks past it was a good week of practice. This was kind of unsuspected to come out and play like this. I thought we were going to play better, I really did."

The Panthers kept right on coming on their third possession. There was no Quincy defender within 10 yards of Jason Bosse when Phelps hit him across the middle for a huge 31-yard gain. Phelps then picked up 12 yards on a keep and then powered his way straight up the middle untouched for a 13-yard score to make it 21-0 with a still more than 10 minutes remaining in the half.

The Presidents did come up with a strong defensive series on the Panthers' next possession highlighted by Brandon Nguyen's tackle on Frawley for a loss of seven yards that forced Whitman-Hanson to punt.

The Panthers weren't down for long as they made it 28-0 with 9:18 left in the half with Phelps making two nifty cuts to on a 40-yard run. Whitman-Hanson added one more score before the break and the Presidents had yet another drive stalled as the result of Owen Lydon's interception of a Maberry pass.

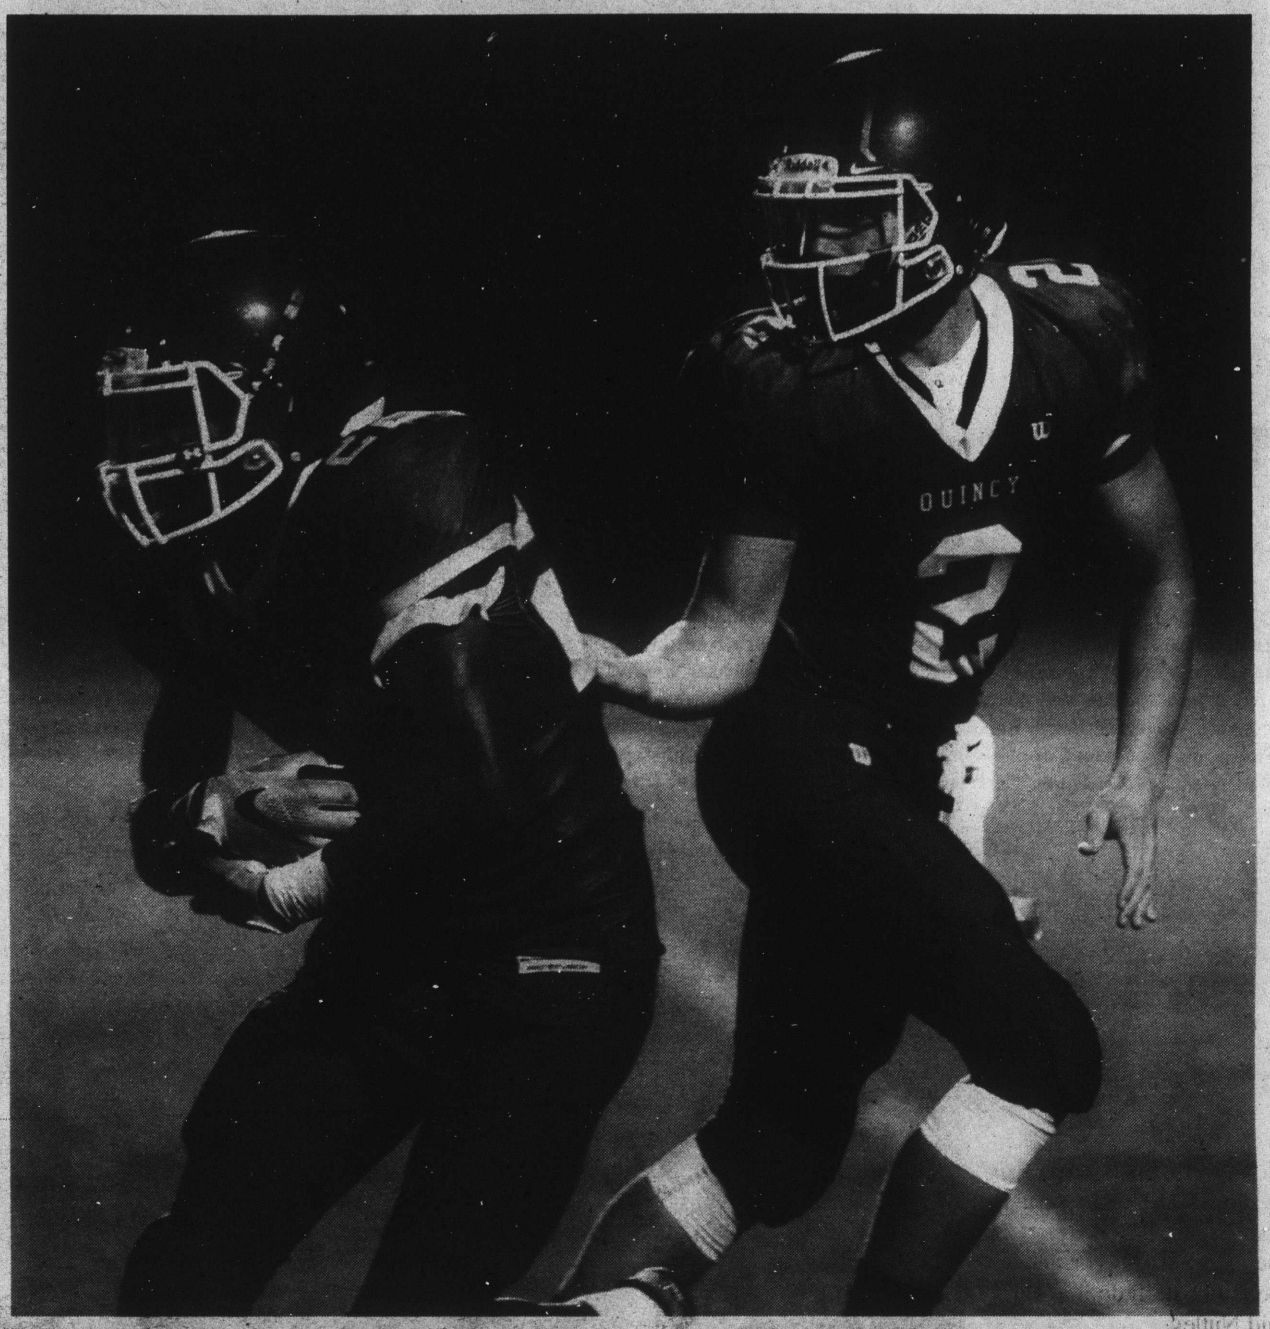

The Presidents did manage to put together a solid drive in the closing minutes of the second quarter as Dominic Laptiste, who rushed for 50 yards on the night, had 20 of them on the surge by Quincy. The Panthers got the ball back once more, but Adam Vu busted through the Whitman-Hanson line to sack Phelps for a five-yard loss.

The Panthers didn't lose a single bit of momentum in the third quarter as they scored on their first two possessions to make it a 41-0 contest.

With Hingham up next Friday, Reardon has to pump some confidence into his roster in a small window of time. "I have to figure out what do they listen to," he said. "What do they respond to? It's obvious the message I'm sending isn't being received. There's a disconnect and I have to find where that disconnect is. Until I find where that disconnect is, it's going to be more of this. So it's very frustrating at the moment.

"It could be their age, although their quarterback (Phelps) is a sophomore and he didn't seem to have many problems. I think it's a confidence thing somewhere involved in there. I have to find a way to get these guys some confidence in what they're doing."

Quincy will try to crack the win column Friday night at Hingham. Kick off at 7 p.m.

QUINCY QUARTERBACK Nicholas Maberry (#2) hands off to running back Dominic Laptiste in a game earlier this season. Laptiste had 50 yards on the ground in the Presidents' 41-0 loss to Whitman-Hanson last Friday night. Quincy will look for its first win of the season Friday at Hingham. LET'S GET KIDS MOVING

If you needed evidence that active children have a higher quality of life than those who spend hours transfixed before TV and computer screens, we have it. Researchers surveyed 2,353 students aged 12-17 years old and used a pediatric-centered quality of life index to examine their physical, psychosocial, and emotional well-being, in addition to their school performance; a follow-up survey was conducted five years later. They found that the active youngsters had the highest physical and social scores, while children with the most "screen time" had the lowest scores on physical, psychosocial, and emotional well-being. The inactive kids also tended to perform less well academically. If children face any physical impediment to being active, chiropractic treatment may help.

Emily Bryson Earns Athlete Of The Week Honors

Sophomore Emily Bryson of Quincy was one of three Brandeis University student-athletes who recently earned University Athletic Association (UAA) Athlete of the Week honors.

Bryson, a 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School, was recognized for the women's cross country team for the second time this season and the fifth in her career. Bryson finished third overall at the UMass Dartmouth Invitational, bettering her fifth-place finish from 2015 and shaving 19 seconds off her time, finishing the 5K course in 17:50.83.

Bryson helped the Judges top the 33-team field with 99 points, successfully defending their title at the race.

Forde, Simmons Blank Emmanuel In Soccer

Three different players scored for the Simmons College women's soccer team in a recent 3-0 victory over visiting Emmanuel College in a Great Northeast Athletic Conference match at Daly Field in Brighton.

The Sharks improved to 3-5-1 overall, including 2-2-0 in league play, while the Saints fall to 4-7-1 and 1-2-1.

Simmons owned a 7-4 advantage on corners kicks, while each team attempted 14 shots.

Sophomore midfielder Cíara Forde of Quincy assisted on Simmons' first goal. Forde sent a lead cross to classmate Mikayla Elliott who made a move to freeze the Emmanuel keeper after she had come off her line, and dribbled past her before putting the ball in the back of the net for her second score of the season.

Quincy Golfers Competing On The Links

The Quincy High School varsity boys golf team had hoped to be more competitive in the talented Patriot League this season thanks to a seasoned group of seniors.

Led by Co-Captains Mike Tervakoski and James O'Leary, the Presidents also returned seniors Tom Pugsley, Shamus McBride, Eoin Tierney and Sam McGahey. "Eoin really worked hard on his game this past summer, so I was excited to see if we could compete this season. We had a nice turnout from the freshman class and close to 25 kids overall and I was able to keep all of them as members of the team," said 12th year Coach Lou Venturelli.

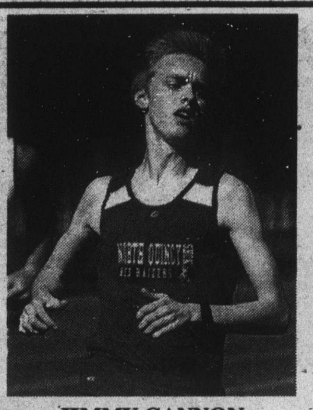

The opener on the schedule was Plymouth South at Quincy's home course, Furnace Brook Golf Club and while the Panthers prevailed, the coach was pleased with the 37 shot by O'Leary and 38 by Tervakoski on the nine-hole course. The team total of 247 for the top six QHS golfers gave the coach reason to believe victory was in the near future.

However, losses to powerhouse teams in the next five matches (Hingham, Hanover, Silver Lake, Duxbury and Scituate) had the team and coach reeling. A home-and-home series with rival North Quincy produced the team's first victory 242 to 256 with O'Leary, Pugsley and McBride shooting 41's and Sophomore Dan O'Leary and Tierney shooting a 42. The excitement was short-lived however, as North Quincy came back the next day to defeat the Presidents 241 to 244 at Presidents Golf Course. Tervakoski shot 38 and Tierney carded a 39 to lead Quincy.

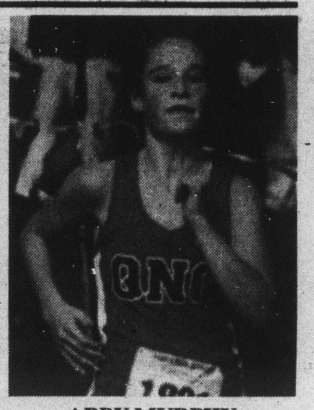

Subsequent defeats to Whitman-Hanson, Pembroke and Plymouth North leave the team at 1-8 but the silver lining is that the coach has given varsity time on the course to a large number of underclassman.

Juniors James Robinson and John Kelly, Sophomores Nolan Walker, Bobby Dunn, Matt O'Brien and Eamonn Mayo along with Freshman Riley O'Connor and Ryan Quirk have all had a chance to play. The rest of the squad includes JV juniors Jordan Collins, Jake and Zack Walsh, sophomore Paul Roche and freshmen Aidan Healy and Jack O'Brien.

"This is one of the nicest group of golfers I've ever had and they really enjoy the game. My brother Dom (a volunteer assistant) and I are trying to make them more competitive," added the coach.

JIMMY CANNON

ABBY MURPHY

QNQ Sweeps Scituate

Quincy-North Quincy cross country won both ends of a meet at Scituate High. The boys took the measure of the Sailors 26-29 and the girls dominated in a 20-35 romp.

Jimmy Cannon again went wire-to-wire for the win in 13:07 over the new 2.4 mile campus course. In a close 3rd was Aiden Golden. Ryan Polsgrove was 5th.

Kevin White and Nick Ouellette went 8-9 to clinch for QNQ. Other finishers were Dakota Pendleton 12th, Brian O'Connell 14th, Tim Pick 19th, Braeden Kopp 20th, Tyler Carey 21st, Hyan Melicio 30th, Ryan Mahoney 34th, Ty Kehoe 40th and Sean Scanlon 41st. It was QNQ's boys first win of the season.

The girls win was more dominant. Abby Murphy followed Cannon's lead setting a course record of 15:57 leading Kara Polsgrove, Devin Hiltunen and Olivia Palazzi to sweep the top four spots clinching victory. Freshman Mairead Kelly was 10th and Eve Anderson was 15th to close out the QNQ finishers. The girls improved their record to 2-2.

"We just ran a much smarter meet today than last week" said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We just ran flat and I didn't coach well either versus Pembroke. We'll need to do all the little things better moving forward as we host the Plymouth's over the next two weeks,"

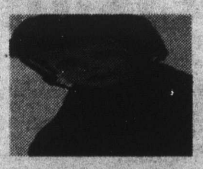

Plymouth South comes to Pageant Oct. 5 and Plymouth North will visit Oct. 11. QNQ will only have one more road dual meet (Hanover) then hosts Silver Lake complete the dual meet season season.

CELEBRATING OUR FOURTEENTH YEAR!

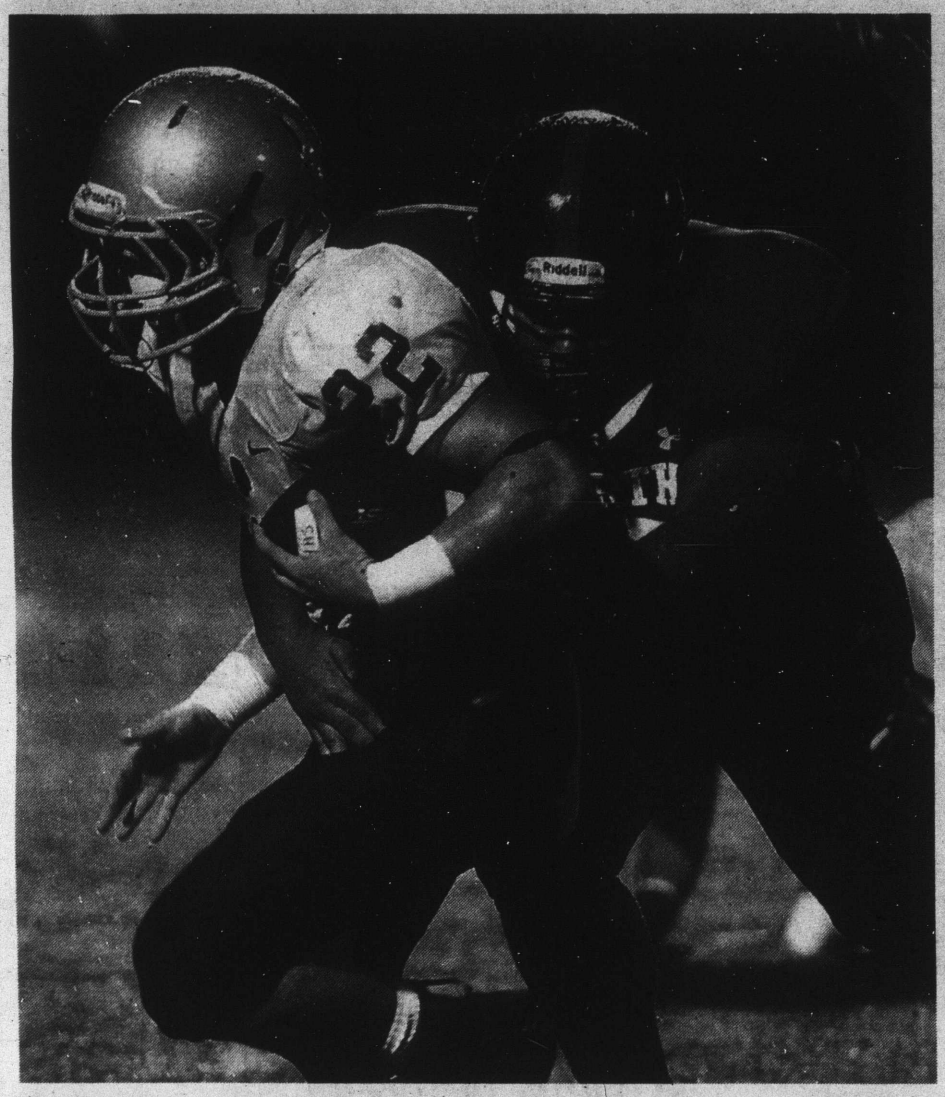

CHRIS DONAGHEY gave North Quincy a spark when he returned a Hanover kick 90 yards for a Red Raider touchdown in the first quarter against the Indians.

yards, nine first downs and two touchdowns over the final two quarters.

"I challenged them at halftime," said Nutley. "Hanover (4-0) came right out and scored after we fumbled, but I thought we played better after that."

Senior Liam O'Connor led the surge with 84 yards on six carries, including a 52-yard bolt for touchdown. Sophomore Win Tran added 29 yards and a touchdown on six carries. Eric Hellmuth had 16 yards on four carries, and sophomore quarterback Tim Layden rushed for 10 yards in addition to connecting with Tom Koch on a 23-yard screen pass on a third-and-16 situation which set up a North TD. Layden scored North's TD against Northeast on a five-yard run.

The offensive line led by Manning, Ganno, Sullivan, Alex Pham and Ryan Oldham cleared holes for O'Connor and Tran, especially off the right side. Koch and Donaghey did a good job of downfield blocking.

"I thought we got a better push in the second half. They didn't quit. Maybe, it's something the offense can build on," said Nutley.

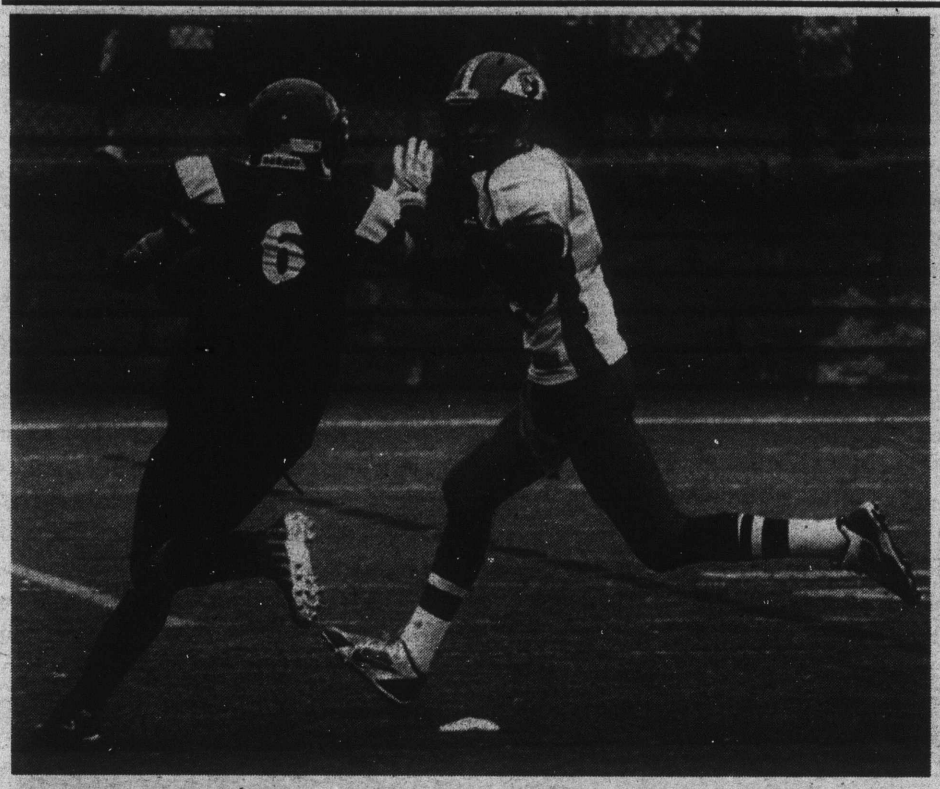

Koch, who entered the game with a team-high 46 tackles in three games, was brilliant at linebacker again, consistently fighting off blocks to stuff the run close to the line of scrimmage. Anthony Thornhill, Nathan Sleiman, Luca Smith, Nelson Walinjom, Ty Finn, and Ganno also played well on defense in the second half.

"Tommy Koch has been a tackling machine for us. He's been in double digits in tackles in all four games," said Nutley. "We did a better job of wrapping up and finishing the tackle in the second half."

Tran scored from the two to finish a 75-yard, 12-play drive for North's first TD of the second half. O'Connor knifed through the right side behind Manning and Pham for a 52-yard score to cap a 67-yard, eight-play drive and make the final, 43-18. Layden kept the drive alive with a two-yard sneak for a first down on a fourth-and-one.

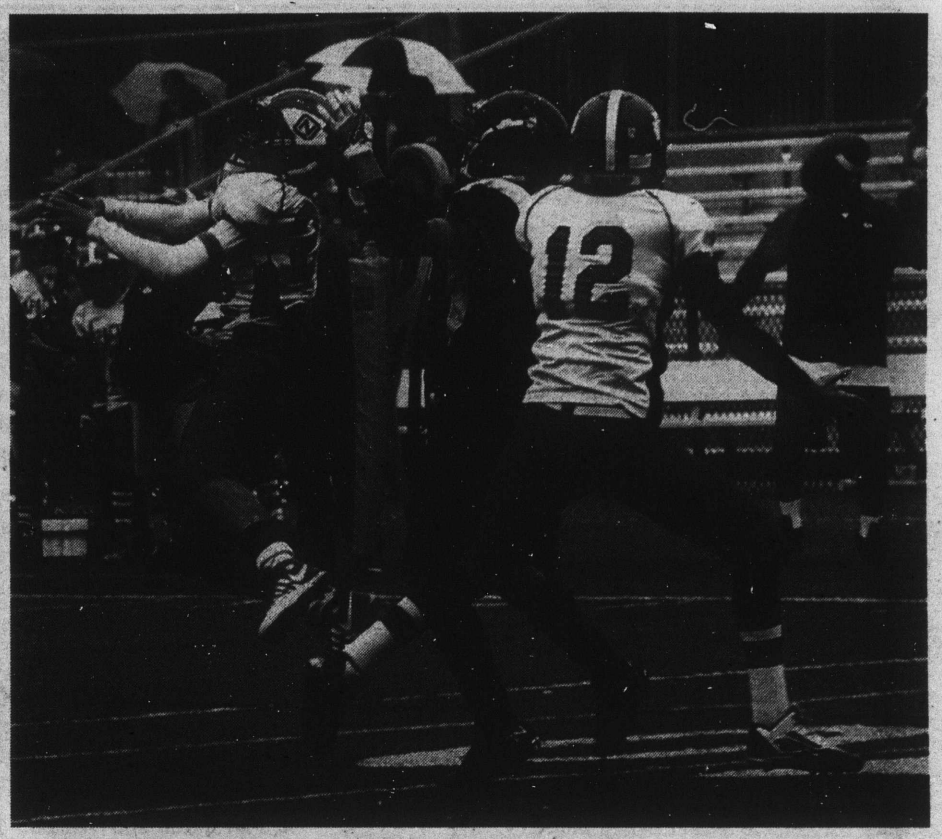

North visits Pembroke Friday. Last year, North rolled past the Titans, 41-6, but Nutley is looking for a tough test on the road.

"They're not the same team they were last year. They played a lot of young kids last year, and they are better," he said. "I saw them against Scituate. They made a couple of mistakes in the kicking game. If they hadn't, they might have won the game."

It was billed as the game of the year as Quincy Youth Football entered the midpoint of their 2016 season. The North Quincy Apaches (3-0) and Houghs Neck Manets (3-0) both entered the game undefeated, battling for first place.

The game lived up to its billing.

The Apaches struck first, early in the second quarter. Apache QB Dan Scolaro threw a 49-yard TD pass to WR James Ward. Tyler Le faked the field goal and passed the TE Colm Geary for the conversion. Both defenses were stifling throughout the first half and the Apaches entered the locker room at halftime with a 7-0 lead.

The Apaches took the ball to start the second half, but, turned it over on downs. The Manets capitalized. RB Isaiah Steinberg broke free on a 35-yard TD run. PK Campbell Tierney added the 2 point conversion kick to take and 8-7 led at the end of the third quarter.

Manets DT Jake Mutch recovered and Apache fumble early in the fourth quarter, The Manets capitalized with a 56-yard TD run by Isaiah Steinberg. The conversion kick failed, as the Manets led 14-7 with 4:40 left to go it the game.

The Apaches immediately answered as QB Dan Scolaro hit WR James Ward on a 53 yard TD pass. The Apaches went for the win with a 2-point kick with 2:45 left to go. The Apaches conversion kick was no good as the Apaches trailed the Manets, 14-13.

Apache QB Scolaro completed two great passes to WR Jamal Maximillien to get the ball down to the Manet 35 yard line. The Apaches attempted one last shot at the end zone but, were halted as Manet LB, Kevin Gomez intercepted the pass as time expired to seal the 14-13 victory.

Manet Head Coach Mike Flavin saw fine performances from Steinberg, Aiden O'Donoughue, Zack Luggelle, Ryan Laroche, Devon Desmond, Jake Mutch and Campbell Tierney.

The Manets (4-0) and Apaches (3-1) will meet again on Oct. 23 for the Desmond Division crown.

The Apaches will visit the West Quincy Elks (3-1) next Sunday at 1 p.m. The Manets will face the Squantum Storm Sunday at 2:30 pm.

In a heavy downpour of rain at LeBrecque Field on Saturday, the Manets improved to 3-1 with a victory over the rival Apaches. Andrew Engren, Mike Cascarano and Kevin Gallant all scored for the Manets.

FRESHMEN

APACHES - 0

The rains subsided but it was still a quagmire at LaBrecque field for the freshmen game. Mike Galligan, Teddy Lynch and Joshua Cannon scored for the Manets. The run game was the only option in this contest. Ryan Gomez was a force on defense, getting to the quarterback several times and Brandon Toomer and Gavin Regan turning in solid efforts. The young Apaches team saw fine performances from Olivia O'Driscoll, Noah Baker, Max Gaudiano, Sean Szilva, Tommy Wirtz, Jack Greene and Kobe Nguyen.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, Sept. 27, Quincy Police Detectives A.J. Carthas and Rick Wash were working on separate purse snatchings (unarmed robberies), one on Sept. 23 at approximately 6:30 p.m. and the other on Sept. 25 at approximately 9 a.m. They were also looking at another purse snatching that happened on Sept. 15th at approximately 6 p.m.

The detectives determined there were similarities in vehicle descriptions, time of the crime, area of where the crime took place, as well as suspect descriptions provided.

The victim in the first case (Detective Bagley's case) described the suspect as being tall and thin with salt and pepper hair, wearing a blue and white flannel jacket with solid blue arms. The victim stated the suspect came up from behind her, threw her to the ground and then ripped her Coach bag from her arm while dragging her. A witness stated the suspect fled to a light blue or gray car, got into the driver's seat and sped off. She also described him as tall and thin with a white and flannel jacket. This incident occurred at the intersection of Farrington Street and Wilson Avenue.

On the Sept. 23rd incident, the victim stated she was walking when a vehicle pulled along side her and stopped. The male driver said, "Give me the bag." The victim tried to flee but fell. The suspect ripped her purse from her shoulder, then got back in his car and drove off. The victim described the vehicle as a brown or tan SUV.

There was also a witness who reported a partial license plate of the suspect vehicle. Both the victim and witness described the suspect as a white male in his mid thirties with short blond hair and approximately 190-200 pounds.

During Detective Wash's follow up investigation, the victim described the suspect as 5'9" with a medium build. She also stated he had on dark type athletic jacket and dark pants. The area where this occurred was approximately 1/2 mile or less from the first incident at Farrington Street and Wilson Avenue.

For the Sept. 25th incident, the victim described the suspect as a skinny white male about 5'9" in his 50's. The suspect got out of a car and pushed the victim to the ground and took off with her purse. Detective Wash's follow up investigation which had to be conducted through a translator, indicated that this suspect was described as a white male, 50ish, short gray beard, curly hair, slim build. She mentioned seeing a brown car pass by and then she was pushed down from behind. She then noticed the suspect's vehicle parked in the middle of Fayette Street with the door open. The suspect got in and fled.

She said the incident occurred at approximately 8:50 a.m. in the area of 107 Fayette Street. This area of Fayette Street is approximately 50 feet from the intersection of Wilson Avenue and one block from the incident on the 15th at Farrington and Wilson. Detective Carthas was able to access a video surveillance camera from a local company camera. He reviewed the footage of the above listed time frames and noted a vehicle matching the description given by the victims. Upon closer observation of the vehicle and the operator, it appears as if the driver was wearing a flannel coat or hoodie, which matched the description of clothing in one of the incidents.

The Detective was able to decipher 3 digits on the license plate from the video and with information about possible makes of the vehicle, he was able to locate a vehicle registered to Weymouth and with only two digits off from what one of the witnesses gave as a possible plate. Detective Carthas then checked the owner's license photo which showed him to be a white male, 5'10" and appeared to be relatively thin. The detective then checked the Quincy Police Department's database and found a booking photo from May 2015, when the suspect was arrested on drug related charges. After viewing that photo he appeared to be thinner and had "salt and pepper" hair.

Based on all the information gathered throughout this investigation, Detective Carthas decided to compile photo arrays with the suspect/car owner as the target. On Sept. 27th, Detectives Carthas and Pepdjonovic met with one of the victims to have her review the photo array. This victim added to her story by telling the detectives that after she was robbed she stood in the middle of the street with her arms out in an attempt to stop the suspect in his vehicle. She said that the car drove right towards her and if she did not get out of the way she would have been run over by the car. The victim, after examining all the photos in the array, identified the car owner as the suspect.

A few hours later, the detectives met with a second victim and she too identified the suspect/car owner as the perpetrator. Based on all the above information, Detective Carthas filed for warrants against the suspect, a Weymouth resident for the following offenses: unarmed robbery (2 counts) and assault by means of dangerous weapon to wit motor vehicle.

Detectives questioned the suspect's girlfriend, who stated the suspect is suicidal and was very concerned. Detective Carthas had the suspect's phone number now and tried calling but there was no answer, so he had the number "pinged" and it showed that the suspect was in Rhode Island. The Rhode Island State Police were contacted and found the suspect sitting on the side of the road. He was taken into custody and a fugitive from justice warrant was issued so that he could be returned to Massachusetts. Nice Work!

Don't Be Skeptical: Social Security Is Here To Stay

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

It's healthy to be skeptical in a world of uncertainties. Major news netwerks sometimes broadcast conflicting facts that require a bit of research to verify. There's even a day in October dedicated to skeptics. So, this is the perfect time to tell all the skeptics that there's no reason to think Social Security won't be here for you well into the future.

Securing today and tomorrow

Recently, the Social Security Board of Trustees released its 76th annual report to Congress presenting the financial status of the Social Security trust funds for the short term and over the next 75 years. We're pleased that legislation signed into law by President Obama last November averted a near-term shortfall in the Disability Insurance (DI) trust fund that was detailed in a previous report.

With that small, temporary reallocation of the Social Security contribution rate, the DI fund will now be able to pay full benefits until 2023, and the retirement fund will be adequate into 2035. It is important that members of Congress act well before 2023 in order to strengthen the finances of the program. As a whole, Social Security is fully funded until 2034, and after that it is about three-quarters financed.

Many people wonder if Social Security will be there for them. Here's a fact that will relieve any skepticism you might have: the increased cost of providing Social Security benefits for Baby Boomers is less than the nation's increase in spending was for public education when the baby boomers were children.

Put your skepticism aside and rest assured that Social Security is with you today and will be with you tomorrow. You can read the entire report at www.socialsecurity.gov/OACT/TR/2016.

The council likewise approved unanimously the $59 million financing plan for the construction of the new Sterling Middle School; the body's finance committee had given the proposal the green light during its meeting Sept. 29 inside the current Sterling. The Massachusetts School Building Authority in July agreed to provide the city with $28.52 million towards the $59 million project.

The council accepted $8,500 in donations during Monday's meeting. The donations included $5,000 from AvalonBay Communities towards the Mayor's Charity Cup Golf Tournament, the proceeds of which benefit various local charities. The remaining $3,500 was from eight Dunkin' Donuts franchisees and will go towards the Quincy police DARE program.

Quincy Boys Soccer Defeats Norwood, 5-2

Five Different Goal Scorers For Presidents

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy High boys soccer team has shown hints of brilliance in the first month of the season, but head coach Mark Spendlove is waiting patiently for the all-around talented play to manifest itself for a full 80 minutes. If and when that does happen, Spendlove believes he has a roster that can play with practically any team on the pitch.

Quincy's play was uneven again Monday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium against Bay State Conference opponent Norwood, but the team was tough when it opened up the field and took advantage of its edge in overall speed. The Presidents played a solid, but by no means dominant, first half against the Mustangs before completely taking over the second 40 minutes and rolling to a very satisfying 5-2 win.

Mohamed Gouriche and Kevin O'Shea both registered goals on free kicks while Christian Pereira, Youssef Khamis and Benito Carvalho all added tallies for the Presidents.

The victory improved Quincy's record to 3-3-3 on the season and gives the injury-plagued club a shot of momentum heading into Friday's Patriot League showdown against Whitman-Hanson and the chance to go over .500 on the season with a month of play in the books.

The Presidents were able to spread out the field in the second half and their speed was too much for Norwood to counter. "The spacing hasn't been good all season," said Spendlove. "In the first half we were just too compact. We opened it up in the second half and it gave us more room. If we open up the field we have players that can take advantage of the spaces. If we're crowded we lose out and it negates what speed we do have."

Quincy had several scoring bids in the first half, but it was Norwood who scored first with a shot that beat goalkeeper Brendan Corbett to the far corner 11:27 in. O'Shea had a pair of bids early with one shot going just wide of the far post and another in close stuffed by Norwood goalkeeper Stephen Tribuna.

Carvalho was knocked to the ground on his bid with 12:29 left in the opening half, but the enormously talented forward got off a strong shot to the short side to make it a 1-1 contest.

Norwood came back and put Quincy in hole in the closing minute of the first half when Seamus Kelley fed Dan Sunnins with a leading pass to that right that Sunnins disposed far corner for the 2-1 advantage.

"It was a bad time to let a goal in - 2-1," said Spendlove. "Their keeper was playing great for them. It could have been one of those games where he'd stand on his head and get it done. I said to them at halftime you shot yourself in the foot. We're not a team right now. We're not gelling as much as we should do."

That would be as close as the Mustangs would get as Quincy scored four goals in the second half to put the BSC squad away.

Tribuna came up with two big saves on consecutive free kicks by Carvalho, but wasn't able to catch up with O'Shea's bullet to the near corner 7:11 in to knot the contest 2-2. Pereira notched the eventual game-winner with 24:37 left on a low shot to make it 3-2.

Quincy's pressure on offense and ability to spread out its players resulted in a relentless surge that the Mustangs weren't able to contain. "They were only sticking one guy up front so we knew we could cheat a little in the back and concentrate on our defense down the middle," said Spendlove. "We got guys wide and were able to open the play a little more."

The Presidents struck again with 13:02 left when Khamis split the defense and lifted a seeing-eye shot high to the far corner for the 4-2. Carvalho very nearly had his second tally of the game, showing off some deft footwork before drilling a hard, low shot that Tribuna was able to cover. Gouriche, though, was able to beat Tribuna with just under three minutes to play on a free kick to give Quincy a three-goal bulge.

More Youth Football Highlights

Squantum Storm vs. Milton Mustangs

VARSITY

The Squantum Storm and Milton Mustangs, battled it out with the boys from Squantum coming out on top. Both teams played with a lot heart and emotion.

On the Storm side of the ball the team was energized by Devante McPhail who had more than 200 yards rushing and started the game out with a 65-yard kick-off return for a touchdown. Sean Jackson ground out an additional 45 yards on multiple runs up the middle, as well as a touchdown (every one of those yards he had to fight and drag 2 and 3 Mustangs).

Liam Hines picked up a touchdown on a perfectly thrown 30 yard pass from QB Tommy Roche, while Sean Feeney and Tommy Gates picked up our only extra point conversions Feeney on a scamper to the left, finding the front corner of the end zone and Gates on 3 yard screen to the right.

The defense saw contributions from Hank "The Tank" Cuniff (who almost stripped another fumble again today), Brendan Hines, Tommy Gates, Hunter MacIssac, "Big" Steve Wallace, Yusef Alzubaidy and Brendan Glynn.

The defense was led by brothers Devante and DeAndre McPhail, both with multiple tackles. Sean Jackson had some outstanding low flying tackles from the middle linebacker position and two brand new players to football Jordan Mei (center) and Brendan Chen (left gaurd) played great on the offensive line.

The Squantum Storm cheer squad was on their "A" game Sunday. The squad looked and sounded sharp, working hard to prepare for regional competition and the end of year league competition. They are an amazing group that is really well coached. Way to go ladies!

JOEY DWYER had a touchdown for the Squantum Storm JV game against the Milton Mustangs.

On to next week and a rematch with the Manets.

JV & FRESHMEN

The Squantum Storm suffered two close losses against the Milton Mustangs.

The Freshmen lost by a touchdown. Fighting back in the second half but running out of time.

The JV lost by 2 points 8 - 6. Joey Dyer had two touchdowns but the second score was called back on a questionable flag. Joey and the entire JV squad had their best game of the year despite the loss.

As a result of soggy weather, a number of kids walked away with more bumps and bruises than usual.

West Quincy Elks vs. Q. Point Panthers

VARSITY

The Elks struck quickly with QB Joe Brahimi to WR Amarion Robinson for a 55 yd touchdown. The Elks second touchdown came from the arm of Brahimi who connected with Malik Franncis for a 45 yd touchdown pass. RB Aidan Dyer ran for a 50 yd touchdown for the Elks third score of the day. Eoin Gormley kicked the extra points to bring the score to 16-8. The Elks also had strong defensive play from Captain Bobby Jaehnig, Billy Hibbard, Riley O'Connell, Rean Beqo and Jwan Bowden.

JV

Playing in poor weather conditions, Thomas Murray once again led the way for the Elks with 3 touchdowns. Strong line play by Sam Akhouzine, Michael Nellany and Dallas Hudgins; tough defense by Gabriel Vilarino and Nicholas Pereira ; and great two-way play by Ryan Milley all contributed to the Elks victory over the Panthers.

FRESHMEN

The WQ Elks upended the Panthers 16 to 6 in the mud at Fore River Field. John Toland opened the scoring for the Elks. Gabriel Rodrigues answered for the Panthers with a long TD run. Jordan Mahoney put the game out of reach with a late score.

Shane Wright scored on both conversions for the Elks. Players having solid games for the Elks were Ben and Dan Hudach, Enhea Panariti, Daniel Textiera, Ruben Santana, Mahoney, Toland, and Wright.

to work, and built a strong middle class family," he said.

Trubiano expressed appreciation to the city for honoring his family and said that many other families across the country have made sacrifices to serve in the Armed Forces.

"It's a wonderful honor," he said. "It's not only an honor for the Trubiano family, but for a lot of WWII veterans."

He said having a permanent sign honoring his father and uncles will be a reminder to younger generations of the sacrifices of all WWII veterans.

"I want my kids to remember what they did and their kids to remember," he said. "A sign like this helps. I hope my kids come visit it. I hope they bring their kids to come visit it and hope they bring their kids to come visit it so they will remember what it was like and how the whole country pulled together to defeat an evil enemy," he said.

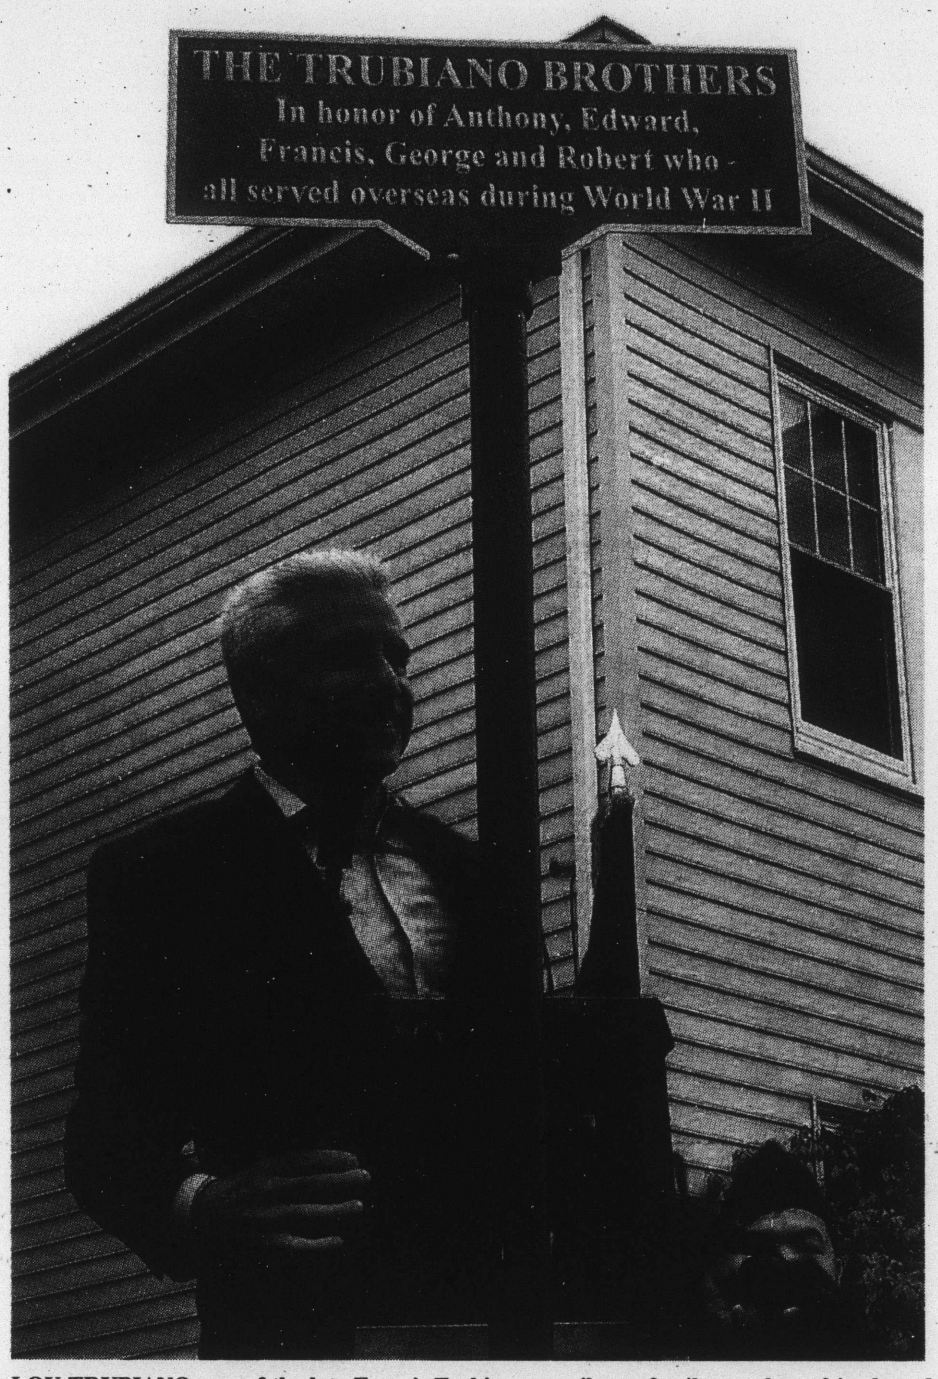

Quincy Veterans Service Director George Nicholson said that Quincy has a history of serving the country.

"Quincy has been a staunch supporter of its veterans citizens, past, present and future, unmatched by any other community in the state," he said.

Comer said that when he drives up Fowler Street to his home on Lancaster Street each day he will look at the plaque honoring the Trubiano brothers' service to the country.

He noted Quincy Point's contributions to the Armed Forces, pointing to not only the five Trubiano brothers, but also the seven members of the Papile family and members of the Mariano family that served and the sacrifice of Rep. Mariano's uncle who was killed in Korea.

"To think of Quincy Point and what they contributed to this nation we should be very proud," Comer said.

The five brothers – Edward, Robert, Francis, George and Anthony – all served during World War II.

No Courthouse At Center T Station

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state is no longer interested in placing a courthouse at the new Quincy Center MBTA station, but Mayor Thomas Koch said it would not affect his plan to build a mixed-use facility on site.

The new station, Koch said in a phone interview, would likely include a mix of uses – residential, hotel, commercial or educational – as opposed to the courthouse. He said a request for proposals is forthcoming in the next several months, but developers have already expressed interest in the project.

"A number of developers are interest," the mayor stated. "We have to wait for the RFP to come out and see what happens.

City Historian Tom Galvin Authors Mount Wollaston Cemetery Tour Guide

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

It's as much about the city's past as it is the future.

A new self-guided tour pamphlet highlighting the history of Mount Wollaston Cemetery is now available to the public through the efforts of City Historian Tom Galvin and several local partners including Discover Quincy, Adams National Historical Site and Keohane Funeral Home.

The full-color, high quality hand-size pamphlet features a walking map highlighting 32 memorials that Galvin selected and researched. He authored the descriptions for each monument as well as the history of the cemetery that was first consecrated Nov. 1, 1855.

While the pamphlet details the lives of many local citizens and leaders who are buried at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Galvin hopes the guide also instills an interest in Quincy history for those who may not be familiar with the city's storied past.

"I hope the pamphlet instills interest in Quincy history – for the broad community as well as individuals who want to know more about the Adamses than just the fact that they were born here," Galvin says. He notes Charles Francis Adams II could be credited for saving the Civil War for the North because he got the British to stop building iron-clad ships for the South even though the South was the primary supplier of cotton for the British textile industry that was taking off at the time of the Civil War.

Charles Francis Adams Sr., the son of President John Quincy Adams, was also the first resident to buy a lot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery for $5. His granite memorial is shaped like a table which is quite rare, Galvin says.

Another Adams buried at Mount Wollaston Cemetery and highlighted in the tour guide is Charles Francis Adams III, the son of CFA Sr. He was the fourth mayor of Quincy and served as Secretary of the Navy under President Herbert Hoover. He was also the treasurer of Harvard University for 35 years. Many including Galvin believe he is the architect of Harvard's academic endowment – the biggest in the world today – at over $37 billion.

"These are huge accomplishments that people generally don't know about because it's history," Galvin says, "and history isn't taught in school like it used to be."

Galvin's pamphlet features more than his succinct and detailed history. Accommodating his research are beautiful photographs of the monuments taken by local photographer Julia Himmel. The back inside cover includes a walking map to guide the history-seeker

QPS Population Up, Open Enrollment Requests Down

Class Sizes Remain 'Well Within Guidelines'

By TOM GORMAN

While there were fewer open enrollment requests, the city's public school population increased this academic year.

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro reviewed the latest enrollment figures during the Oct. 5 school committee meeting. Despite the total student population increasing by 103 this fall, he said class sizes remain at respectable levels.

"There is nothing of concern at this point," DeCristofaro said.

The open enrollment program – where parents and guardians can request that their child attend a school outside of their home school district – drew fewer requests but a higher number of acceptances this school year. More than half of those requests were granted.

"Open enrollment is at a premium at this time," DeCristofaro said.

Out of 314 requests this fall, 185 were accepted. In the 2014-15 school year, 175 out of 338 submissions were accepted.

Siblings of students currently attending Quincy public schools are considered first for open enrollment before non-siblings.

"Neighbors are first before we get into open enrollment," the superintendent explained.

At the elementary level, grades one through five, 18 out of 81 requests were granted this fall. Last year, there were 74 requests and 17 accepted.

For kindergarten, there were 85 requests and 45 granted. Of the 45 accepted, 20 were siblings of enrolled students. Last year, 36 of 98 requests were granted and 18 of those accepted were siblings.

The middle school level saw 53 submissions and 27, mostly siblings, were accepted. In the previous year, 20 of 64 requests were granted.

All 95 requests for the two high schools were granted this year compared to 102 applications accepted in the 2014-15 school year. Quincy High had 63 requests while North Quincy had 32. DeCristofaro said all requests were granted since both schools have the capacity to handle additional students.

Central Middle, Quincy High, Bernazzani and Merrymount had the highest open enrollment requests.

Open enrollments requests are now being accepted for the 2016-17 school year on the district's website, quincypublicschools.com.

RULES OF ENGAGEMENT?

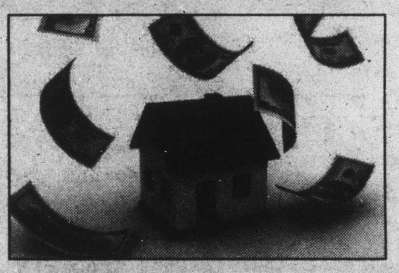

While tradition calls for a diamond engagement ring, many of today's brides-to-be are choosing alternative gemstones and designs that better suit their personal style and taste. In place of white diamonds, some women are choosing colored gemstones including topaz, tourmaline, emerald, ruby, and sapphire. When diamond is preferred, a shift toward edgier cuts and colors (including bold pink, bright yellow, and moody grey) is in the mix. While simple, less-is-more, minimalist designs will always be valued for their sophistication and subtlety, old-school romantics will likely prefer vintage rings with art-deco or heirloom designs. For the free-spirited bride, the bohemian-style ring is the perfect fit. When it comes to engagement rings, to each her own.

From your engagement ring to the joy and beauty of a unique wedding ring, we can make it perfect. Our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. Our store is located at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts.

THERE ARE OVER 44,000 people interred at Mount Wollaston Cemetery in approximately 15,000 family lots with about 100,000 monuments and markers. A new self-guided tour pamphlet authored by City Historian Tom Galvin highlights 32 memorials including members of the Adams and Quincy families, mayors and leaders of business and industry.

through the cemetery and the locations of the monuments.

Among the other memorials featured in the tour pamphlet include several mayors, business and civic leaders as well as monuments that represent examples of Quincy granite cutters craftsmanship.

Galvin also included recognition to veterans – there are six war memorials – and the cemetery's only Congressional Medal of Honor recipient: Ralph Talbot. A World War I veteran, Talbot was a Second Lieutenant and U.S. Marine Corps aviator who received the nation's highest military decoration for "exceptionally meritorious service and extraordinary heroism."

Galvin also pays tribute to the city's first responders with photos and descriptions of the Police and Firemen's memorials.

The pamphlet's origin can be traced back about 15 years ago when Galvin decided he wanted to produce this type of literature.

"I decided to do this a long, long time ago and I realized at the time I didn't know enough about the cemetery because it's huge," Galvin explained. "My main interest was in the granite memorials so I narrowed my focus from the overall cemetery to the granite industry."

About a dozen years ago, he published a different pamphlet that focuses on the granite industry and its leaders. "That and of itself was overwhelming because there's so many people involved in the industry and there weren't any people or families left who knew them."

Galvin narrowed down a group of 500 people to 60 for the first pamphlet. This is the same pamphlet that he hands out at his cemetery tours that he's been leading for 12 years.

The new pamphlet is something he's wanted to do for the past 15 years. He mentioned the idea to Margaret Laforest, executive director of Discover Quincy, and she said she would find someone to finance the pamphlet. She got a grant and it was supplemented by the National Park Service in Quincy and Ed Keohane and Keohane Funeral Home.

Next came the hard part: deciding what to include in the pamphlet.

"The question boiled down to: who is your audience? What is the community you are trying to attract and what might they be interested in? The more you look at it – 44,000 people are buried there – it's very diverse."

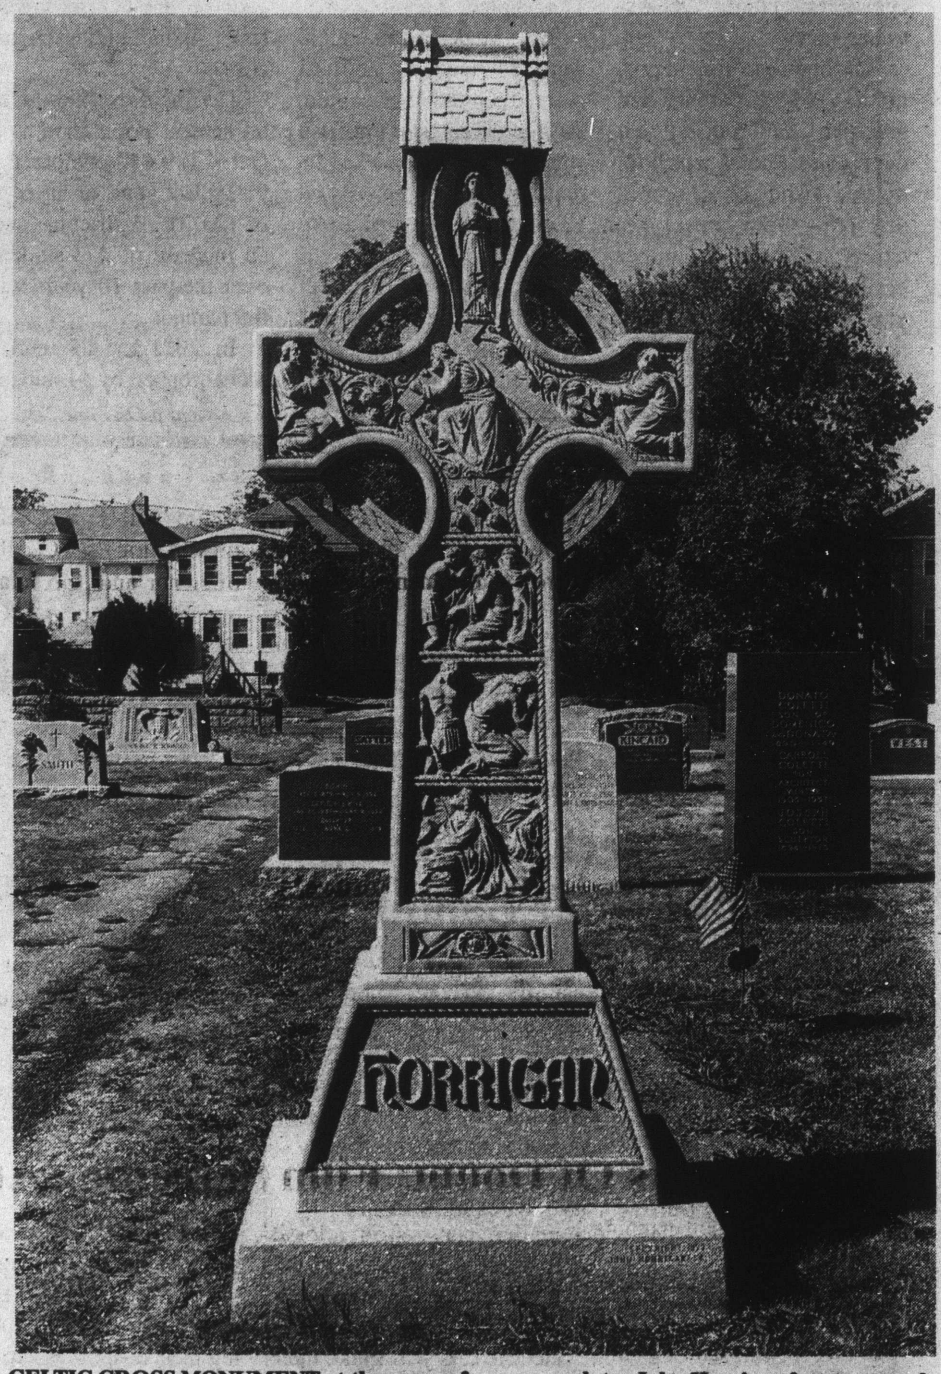

Two well-known historic families that he spotlights are the Adamses and the Quincys.

"I wanted to do the Adamses because the Adams family that is Mount Wollaston Cemetery is pretty much ignored," he says. "Everyone knows about the crypt (United First Parish Church where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives are entombed) and (historic) Hancock Cemetery across the street but there's more to the family here and the same is true of the Quincys.

"There's not a lot of Quincys there but there are enough that they should be mentioned."

Eleven members of the Quincy family are buried in the Josiah Quincy lots at Mount Wollaston. Included are two Josiah Quincys who served as Mayor of Boston (a third Josiah Quincy also served as a mayor of Boston (the "Great Mayor") but is buried Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge) and Eli-

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 real photo postcard view of the cottages and marsh on Post Island Road and Poplar Street in Post Island which is just to the east of Adams Shore. In 1634, William Coddington's 600-acre colonial land grant from the Massachusetts Bay Colony included what is today Merrymount, Adams Shore and Post Island. He sold that portion of his grant when he exiled himself to Rhode Island in 1637. It stayed intact for over 250 years and became known as the Mount Wollaston Farm. Through inheritance it was owned by the Adams family during the 19th century. Post Island was part of the farm until Adams family heirs sold it to land developers in the 1890s. A sign just off Sea Street claims it was first settled in 1896. These cottages are now mostly year-round homes. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

City Honoring Vietnam Veterans

In keeping with nationwide events commemorating the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War, Quincy would like to honor the men and women of our City, living and deceased, who served in that war and their families.

Over more than a decade of war, through one of the most challenging missions we have ever faced, these men and women served with honor, valor and distinction and defined an entire generation of Americans. This recognition for these men and women and their families, the City, through the Quincy Veterans Services Office will consist of the presentation of a Certificate of Honor and Appreciation, along with a special "Challenge Coin."

To accomplish this, the Quincy Veterans Services Office is asking that Vietnam veterans and/or their families call the office at 617-376-1192 and leave their names and branch of service and then be present for the Veterans Day Observance. Thank you for your service and if you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call us.

'Merchants Of Doubt' Film Screening At Library Oct. 18

The 2014 award-winning film, "Merchants of Doubt," will screen Tuesday, Oct. 18 at 7 p.m. at the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Admission is free.

"The film shows that the climate change deniers are using a playbook originally developed by the cigarette lobby to cast doubt on the harmful effects of tobacco," said David Reich, board chair of Quincy Climate Action Network, cosponsor of the movie, along with the library, Massachusetts Climate Action Network, and Fore River Residents Against Compressor Station (FRRACS).

"In fact," Reich continued, "some of the same people who pushed the pro-tobacco line are working on the climate change denial campaign. In this case, the funding comes from a fossil fuel industry that's scared to death that renewable energy and technologies like electric cars will make their products obsolete."

Another sponsor, FRRACS, has been leading the fight against Spectra Energy's proposed Fore River compressor station. Explaining their cosponsorship of a film about climate change denial, FRRACS lead Alice Arena said, "If you continue building fossil fuel infrastructure, you're on a path to the earth not being inhabitable. We're not just aiming to keep it out of Weymouth. We're aiming to keep it off the planet."

Ward 4 Democratic Committee Meeting

The Ward 4 Democratic Committee invites all to a "Kick Off" meeting Thursday, Oct. 20, at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., Quincy.

"The Ward 4 Democratic Committee is organizing this upcoming meeting in the spirit of Bernice Mader, who was a longtime Ward 4 chairperson," said Mario Traficante of the Ward 4 Democractic Committee. "Bernice was a true activist and inspired many who knew her. Bernice was a strong campaigner and brought many new people into the fold. She was a strong advocate for inclusivity and practiced it with the members of Ward 4," Traficante said. "Bernice lead by example and educated her community on how to use grassroots campaigning to win elections and to improve their lives.

"Consistent with our long and proud tradition to the protection of open space and historic sites," Traficante continued, "we are proud to have as our guests the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum at the meeting. They will share the rich history about granite, railroads and Ward 4. The mission of the museum is to foster interest in the historical granite industry, preserve historical information and material related to Quincy granite and to promote interest through exhibits, programs and educational activities."

Traficante added:

"Please join us and bring a friend to learn more about the Ward 4 Democratic Committee and learn how we can all work together to make our community stronger and more informed."

Mayor Threatens Court Action Against M.D.C

Mayor James R. McIntyre threatened to take the M.D.C. to court, if necessary, to alleviate morning traffic jams at the Neponset Bridge.

McIntyre said the congestion between 7 and 9:30 a.m. has become unbearable for Quincy residents trying to get into Boston.

"The M.D.C. is trying to feed traffic from Hancock Street and Quincy Shore Drive into two lanes during these rush hours and it is too much squeezing," McIntyre said. "We have asked the M.D.C. to make the traffic four lanes one way north during these hours, but, so far, our pleas have fallen on deaf ears."

McIntyre said he would ask Governor Francis W. Sargent to intervene.

"If there is no response from the governor," McIntyre said, "I will have no alternative than to take the M.D.C. to court."

HONG KONG FLU VACCINE FOR CITY'S SENIOR CITIZENS

Quincy's Paul Healy Cast In Milton Players' Comedy

The Milton Players begin an exciting 84th season with the laugh-out-loud comedy, "Lie, Cheat and Genuflect." The season's opener is directed by Frank Moffett.

In the comedy, Billy and Tom Buckle find themselves in a messy situation. They have gambled away their life savings and are now being sought after by a man named Pizza Face Petrillo. Although the two are desperate for a piece of their grandfather's will, the likelihood of them receiving any is slim. Cue the nun costume, shady lawyer and man-obsessed housekeeper and you have a night of laughter with the Milton Players.

Quincy resident, Paul Healy, plays shady lawyer Robert Fryberger. Healy was in last season's production of Becky's New Car and was excited to get back on the Milton stage. Healy says, "The cast has set a high bar and I'm just trying to hustle and keep up…I'm enjoying every second of this."

Phobias: Categories, Risk Factors, Treatments

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

A phobia is an overwhelming and irrational fear of an object or situation that poses little real danger but provokes anxiety and avoidance.

Unlike episodes of brief apprehension, a phobia is long lasting, causes intense physical and psychological reactions, and can affect your ability to function normally at work or in social settings. Several types of phobias exist, however not all require treatment. However, if a phobia influences your daily life, several therapies are available that can help you overcome your fears.

Phobias are divided into three main categories:

• Specific phobias. A specific phobia involves an unreasonable, persistent fear of a specific object or situation that's out of proportion to the real risk. This includes a fear of situations such as airplanes or enclosed spaces; environment such as thunderstorms or heights; animals or insects such as dogs or spiders; blood, injection or injury such as knives or medical procedures; or other phobias like loud noises or clowns. It's not uncommon to experience phobias about more than one object or situation.

RUTH JONES

• Social phobia. Social phobia involves a combination of extreme self-consciousness and a fear of public scrutiny or humiliation in common social situations. This person fears being rejected or negatively judged or distresses about offending others.

• Fear of open spaces (agoraphobia). This is a fear of an actual or anticipated circumstance, such as using public transportation, being in open or enclosed spaces, being in a crowd, or being outside the home alone. The anxiety is caused by fearing no easy method of escape or help if intense anxiety arises.

Most people who have agoraphobia develop it after having one or more panic attacks, causing them to fear another attack and avoid the place where it occurred. For some people, agoraphobia may be so severe that they're unable to leave home.

No matter what type of phobia you have, it's prone to producing the following reactions:

• A feeling of uncontrollable panic, or dread when you're exposed to the source of your fear

• The feeling that you must do everything achievable to avoid what you fear

• The inability to function normally because of your angst

• Physical reactions, including sweating, rapid heartbeat, difficulty breathing, a feeling of panic and intense anxiety

• The knowledge that your fears are unreasonable or exaggerated but feeling powerless to control them

• Anxiety just thinking about what you fear

• In children, possibly tantrums, clinging or crying

The actual cause of phobias is still undetermined. However, there does appear to be a link between your own phobias and the phobias of your parents. This could be due to genetics or learned behavior.

Factors that may increase your risk of phobias include:

• Your age. Social phobia typically develops early in life, usually by age 13. Specific phobias first appear in childhood, usually by age 10. Agoraphobia occurs most frequently in the late teens and early adulthood, usually before the age of 35.

• Your relatives. If someone in your family has a specific phobia, you're more likely to develop it, also. This could be an inherited tendency, or children may learn phobias by witnessing a family member's phobic reaction to an object or a situation.

• Your temperament. Your risk may increase if you're more sensitive, more inhibited or more negative than the norm.

• A traumatic event. Experiencing a traumatic event, such as being trapped in an elevator or attacked by an animal, may initiate the development of a phobia.

Although phobias may seem trivial to others, they can be overwhelming to those who have them, instigating problems that affect many facets of life and can progress to social isolation, depression substance abuse and even suicide.

If anxiety affects your ability to function at work or socially, think about seeking medical or psychological treatment. Begin by talking to your primary care provider. Depending on your situation, you may be referred to a mental health provider for evaluation and treatment. The diagnosis of phobias is based on a comprehensive clinical interview and diagnostic guidelines. Your provider will inquire about your symptoms and obtain a medical, psychiatric and social history.

To be diagnosed with a phobia, you must meet certain criteria in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders published by the American Psychiatric Association. This manual is utilized by mental health providers to diagnose conditions and by insurance companies to reimburse for treatment.

Your provider may propose medications or behavior therapy or both to treat phobias. The goal of phobia treatment is to lessen your anxiety and fear and to facilitate you to more effectively manage your reactions to the object or situation that triggers them.

Medications can help control the anxiety and panic that may ensue when thinking about or being exposed to the object or situation you dread. Some common treatments may include: beta-blockers, antidepressants, or sedatives.

Psychotherapy is frequently used alone or in combination with medications. Several types of psychotherapy may be effective:

• Desensitization or exposure therapy focuses on changing your response to the object or situation that you fear. Gradual, recurrent exposure to the cause of your phobia may help you learn to overcome your anxiety.

• Cognitive behavioral therapy involves exposure combined with other techniques to learn ways to view and cope with the feared object or situation in a different way. You ascertain alternative beliefs about your fears and the impact they have on your life.

Simultaneously, beneficial steps can be taken on your own to assist you in coping such as, support groups, managing your medication as directed, getting adequate rest, eating healthy and aiming to be physically active every day. Although many specific phobias cannot be prevented, early intervention and treatment following a traumatic experience may prevent the person from developing a severe anxiety disorder in the future.

Quincy Joining AARP Age-Friendly Initiative

By SCOTT JACKSON

With the number of Quincy residents over the age of 60 set to increase by 40 percent during the next decade and a half, city officials plan to join an AARP initiative aimed at improving the lives of senior citizens.

The initiative will be beneficial for other residents as well.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who chairs the City Council's senior citizens committee, introduced a resolution Sept. 12 asking the city to join the AARP's age-friendly communities initiative. The council passed the resolution in a unanimous vote, and Mayor Thomas Koch plans to participate in it

Croall said he was inspired to research the age-friendly initiative because of the attention paid to millennials – those born in the 1980s and later – in terms of the Quincy Center redevelopment.

"I know as a councillor sitting in the well here we spend a lot of time digging through a dialogue that specifically deals with downtown and caters to a noticeably younger demographic," Croall said.

"That kind of got me to think what do the numbers look like internally here outside the downtown, and what are we facing as a city 10, 15 years as we begin to consider this aging population."

Croall, in his resolution, cited a University of Massachusetts Gerontology Institute study that found the number of residents over the age of 60 in Quincy is set to increase by 40 percent by the year 2030.

Croall said the point of joining the AARP initiative is to complement work already done by the city.

"When you look at the amount of output done by the city department heads, we're doing a lot of things right when it comes to being an age-friendly community, being a livable community," he stated.

"What this program in my mind specifically is designed to do is to provide a framework and enhance upon what we're currently doing. More importantly, as we consider the capital improvement plan and the expenditure of future funds going down the road, are we maximizing that dollar in a capacity that applies to everyone equally?"

Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said Koch plans to join the initiative, saying it would build on work the city is already doing and also address areas the city has yet to look at.

"We appreciate the council bringing this forward," he said.

There is no cost to the city for participating in the initiative.

Valerie Spain, an AARP outreach specialist, appeared before the council Sept. 12 to provide an overview of the age-friendly communities program.

Spain said seven other communities in Massachusetts have already joined the AARP initiative, including Boston, Newton, New Bedford, Salem and the entirety of Berkshire County. Six other Bay State communities have begun the process to join.

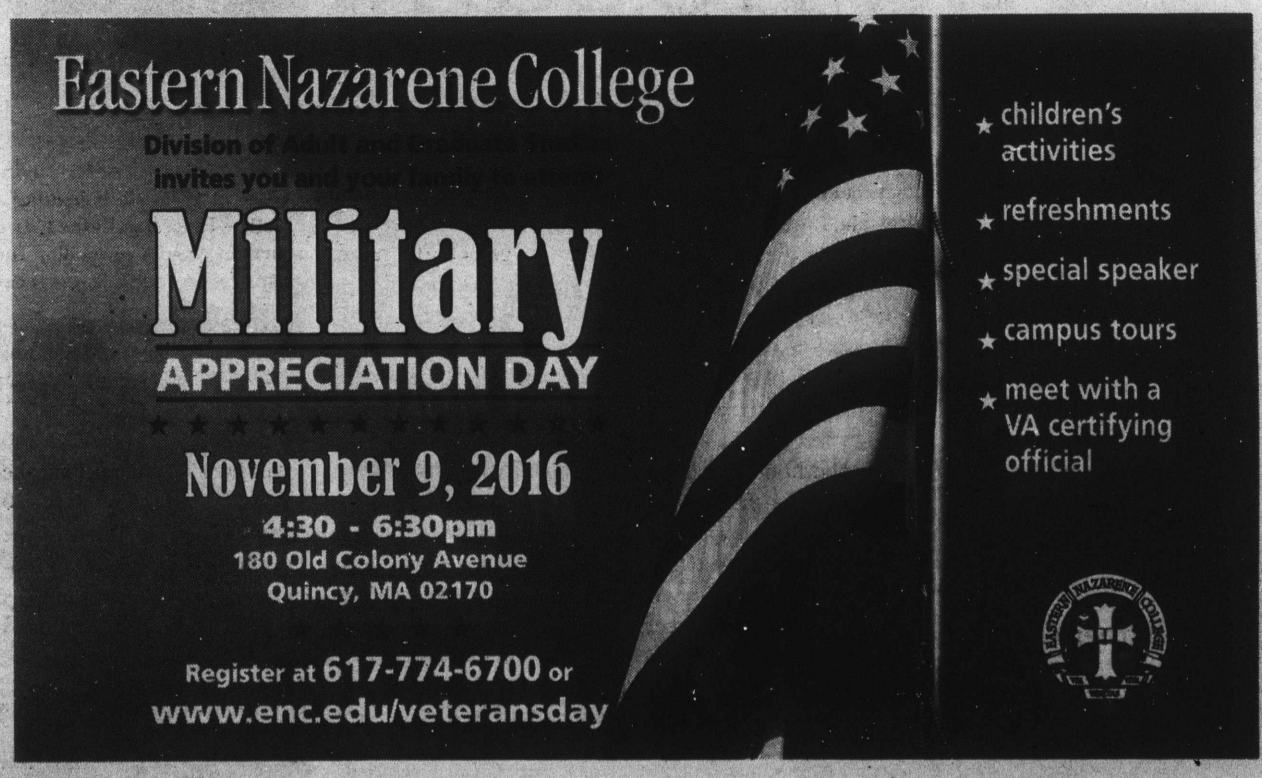

Once a community is accepted into the initiative, Spain said there is a five-year partnership between the community and the AARP. The first two years entail planning, with implementation taking place in years three through five, followed by an evaluation process near the end of the fifth year.

The initiative looks at one or more of eight separate domains that affect seniors: outdoor spaces and buildings; transportation; housing; social participation; respect and social inclusion; civic participation and employment; communication and information; and community and health services.

While the program is aimed at improving the lives of senior citizens, Spain said residents in other age groups benefit as well.

"What communities do to make themselves age friendly is beneficial to everyone, from millennials to families to folks with disabilities," she said, later citing millennials as an example.

"Studies have also shown that the things that appeal to older folks as far as how a city is accessible and affordable and transportation and housing are very appealing to millennials. They don't want to be driving all the time. They want access to transportation, bike lanes, those sort of things."

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Eggplant – And Then Some

By MARIE

It is amazing how versatile eggplant can be – at least in my family.

My niece, Natalie, sent me an eggplant grown in her husband Bill's garden. When I got my eggplant it was one of those hot days and I did not want to go through making the typical eggplant parmesan process. So I merely cut the eggplant in pieces, saluted them in tomato sauce and poured it over pasta and voila! What a treat.

When I called Natalie to thank her I told her how I made the eggplant and to my surprise she had made it the very same way. Later on when I talked to my daughter Nancy – who also received an eggplant – she made hers with potatoes so here are the two recipes.

RECIPE 1

Natalie & Marie's Recipe:

1 medium sized eggplant - cut into pieces. (I left skin on)
1 tablespoon of fresh basil
3 tablespoons of olive oil
1 teaspoon of garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste.
2 or 3 cups of tomato sauce

In hot oil sauté the eggplant, add salt, pepper and basil. Cover and cook and stir until eggplant is al dente. Add tomato sauce, cover and stir on low heat until eggplant is tender.

RECIPE 2

Nancy's Recipe:

1 medium eggplant – cut into pieces
1 pound of small white potatoes cut up (not peeled)
3 springs of fresh of Rosemary
2 or 3 leaves of fresh basil cutup
¼ teaspoon of turmeric (optional)
¼ cup white wine
3 tablespoons of olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste

In hot oil sauté the cut-up potatoes (covered) until they are al dente. Add eggplant, wine, Rosemary, basil, salt and pepper. Cover and cook until eggplant is done.

When my eggplant dish was completed I cooked ravioli for my son, Dom, and poured the eggplant sauce over the raviolis. Sprinkled this easy dish with grated cheese and got raves.

License Board Warns Quincy Avenue Restaurant

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials have issued a written warning to a Quincy Avenue restaurant after four patrons were arrested during what police called a chaotic fight following a wedding that left two officers injured.

The Board of License Commissioners handed down the written warning to China Pearl, located at 237 Quincy Ave., during its meeting Oct. 4.

Police Lt. Peter Turowski, the department's liquor inspector, said officers were called to the restaurant shortly before 11:30 p.m. on Sept. 3 for a report of a fight where a gun had been shown.

Turowski described the scene as total chaos with numerous scuffles breaking out between patrons inside and outside the restaurant. At one point, two officers drew their handguns, but did not fire, as a pickup truck accelerated towards them – traveling at least 40 miles per hour, one patrolman wrote in a report – and refused to slow down until coming to a screeching halt.

Fifteen officers – the entire shift out on patrol at the time – were called to the scene along with two officers who had been working details elsewhere that night and two officers from the Braintree Police Department; three Brewster ambulances also responded.

"While this was occurring, it left the rest of the city of Quincy unprotected," Turowski said.

Four patrons were arrested that night on charges including resisting arrest, assault and battery on a police officer, assault by means of a dangerous weapon (a motor vehicle), affray and disorderly conduct.

Two officers, Turowski said, sustained injuries to their knees, elbows and wrists, and also came into contact with blood from patrons involved in the fighting.

Turowski said the incident may have been avoided had the restaurant requested a police detail that night, which is required by city ordinance for events featuring alcohol, dancing and music. The lieutenant said China Pearl had last requested a detail officer for an event in January 2015.

Brian Moy, the restaurant's owner, said the officers' reports from that night were true.

"We're not happy about the situation," he said. "We actually feel really bad about the injured officers, the quote unquote chaos."

Moy said he has requested detail officers for all weddings that have taken place since Sept. 3, and would continue to do so in the future for all functions requiring one. Additionally, Moy has hired security officers to work at the 630-seat restaurant.

Moy said 600 guests attended the wedding Sept. 3, but typical weddings taking place at China Pearl have between 200 and 400 in attendance. So far this year, five or six events – including weddings and other functions – have had 600 guests, he stated.

Police Chief Paul Keenan suggested the restaurant hire at least two detail officers for functions with 600 patrons. If the department cannot find someone to work that detail, patrol officers would keep an eye on the area.

Moy said he has provided police with a month's worth of detail requests at the start of each month to make it easier for the department to hire a detail officer.

Inspectional Services Director Jay Duca asked Moy if China Pearl was mainly a function hall at this point. Moy replied that China Pearl continues to primarily serve as a family restaurant that typically closes at 9:30 p.m. – the restaurant also moved the closing time for weddings up to 11 p.m. from midnight.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said he was "greatly disturbed" by the incident.

"I'm greatly disturbed that all of our police resources were tied up at your establishment – it certainly created a huge problem for the rest of our residents… You tied up half of our EMS response ambulance units as well," Barron said.

"We don't see you too often in front of us for these types of issues, and hopefully we won't again, but please take care of it."

Barron and Duca also commended the responding officers for showing restraint that night.

Keenan made the motion to issue the written warning, which was approved unanimously.

In other business Oct. 4, the Board of License Commissioners also:

Granted a special use permit for the South Shore YMCA's sixth annual Frozen 5K Road Race, which will take place Jan. 8.

Granted two one-day wine and malt permits to the Woodward School for fundraisers scheduled for Oct. 13 and Nov. 19.

Deer Hunt To Span 4 Days

The DCR is authorizing the hunt this year as part of a multi-year management plan to help reduce the number of deer in the 7,000-acre state park, which covers parts of Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Dedham, Milton and Randolph. By reducing the number of deer, officials hope to promote tree and plant regeneration, boost the sustainability of species diversity, and diminish the risk of forest fires by encouraging plant growth.

"The negative impacts of too many deer within the Blue Hills State Reservation remains of the utmost concern to the Department of Conservation and Recreation," DCR Commissioner Leo Roy said in a statement.

"It is important that we enable the forest and plant species to not only regenerate, but to thrive. In doing so, the forest will be able to continue to support all kinds of wildlife, and will remain an excellent place where people far and wide will be able to enjoy and observe nature within the heart of an urban setting."

Judy Jacobs, executive director of the Friends of Blue Hills, said the controlled hunt is needed to keep the number of deer in check.

"Unfortunately, the high deer population is destroying habitat for birds and other animals," she said in the DCR release.

"The deer population needs to be brought down to a healthy level through a controlled hunt for the health of the forest, its inhabitants and visitors."

Officials allowed the first-even controlled deer hunt within the state park during the 2015 shotgun season. Eighty-five hunters participated on the first day, 66 on the second day, 70 on day three and 57 on the final day. Sixty-four deer were killed during the hunt.

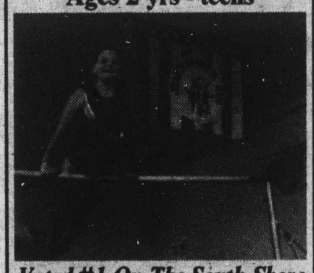

Similar to last year's controlled hunt, only licensed shotgun hunters selected through a random lottery will participate in the controlled hunt. Interested hunters are required to complete and submit an application. Permitted hunters will then be selected from the applicant pool utilizing a random lottery. Licensed hunters who are interested in applying for an opportunity to participate in the Blue Hills Reservation controlled deer hunt can apply directly online or by downloading and submitting a paper application. New this year, hunters may apply to the hunt in pairs.

Selected hunters will then be required to attend a mandatory hunter orientation session to review the guidelines of the deer hunt.

Also new this year, archery hunting will be permitted in designated areas of the reservation. Of the more than 7,000 acres that comprise the Blue Hills, 3,495 acres will be opened to shotgun hunting, while 226 acres will be opened to archery hunting.

A total of 132 hunters – 117 shotgun hunters and 15 archers – will be allowed to take part in each day of the hunt.

The DCR said public access will not be restricted during the deer hunt, and several areas of the reservation will be closed to hunting this year. They include the southwestern half of the Great Blue Hill section (south of Wolcott Path), and the southwestern areas of the Ponkapoag section (including Ponkapoag Golf Course).

are recognized, understood and appreciated," Papile said. "When differences are brought to the forefront, we can embrace them."

Training is being provided by Visions Inc., a non-profit organization that provides workshops and lessons in breaking down ethnic, religious and cultural barriers. The program is being funded by the Quincy Masonic Lodge.

Taglieri said the high schools' staff underwent training on race, classes, gender and religion. Next month, he said the staff will attend the Visions Inc. workshops.

"The biggest goal is to build upon the positive climate at North Quincy and Quincy High schools," he said.

Shaw said last month's presentation by Michael Fowlin and his "You Don't Know Me 'Till You Know Me" program for students at both high schools was instrumental in bringing home the message of tolerance and the acceptance of diversity. As a follow-up to the program, he said students were invited to write what they learned from the presentation.

"One student wrote (asking) how 'to improve the school community in being more welcoming' and another wrote that we should 'love everyone for who they are,'" he said.

School committee member Anne Mahoney said the initiative is perfect for Quincy, since it is so diverse.

"This is what makes Quincy so unique, it's diversity," she said.

Mahoney related a "troubling" incident she witnessed a couple weeks ago when chorale society students holding signs promoting their car wash at the side of a road were "not treated kindly" by passing motorists because "of who they are."

"It was unnerving and upsetting to the core," said Mahoney who added that incidents such as this continues to occur in our society.

She said the diversity initiative would be "immeasurable" to the high school students.

Colleague Emily Lebo said the program would be "a proactive strike" against intolerance.

Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli suggested the program be incorporated into the curriculum and be provided for middle school students in an attempt to head off "bad behavior that can't be undone in high school."

In a related matter, the committee voted to approve a student support services program improvement plan. Papile outlined the program that provides positive behavioral interventions and support for the elementary and middle schools. It includes substance abuse prevention and creates individual plans for at-risk students.

The committee also approved the health services program improvement plan that implements new wellness initiatives based on the Alliance for a Healthier Generation Healthy Schools program. The plan also calls for increasing nursing skills in children's psychiatric issues, crisis management, diabetes and Lyme Disease.

The committee recognized principal Ann Pegg and the staff of the Merrymount School that was named a National Blue Ribbon School for closing the gap in student achievement targets.

Also honored were North Quincy High and Quincy High National Merit Commended Scholars and North Quincy High student Nick Andrade who won a gold medal in the USA National Fencing Competition in Dallas, Texas.

No Courthouse At Center T Station

where there is tremendous interest."

State officials had initially approached the city several years ago about replacing the aging Quincy District Courthouse, Koch said, because it was growing outdated and was too small. Those discussions led to the preliminary concept of including a justice center in the new train station.

The mayor said the state has now backed away from that idea for three reasons: the cool reception Hospital Hill residents had given the proposal, concerns over ensuring a facility over the train tracks would be bomb proof, and a lack of funding.

There is no timeline for the construction of a new station, Koch said. The first step would be the demolition of the existing 870-car garage on site, which the MBTA shuttered without warning in July 2012 because of concerns over its structural integrity.

"The state is trying to find funding to remove the condemned garage," the mayor said. "That will be the first step."

In September, the U.S. Department of Transportation awarded the MBTA a $4.2 million grant for the project. That money will be used to construct a new bus terminal at the station and make other intermodal enhancements. Preliminary plans have the new bus terminal under the garage, with access on the Mayor Thomas E. Burgin Parkway side, instead of off the Hancock Street side where the busway is now.

Koch said the developer for the project would be responsible for constructing the parking garage on site.

Both the City Council and the mayor must approve any project built on the air rights over the MBTA tracks in Quincy, a condition included in state legislation passed in the 1960s as the agency planned the southward expansion of the Red Line.

A 2014 state law set aside $10 million for the new Quincy Center station, and also designated the city as the lead developer for the project; Koch has said no city money would go towards the new facility.

Marina Bay Ferry Service Ends Nov. 11

from Quincy. The Winthrop ferry is set to stop operating for the season on Nov. 11 as winter approaches.

A total of 2,286 boardings were made on trips to and from Quincy through Sept. 30, the most recent figures available.

During the first week of service, Aug. 1-7, 587 passengers traveled to and from Quincy. Between Aug. 8 and 14, there were 420 passengers; Aug. 15-21, 483; Aug. 22-28, 433; Aug. 29-Sept. 5, 363; Sept. 5-11, 179; Sept. 12-18, 269; Sept. 19-25, 271; and from Sept. 26-30, 189.

The ferry was out of service one day during that time period – Aug. 30, a Tuesday – because of mechanical issues.

Geary said the city was happy with the ridership during the pilot program, considering the program was started on short notice and stops in Downtown Boston are limited to Rowes Wharf. She attributed the decrease in ridership seen in September to fewer people taking trips to Spectacle Island as schools got back in session; service to the island is only offered on weekends at this point in the season.

Feedback has been positive, Geary said, though some have asked that more trips be provided to different locations in Boston and better times – such as an 8 a.m. departure from Quincy on weekdays.

Geary said the city is considering its options for ferry service next year, and would like to provide more stops in Boston – at places such as the fast-growing Seaport District – and a better schedule.

"People would like to see more diverse runs and better times," Geary said. "That's our goal for next year.

"Once the winter comes, we'll have our heads down figuring out how to make it a bigger, better opportunity."

Mayor Thomas Koch, during a recent interview, said whether or not Quincy partners with Winthrop next year had yet to be determined.

"Whether we start again with Winthrop in the spring remains to be seen," the mayor said. "There might be a vendor that steps forward and says 'hey, we'd like a shot at it and we could do ten stops a day.'

"My interest is obviously the people of Quincy first – to make sure we're providing them the best times possible for their life."

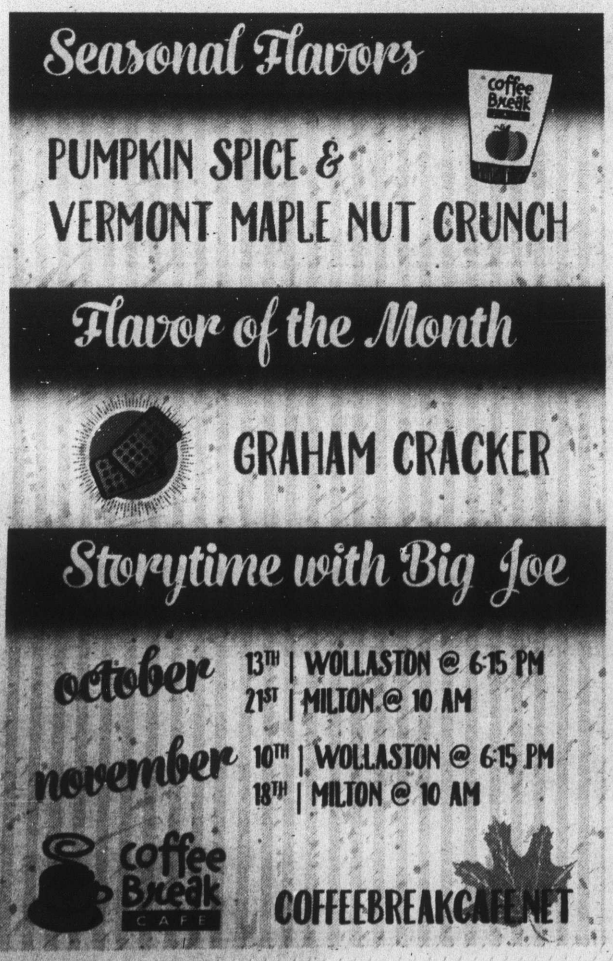

Preferably, Koch would want the ferry service to operate on a year-round basis, which the Valkyrie cannot do because its hull is made of fiberglass.

"I think if you're going to get into a routine with people…then you've got to provide them an opportunity on a regular basis," he said. "It can't be hit or miss."

Koch said he believes the city could operate its own service if it chose to do so, but does not anticipate that happening.

"We have a lot of priorities and competing interests in the city for resources. I think the city could do it – we run a 13-van transportation system out of the Council on Aging – but we're not in the ferry business. I don't know that I want to be in the ferry business," Koch said.

"I think we ought to look at what the options are out there and then we can make a decision. I haven't talked to anybody about doing our own. Our goal is to get a ferry out of there. My expectation is it would be a private vendor."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

THE THIN VENEER OF RESPECTABILITY

If your front teeth are severely discolored, misshapen, chipped, cracked, or otherwise imperfect, you may be interested to know that their appearance can be dramatically improved with the application of "porcelain veneers." These ultra-thin porcelain shells are an excellent alternative to crowns in many situations that require a more conservative approach to changing a tooth's color, size, or shape. A three-step treatment plan, which includes planning, preparing, and bonding the veneers in place, provides results that are unsurpassed in their cosmetic beauty and longevity. Porcelain veneers more closely approximate the look of natural teeth in terms of color, luster, and luminosity than any other material. Their outstanding strength and abrasion resistance ensures that they will last many years.

Whether your teeth are chipped, stained, irregularly shaped, or have other cosmetic flaws, dental veneers may be the answer. We provide modern dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. This form of treatment has quickly become the choice of patients who want to create their dream smile. Whether you need veneers or just a routine cleaning, we invite you to make an appointment with us by calling 617 479-6220. Your positive attitude towards your dental health is the key to successful dental care. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Star Of The Sea Church Demolition Underway

Almost exactly 12 years to the day of its suppression as a parish, Star of the Sea Catholic Church, located at 107 Bellevue Rd. in the Squantum section of Quincy, is now in the process of being demolished. Work began late last week, and nearly half of the roof already gone as of Monday.

The parish itself was formally suppressed on Oct. 24, 2004 by Cardinal Sean O'Malley as part of a massive downsizing of the archdiocese, which shuttered about 60 churches. The Friends of Star of the Sea, a group that fought to save the church, was successful in having O'Malley restore the church as a Catholic chapel for a period of five years from 2005-2010, but O'Malley closed the church again without warning in September 2010 following an unsuccessful appeal to the Vatican, filed by the Friends.

The group was very upset at the time because they said the reopening in 2005 was based on a recommendation from the Meade-Eisner Reconfiguration review committee, established by O'Malley, and it didn't make any sense that he would re-close the church based on any sort of appeal. The Friends were later informed by a letter from the diocese that the re-closing in 2010 was actually based on recommendations from a local pastor and from the regional bishop, but did not specify the basis of those recommendations.

The property was eventually put on the market in June 2013, and finally sold in June 2015 to a Brookline-based developer in a stunning move that had parishioners reeling in disbelief: O'Malley sold the 37,200 square foot area consisting of the church and rectory for $600,000 - just 29% of the assessed value of $2,043,100.

Once the church and rectory are demolished, the developer intends to subdivide the property into four lots and sell those to private property owners.

Ricciuti Drive Medical Marijuana Dispensary Now Open

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's eighth medical marijuana dispensary recently opened on Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy and is now accepting walk-in patients.

Ermont Inc. opened its dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Drive on Oct. 5, one week after state officials gave it final approval to do so.

"We're delighted to be open," said Ermont spokeswoman Donna Rheaume. "We're excited to be serving our patients."

Rheaume said Ermont is now accepting walk-in patients on a first-come, first-serve basis after being open by appointment only for the first several days as the dispensary got up and running. Ermont is open from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Mondays and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. the Tuesdays through Sundays. Additional information on the dispensary is available online at ermontinc.org.

Patients and caregivers must register with the state Department of Public Health in order to purchase medical marijuana. Ermont requires patients and caregivers to present the DPH card and a valid photo ID for each purchase.

Ermont believes there is a strong demand for medical marijuana in the state, especially in Quincy and neighboring communities to the south.

"We know there is certainly a high patient demand, particularly on the South Shore," Rheaume said when asked how many patients they expected to serve.

Ermont is allowed to grow and store marijuana in its 36,000 square foot building. Security on site, Rheaume said, will be stringent.

"We have a state of the art security system," she said. "We are very proud of our facility."

Council Votes 7-1 Opposing Charter School Referendum

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council approved a resolution opposing a referendum on November's ballot that would lift the cap on commonwealth charter schools in the state if approved by voters.

The council voted 7-1 on Oct. 3 in favor of a resolution opposing Question 2. The resolution had been introduced in April by Councillor Ian Cain and Brad Croall.

Question 2 on the Nov. 8 ballot would allow for 12 new commonwealth charter schools each year in the state if approved by voters. Those schools are independent public schools that operate under five-year charters granted by the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

There are currently 78 charter schools in Massachusetts, according to the state, and another two approved but not yet open; 43,548 students attend charter schools, and 32,500 others are on waiting lists.

"I'm a product of public schools," Cain said. "I believe in the public schools. I went to Wollaston School and I went to Central Middle School, and Central Middle School was quite possibly one of the best educations that I've had, and I have gone to graduate school.

"I still look fondly on the teachers that I had and the impact that the public school system has had on me, and now I feel it is incumbent on me to support the system that has given me so much."

Councillor Joseph Finn said the ballot question is not about charter schools themselves, but rather lift-

Port 305 Restaurant and Mix 104.1's Kennedy Elsey recently hosted a Wine Tasting Fundraiser to benefit South Shore Mental Health. The event drew nearly 100 guests and raised more than $6,000 to assist the non-profit agency's financially disadvantaged clients.

"For too many of our clients, struggling to make ends meet is an added burden to recovery," said South Shore Mental Health President and CEO Harry Shulman. "Thanks to the generosity of all here tonight, we can help these deserving folks provide basic necessities for their families while continuing to remain focused on treatment."

Since 1926, South Shore Mental Health has been building Hope and Changing Lives for children born with developmental disabilities, and children, teens, and adults living with mental illness. Today, the agency has more than 700 employees in Quincy, Marshfield, Plymouth, and Wareham, and their early intervention and mental health treatment and recovery programs reach 16,000 people from Boston to Cape Cod annually. O'Donnell Reports Increased Lending in Norfolk County

Third Quarter Real Estate Activity

It was a "split decision" when it came to third quarter real estate data (July-September 2016) in Norfolk County, according to Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell.

In his third quarter real estate activity report released Oct. 7, O'Donnell noted that while real estate sales were flat, the lending market continued to boom thanks to continuing low interest rates.

"Overall, Norfolk County is holding its own in terms of real estate sales. A total of 5,295 property transactions were recorded in the county during the third quarter, representing a one percent reduction from same period in 2015." O'Donnell said. "However, total real estate volume, both residential and commercial, for the quarter came in at $2.9 billion, a 21 percent increase compared to last year's numbers. The average sales price, including both residential and commercial quarter three was $808,198, a solid 25 percent increase year over year. It should be noted the total sales and average sales numbers were impacted by a $205 million sale of Westwood Station that took place in mid-August."

O'Donnell called the lending marking "a real silver lining story."

In his report, the Register said: "The total number of mortgages recorded was 9,717, a solid 21 percent increase from the previous year. In addition, total mortgage financing finished at $4.65 billion for the quarter, a 34 percent increase from last year's third quarter 2015. Clearly, consumers and businessmen are taking advantage of continuing low interest rates to pay for new home purchases, home improvements, education expenses and expansion of business.

"More than anything, these robust lending figures tell us the eastern Massachusetts economy remains vibrant."
